WAR ON ANARCHY.

POLICE WILL GUARD PRIESTS AT ALTARS.

Men Detailed to Chicago Churches to Shoot Possible Assassins.

Archbishop Quigley Decides to Wage Vigorous War Upon Anarchists and Directs Clergy to Hurl Denunciation Against Anti-clericals—Jewish Rabbis Join in the Crusade to Avenge Death of Father Leo.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29. — [Exclusive Dispatch.] Police detectives, detailed by Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler tonight, will be at every Roman Catholic Church in the city tomorrow to guard against assassination. In addition to the police detectives, armed parishioners will be near the altar of every Catholic Church, ready to shoot down any anarchist who lifts a hand against the priest.

Under the direction of Archbishop Quigley, all the priests in the city tomorrow will hurl denunciation of the Italian anarchist and anti-clerical clubs, singling out for special attack the Giordano Bruno Club. This is the organization that has been lauded by the Hearst Chicago papers.

The archbishop has decided to make bitter war upon the anarchists of Chicago. Singularly, the Catholics are joined in their crusade by the Jews. From every Jewish synagogue in Chicago, rabbis will ask for the coöperation of their congregations in the fight started by the Catholics to stamp out anarchism. In his sermon at the K. M.A. Synagogue today, Rabbi Shanfarder declared:

"The blood of the martyr priest of Denver cries aloud for vengeance. This is not a question of Catholicism or Protestantism; it is a question of humanity. Not merely as Jews, but as citizens of a free country, we join the Catholic church in an earnest protest against the spread of the revolutionary spirit on the free soil of America.

MISS ADDAMS SCORED.

Miss Jane Addams, head of the Hull House settlement in Chicago, is criticised in the Catholic Observer today for giving the Anti-Clerical Club an asylum at Hull House. The Catholics assert that the attacks on the priesthood are directed by the Anti-Clerical Club in its meetings at Hull House.

Chancellor Dunne of the Chicago archdiocese said today:

"We are in this fight to exterminate anarchists, and will not stop until it is accomplished. I had a conference with United States District Attorney Sims looking forward to Federal prosecution of certain Italians in Chicago. That is all I can say about it, except to add that the conference was satisfactory."

During the day Rev. Prokopska Neuzil of the Bohemian Benedictine Fathers, West Eighteenth and Allport streets, received a letter threatening him with death unless he paid $1000. The letter was turned over to the police, who believe it the work of a crank.

ACTION AGAINST PAPERS.

Action by the Postmaster-General at Washington against Italian newspapers, which Catholic priests charge with containing anarchistic and vile attacks upon religion, clergy, and the Catholic church in particular, will be sought in an effort to deny the use of the United States mails to such publications.

It is said in Catholic circles that the Hearst papers in this city will also be carefully scrutinized and if, in the future, they print any more anarchist doctrine, they will be proceeded against vigorously.

At a conference between Dist.-Atty. Sims, Asst. Dist.-Atty Shirer and the Rev. E. M. Dunne, chancellor of the Chicago archdiocese, it was decided that copies of the newspapers with translations thereof, together with a history of all anarchist, socialist and anti-clerical agitation be forwarded Washington, so that whatever action taken will be general and applicable to every city in the United States.

In addition to the checking of the anarchists and anti-clericals through the postoffice authorities, a direct attack upon anarchists who are not naturalized citizens of the United States is being considered by the Federal authorities. The immigration department of the government is seeking evidence upon which to institute prosecutions against anarchists for the purpose of sending them back from whence they came, and also to punish those instrumental in getting them to come to America.

It was announced that the prosecutions, if evidence is secured, would be under section 38 of the act of February 20, 1907, regulating immigration.

The Rt. Rev. J. D. Quigley,
Archbishop of Illinois, who is leading the fight on Chicago anarchists.

RENOMINATE HOWLAND.

CLEVELAND (O.) Feb. 29.—Congressman Paul Howland was renominated at the Republican Congressional convention of the Twentieth District held here today. Herman Baer and A. C. Cook were named as delegates to the national convention. Resolutions indorsing the Roosevelt administration and Secretary Taft's candidacy were adopted.

QUICK DEATH.

SON OF J. A GRAVES IS KILLED BY TRAIN.

Automobile Driven by Young Man Strikes Moving Cars and He Is Hurled Between Them—Body Is Frightfully Mangled.

SELWYN GRAVES, son of J. A. Graves, vice-president of the Farmers' and Merchants' National Bank, was killed by a collision of a freight train with an automobile driven by him at 1:45 o'clock this morning.

The young man, whose age was about 26, was driving a Franklin machine and was on his way from Los Angeles to his home in Alhambra.

At the junction of North Main street and Railroad street he saw a train of freight cars northbound moving along Railroad avenue and attempted to stop his machine.

This he failed to do. His machine struck the train and threw the auto over. Young Graves was thrown between the cars and his body was mangled.

His head was cut off, the trunk was crushed and some of the limbs were broken.

A. Vaughn, a Merchants' Fire Dispatch patrolman, was the only person who witnessed the accident. He was within fifty yards of the railroad crossing when Graves dashed by rapidly. Without checking his speed Graves crashed against the freight car and he was hurled from the machine head foremost between two cars. After the train had passed, Vaughn found the body twenty-five feet west of the crossing. It was mangled beyond recognition. He immediately signaled to Conductor Sullivan, who was in charge of the train. Sullivan saw the demolished automobile and the body lying on the track. He stopped the train and the police were notified.

The police secured the number of the automobile and telephoned to the family. A member of the family left for Los Angeles and arrived about an hour after the accident. The body was still lying on the track when he drove up to the crossing where the accident occurred.

L. Smith of No. 622 San Fernando street was about a block away when Graves dashed down Main street. He heard the crash and ran to the crossing.

Where the railroad crosses Main street there is no arc light. A building on the west side of Main throws a shadow across the street and it is difficult to see the cars until within a few feet of the tracks.

Young Graves was the only occupant. He had been visiting in Los Angeles and left a café shortly after 1 o'clock this morning for SMOKERS WIN IN TEST.

Physical Examination Shows Lung Capacity not Affected and Height not Stunted.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. George T. Meylan, physical director of Columbia University, has just completed statistics showing the effect of the use of tobacco and alcoholic beverages upon 687 new students, mostly freshmen, who have entered Columbia in the last two years.

Dr. Meylan has found that the physical condition of the smokers—that is their weight, height, lung capacity, and total strength—is, on the average better than that of the non-smokers. Out of the 687 men examined, 141 used alcoholic beverages, or nearly 26 per cent. of the total number.

The two most significant facts brought out by the tests, according to Dr. Meylan, are that smoking does not affect the lung capacity, as is generally supposed; neither does it seem to have any effect upon the height of the individual.

ASTONISHING.

TAKES RICH JAP FOR HUSBAND.

DOROTHY RUSSELL ASTONISHES HER NEW YORK FRIENDS.

Pretty Young Vaudeville Actress Becomes Bride of Merchant Prince of Japanese Colony in Philadelphia and Will Sail With Him for Tokio.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dorothy Russell the young and pretty daughter of the famous beauty, Lillian Russell, has astonished her friends by marrying a Japanese merchant prince.

Acha Mura is the name of the former Miss Russell's husband and he is said to be one of the wealthiest of the Japanese colony in this country.

Miss Russell was married to Acha Mura in Philadelphia two weeks ago, but the secret was well kept until today when Miss Russell returned to New York for a few hours before taking the boat to Havana.

She was accompanied by Nettie Burns, who goes to Cuba with her. In two weeks her husband will have settled up his business in this country and will join her in Cuba.

They will sail from there for Mexico and, after crossing the isthmus, will continue on to San Francisco from which place they will sail for Japan.

Miss Russell was showing with great pride today a diamond studded ring with engraved Japanese characters, which she declared to be her own name in the language of her husband.

Acha Mura, who has thus endeavored to stir conflict and break down any animosity between this country and Japan by carrying home to his people one of our fairest daughters, has been engaged in importing Japanese wares into this country for several years.

Dorothy Russell was married when only 17, but her first matrimonial experience was not a happy one and she secured a divorce and went on the stage. For several seasons she was on the eastern vaudeville circuit and was a strong drawing card. While not so beautiful as her celebrated mother, Dorothy Russell was regarded as an unusually pretty girl, with more than ordinary stage talent.

Shot Fired at Waiting Lover from Window of Institution, It Is Said, But Fails to Stop Sensational Elopement That Has Stirred Catholic Circles of Iowa.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

COUNCIL BLUFFS (Iowa) Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sister Geneva of the Sisters of Charity, connected with St. Bernard's convent and hospital in this city, has escaped from the institution and yesterday was married in Omaha to O. R. Dye of St. Joseph, Mo. The escapade has caused a great sensation in Catholic circles in Western Iowa, and all sorts of rumors are afloat. The convent authorities are maintaining strict secrecy.

Sister Geneva is only 26 years old, although a nun of ten years' standing. Dye, while working at the institution, fell in love with the sister.

Arrangements had been made through friends for an elopement, and Thursday night, just before midnight, Dye was at the appointed place, under the wall of the convent, when Sister Geneva threw a package of clothes down from her window, and then started down the stairs with her shoes in her hands. A window of the convent is said to have been thrown up and two shots fired at Dye.

The young people went across the river to Omaha, where they got a marriage license, and were married by County Judge Leslie.

BORDER CHARACTER GONE.

PRESIDENT'S FRIEND, PAT GARRETT, KILLE

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LAS CRUCES (N. M.) Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Patrick F. Garrett, warm personal friend of President Roosevelt, Collector of Customs at El Paso, Tex., up to two years ago; known the continent over as the slayer of "Billy the Kid," and one of the most prominent "gun men" of frontier days, was shot and killed near here today by Wayne Brazel.

The killing was the result of a recent quarrel between Garrett and Brazel, who is a youthful rancher, over the use of the public range, a controversy that has caused hundreds of tragedies in the West. Garrett had recently been engaged in raising cattle. Brazel raises goats.

THE KILLING.

Garrett had been on a visit to one of his ranches near the New Mexican town, and, in a buckboard with a friend, was returning to Las Cruces, when they were overtaken by Brazel. A quarrel between the principals followed, and Garrett is said to have reached for a shotgun. Brazel fired twice, both shots taking effect, and Garrett fell dead.

Brazel then rode five miles to Las Cruces, and surrendered to Sheriff Lucero. He was locked in the County Jail, after making a statement to the officer that he had shot in self-defense.

FAMOUS CHARACTER.

Garrett, familiarly known as "Pat" to many persons in the far Southwest, was a captain of Texas Rangers and Sheriff in the early eighties of Lincoln county, New Mexico, throughout the period of the celebrated Lincoln cattle war in which more than seventy-five participants were killed both in open fights and from ambush.

But it was the killing of "Billy the Kid," upon whose head a price of $10,000 had been set, and who boasted that of the twenty-one men he had slain at the time he reached his majority most of them had been "planted for the joy of just seeing them kick," that brought Pat real celebrity in the cattle camps and mines of the border.

In 1881, Pat was summoned to the old adobe palace, as it was called in Santa Fé, that had been the seat of government of the area embraced in the present Territory of New Mexico for nearly three centuries under Spanish and American régimes. Gen. Lew Wallace was then G acres of land near Washington,

NEW YORK TO PARIS.

FOREIGNERS APPEAL FOR FINANCIAL AID.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] While the French car, De Dion, and the Italian car, Zust, got safely out of Chicago this morning, the other French car, Moto-Bloc, and the German car, Protos, tail-enders in the New York to Paris race, despair of ever reaching Chicago.

The crews of the latter two cars have been "bled" to the breaking point, and, in response to an appealing telegram, the Chicago Automobile Club dispatched a messenger with a wad of money to the distressed autoists. The telegram reads:

"Ira M. Cobe, President Chicago Automobile Club: We are discouraged. The peasants demand $3 per mile for helping us. Here at New Carlisle they charged $5 each to permit us to sleep on the ground. Peasants along the way have filled up the road dug by the leading cars, so as to help the Thomas car. They make us hire as many horses as they please, so as to get as much money out of us as they can. We are broke and disgusted. Won't you intervene for our protection? Await responses. Would it be possible to influence public opinion to aid us? Crew of Protos and Moto-Bloc."

Mr. Banta immediately got into telephonic communication with a friend at New Carlisle and learned that the foreigners had been charged as much as $15 for being pulled out of a single drift, or rut. The fact that the autoists cannot speak English makes them special prey for persons they are compelled to employ.

The charges preferred by the De Dion and Zust cars against the Thomas car were made public tonight. Briefly, they declare the Thomas car was rebuilt at Buffalo after the race started, that it had been towed by horses and trolley cars when its motors were not running.

Montague Roberts telephoned from Clarence, Iowa, tonight a sweeping denial of the charges.

a brief colloquy in Italian and then Bossie announced:

"The prisoner pleads not guilty."

Dist.-Atty. George A. Stidger received through the mail today a postal card warning him to be "careful about what you do to that man who shot the Catholic priest in Denver."

In addition, the card bore a tirade of abuse against priests.

The card is signed "True Americans," and under the signature is a hollow square and the word "Moscow."

The card was addressed to Mr. Munger, District Attorney, Denver, but being delivered at the office of Dist.-Atty. Stidger, it was claimed by him.

Mr. Stidger believes that the card was sent by an Italian society of anti-clerical character.

Thousands of curious persons surrounded the jail and crowded closely around the prisoner when he was being taken to and from the Courthouse, but no violence was offered. The assassin trembled slightly but otherwise manifested no fear.

In jail he is kept in solitary confinement. His counsel, Robert H. Widdicombe, has definitely decided to make a plea of insanity and will be assisted in his attempt to establish this plea the Italian Consul, Baron G. Tosti.

CARS SCATTERED OVER THREE STATES.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29.—The five contestants in the New York to Paris race are tonight scattered from Michigan City, Ind to Clarence, Iowa. The latter village is the resting place of the American car, the leader in the contest. Back of it are the Italian car, at Rochelle, Ill.; the French car, No. 1, at De Kalb, Ill., and the German car, at Michigan City, Ind., and the French car, No. 2, at Michigan City.

The army car arrived at Boone, Iowa, at 7:50 this evening, and will reach Carroll about midnight.

ing steamer, the vessels probably will not be heard from again until they approach Magdalena Bay.

The fleet left Hampton Roads December 16, and made its first stop in South America at Trinidad, December 23. Five days' sailing from Callao will bring Panama abeam, and the vessels will then be practically clear of South America. Counting the long stops made at Trinidad, Rio, Punta Arenas and Callao, they have made the circuit of South America in approximately seventy-three days.

MAGDALENA BAY IS ASSUMING IMPORTANCE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Magdalena Bay, Mexico, where the battleship fleet will engage in target practice, will be made a port of entry by the Mexican government in commemoration of the visit of the fleet. Consul-General A. L. M. Gottschalk has sent a report to the State Department which says:

"The Mexican government, in view of the decided movement which is taking place commercially toward Magdalena Bay, because of the expected coming of the American battleship fleet to that point and its stay there at target practice, decides to make of the bay for an indefinite period a regular Mexican port of entry."

After February 15 Magdalena Bay will be a Mexican port of entry under the charge of a skilled and experienced Mexican customhouse officer especially selected by the Mexican Treasury Department for that service. His title will be administrator of the Magdalena Bay customhouse, and he will be accompanied by a specially selected staff which will include a competent official speaking the English language fluently.

BIG FLEET MAY VISIT SAN FRANCISCO FIRST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Representative Smith today conferred with Secretary Metcalf to ascertain whether the Atlantic fleet will first visit San Francisco or the port of Los Angeles. He was informed that no decision has yet been reached, but that it was entirely possible that the fleet would have to proceed to San Francisco first from Magdalena Bay for coaling. In that case, it would have to visit the southern ports later.

Mr. Smith said today that if Los Angeles and San Diego desire to be the first Pacific Coasts hosts of the fleet they must immediately bring all possible influence to bear to accomplish their desires.

The fleet will probably reach Magdalena Bay March 15. The officials of the Marine Hospital Service say that they have very favorable reports from San Francisco regarding the plague, and that it is now believed the health conditions there will not interfere with the visiting of the fleet to the Pacific Coast. They are awaiting a full report from Dr. Blue.

College President Says He Was His Partner.

Dr. Levingston Admitted Relation to Oil King.

Practiced Healing Illegally and Had to Move.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Dr. Charles H. Johnson, president of the College of Medicine and Surgery in Chicago, has settled conclusively, it would seem, that the late Dr. William Levingston of Freeport, Ill., was in reality Dr. William Avery Rockefeller, father of John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil billionaire.

Dr. Johnson was for twelve years Dr. Levingston's assistant and business partner. He declared that he had revealed the secret, which he had kept locked in his breast all these years, to deny the published statement that he and Dr. Levingston sold medicine on the street.

"When I was a baby in 1853," said Dr. Johnson, "Dr. Rockefeller cured my mother of a serious affliction. He was known then as Dr. Levinson. He had never studied medicine at any college. But he was a natural healer and was possessed of great skill. He had to be constantly on the move because he had no diploma, and wherever he stayed any length of time, the regular physicians got the officers of the law after him.

JOINED FORCES.

"I met Dr. Levingston after I had grown to manhood in Wisconsin. I was suffering from fever. He cured me. He induced me to go along with him and assist him in his practice. He made me pay him $1000 for the instructions in the art of healing he gave me.

"Dr. Rockefeller and I traveled all over the West, through Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas. It is not true that he sold medicine on the street. He had a fine team of horses, the best money could buy, and drove from town to town.

"I knew from the first there was some deep mystery in his life. But it was several years before I suspected he was John D. Rockefeller's father, and several years more until he acknowledged his identity to me.

SECRET DISCOVERED.

"I first learned definitely that he was Dr. Rockefeller after he had been injured on a ranch in North Dakota and thought he was about to die. We had been building a shed for a cattle shelter, and in lifting a heavy log, he strained himself. I asked him if I should send for Mrs. Levingston if he should die. He said: 'No; notify John D. Rockefeller, but be careful to let no one else know anything about it.'

"When he got well, I accused him of being John D. Rockefeller's father. At first he denied it, but later admitted it. He said that the reason he had changed his name was because he was practicing medicine without a license and might be arrested at any time. He said he did not want to disgrace his family. He stuck to the name of Levingston later, he said, because he had borne it too long to change it honorably."

Dr. Johnson told many anecdotes of John D. Rockefeller's youth which the father of the magnate had narrated to him.

Three Killed and One Mortally Wounded in Pistol Battle After Family Squabble.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

EVELYN (Ky.) Feb. 29.—Three men were killed and a fourth mortally wounded in a battle with revolvers following a quarrel in the lumber camp of Congleton & Williams Bros., on Rose Creek, near here, yesterday.

John Hamilton, James Bowles, Richard Spicer, and George Frazier had been working together with seventy other men hauling lumber and staves. The children of Bowles and Frazier had fallen out with those of Spicer and Hamilton. The men quarreled over the matter as they worked.

Finally Bowles whipped out a revolver and began firing. He killed Hamilton and shot Spicer in the leg. By this time Spicer had drawn his revolver and was firing at Bowles, when Frazier joined in the shooting. When the smoke cleared away, it was found that Spicer and Bowles had been killed.

Frazier was shot through the lower bowels and will die.

KENTWOOD (La.) Feb. 29.—Kentwood is today under guard of State troops, who quietly took possession last night to prevent threatened violence against aliens.

Within the last two days self-styled igilantes have warned scores of Italans to leave town by the end of this eek if they did not wish to be blown p with dynamite. Frightened Italans yesterday left so rapidly that the talian population of 200 was reduced about half.

The main complaint against these oreigners was that they had accepted ithout protest a cut in wages from 1.75 to $1.25 per day in the lumber ills where most of them work.

fixed by estimating but two-fifths of their full capacity of coal, which allows the speed trial to show the greatest speed possible.

"I think," he added, "rarely have any of our ships in service shown the speed they have developed on their trial trips. Foreign ships have the same weakness in this respect, but foreign constructors are correcting the error."

"I want enough coal on board to chase the enemy after fighting him," declared Mr. Hill, saying the battleships should have all the coal possible with the waterline fixed with a view of accommodating it.

"The new ships of our navy," he said, "if provided with a full load of coal, will have seven feet and six inches of armor below the waterline and six inches above it."

Rear-Admiral Capps interrupted with a question, which was followed by a statement by him contradictory to much that Mr. Hill had said. He declared that the practice of English, Japanese and American constructors had been the same, certainly for the past ten years regarding waterline and coal carried. If there was any difference, he said, the Japanese provided for less coal. The tendency in the American navy had been to provide as large bunkers as possible.

SENATORS SARCASTIC.

Capt. Fiske testified that he had had little experience that qualified him to comment on the question of the proper water line and turrets.

"Yet, you might be put in command of a ship," asked Senator Tillman.

Later, Mr. Tillman remarked that the witness had never been in a battle, to which Capt. Fiske replied that he had overlooked the battle of Manila.

"Oh, that was a murder," said Mr. Tillman.

"It did not look that way before it began," suggested the witness.

Reading from an article written by Capt. Fiske to the effect that no improvement in the navy had ever been originated by a naval officer, Mr. Tillman asked if he held to the statement.

Mr. Fiske deliberated for a long time. "I do not know of any instance in which they have done so," he finally replied.

Senator Perkins said Capt. Fiske's paper reminded him of the Bible. It was a very fine literary production, but nothing could be proved by it. He added that, as Congress appropriates $100,000 annually for experimental tests, he was surprised they had not resulted in some inventive idea.

"But," insisted Senator Tillman, "if we find outside talent and cannot recognize it, what can be expected."

Admiral Capps remarked that there seemed to be a woeful lack of knowledge among officers of the navy concerning what had been done to develop improvements in the navy.

Capt. Fiske said he could suggest no improvements to remedy the difficulties that had been pointed out.

It was agreed that Mr. Sims should appear before the committee on Monday.

Two of Admiral Sebree's Cruisers to Go to Magdalena Bay—Will Touch at San Diego.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 29.—The scout cruisers Washington and Tennessee, of Rear-Admiral Sebree's command, sailed late this afternoon for Magdalena Bay. It is expected that they will remain in southern waters until March 29.

They are expected to stop at San Diego on their way to the Mexican port.

MARE ISLAND IS BUSY.

Stores and Supplies for Many Vessels in Pacific Waters Assembled and Issued There.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MARE ISLAND NAVY YARD, Feb. 29.—The presence of large cruisers on the Coast has materially increased the work at Mare Island yard, from which all stores and provision are being issued. Owing to the orders for the Washington and Tennessee to sail south today, all requisitions for these ships have been filled under rush orders.

Over 120,000 pounds of stores have been delivered to the Washington, comprising provisions, clothing and ship stores. The Tennessee received 160,000 pounds of stores, which were sent to the lower bay by yard tugs.

The Colorado and Pennsylvania are also drawing stores from Mare Island, fifty tons having just been forwarded to Bremerton for them.

Stores and provisions for the big fleet of Rear-Admiral Evans are now being assembled here. During the stay of the fleet in these waters, the storekeepers' department will have the busiest time in its history, as the Asiatic fleet also draws stores from Mare Island. The navy yard magazine has just shipped 2000 pounds of smokeless powder to the Indian Head training station for testing purposes.

BARS SUBIG BAY.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—That Olongapo, on Subig Bay, in the Philippines, is not to be hereafter considered in any estimate or plans or allotments under consideration by the navy bureau is indicated by the revocation of a formal order which instructed that preference be given to that place as a naval project.

This order was issued some time ago, when Olongapo was regarded as an indispensable site for a naval war base and dockyard in the Far East. Recently the joint board of the army and navy decided that the naval base for the East shall be at Cavite instead of at Subig Bay.

Herman Ridder Tells Attorney-General of Law Violation and Calls on President.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 29.—Herman Ridder, president of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, and editor of the Staats Zeitung of New York, called upon President Roosevelt and Attorney-General Bonaparte today in connection with the fight of his association upon the white paper trust.

Mr. Ridder laid before Attorney-General Bonaparte, at the Department of Justice, evidence to show that the paper trust is violating the Sherman anti-trust law. At the White House, Mr. Ridder took up the question of urging Congress to repeal the duty on white paper and wood pulp from which the paper is made.

Some months ago the President told a committee he favored a repeal of the duty, but whether he will call the attention of Congress to the subject in a special message is not definitely known. Mr. Ridder said he could not talk about what the President had said.

California Supreme Court Renders Important Decision in Complicated Santa Ana River Controversy.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 29.—The Supreme Court today handed down a decision in the case of the Anaheim Water Company, et al., vs. Theodore Ashcroft, Antonio Ayros, et al. The judgment and the order as to the defendants are affirmed, with costs.

That Ayros was entitled to use the water of the Durkee ditch is not shown by the evidence and the order denying the appellate order for a new trial is reversed, as is also the judgment in their favor.

The case is a peculiar one and complicated. The defendants diverted water from the Santa Ana River in Riverside county, through ditches over their lands. Some of the partners sold out to the plaintiffs and then a dispute began as to how much water each was entitled to. The suit followed through the several courts.

HURRAH!

VALLEY TRIP FULL OF JOY.

Imperial Country Greatly Pleases Visitors.

Journey Full of Surprises for Sightseers.

More Excursions to Be Run from Los Angeles.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

IMPERIAL, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Two days, replete with sightseeing that has astonished conservative business men, days full of surprises as to the wonderful fertility of the Imperial Valley and the progress made in substantial development here, have been passed by the one hundred and fifty excursionists from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. Tonight they turn homeward, carrying with them an enthusiasm for this great project that cannot but be of much good to this region. This visit of representative business men is certain also to redound to the benefit of trade between Los Angeles and all the towns of the valley.

This is the forerunner of other excursions of the Chamber. Secretary Frank Wiggins announced tonight that he will begin immediately upon his return to Los Angeles to arrange for a second excursion and that this will be followed with others, all planned to make Los Angeles business men personally familiar with the great inland empire, whose development is unfolding so rapidly.

SPREAD OF TILLERS.

Attention of the visitors was called to the claim that in Imperial Valley at the present time there is under cultivation about 175,000 acres, which total compares favorably with that of other counties of Southern California, and that within one or two years at least one half of all the irrigated land of the southern third of California will be in Imperial county, and even then there will be remaining at least 125,000 acres to be brought under cultivation.

Last night there was a rousing reception to the visitors given at the operahouse in El Centro. Citizens and visitors exchanged bouquets, figuratively, and at the close of the programme an immense bouquet of real fragrant flowers, grown at El Centro, was presented by the local W.C.T.U. to President George H. Stewart of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, as as evidence of the good will of the women of the valley to the visitors. The stage of the operahouse was banked with cotton grown in the valley and there were many happy hits in the numerous placards displayed.

OVER THE BORDER.

Early this morning the excursion train moved down to Calexico and from thence made the interesting trip down into Old Mexico to the present terminus of the Inter-California Railroad, the line which within a few months will connect Imperial Valley with Yuma and the Southern Pacific main line at that point. Much interest was expressed in the development of the immense ranch of the California-Mexico Land and Cattle Company, and a section of the excursionists was taken by teams from Packard station through the ranch and thence back to Calexico, while the others returned by train.

At Calexico teams were provided by the local Chamber of Commerce, and the entire party was taken on a visit to several of the principal ranches, making the highly-developed ranch of Fritz Klokke, midway between Calexico and Heber, their objective point. Here the special train overtook the visitors, and they were hurried to El Centro, where an Imperial Valley turkey dinner was served by the ladies of that town.

This afternoon the excursionists were taken over the Holton Interurban Railroad to Holtville, through the courtesy of W. F. Holt, who has been termed by members of the party "The Huntington of Imperial Valley." At Holtville refreshments were served by the ladies of the Christian Church, and teams were provided by citizens to drive the visitors to some of the famous hog and alfalfa ranches of this vicinity.

The power plant of Holton Power Company, which supplies electric light and power for every town in Imperial Valley, was inspected. Many thrifty green trees, alfalfa-covered town lots, a rush of buildings and a general line of business activity impressed the Los Angeles visitors with the importance of Holtville, and predictions were freely made as to its future commercial importance.

IMPERIAL RECEPTION.

The last sojourn of this company of "boosters" was made tonight at Imperial. Here a reception was tendered by citizens, and there was a love feast of mutual admiration until 10 o'clock, when the visitors departed for the Angel town. Handsome, illustrated souvenirs of Imperial, the oldest and largest town of Imperial Valley, were given to each member of the excursion party. This included photographs of groups of visitors and street scenes here. Besides local speakers there were addresses by President George H. Stewart of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce; James H. Slauson, vice-president; C. W. Fleming and Prof. J. A. Foshay.

FOREIGN BUSINESS.

ENGLAND'S GOLD IS LARGELY INCREASED.

Nearly Eight Million Pounds Gained During Past Two Months—Trade Conditions not Altogether Satisfactory in France and Germany.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ONDON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Further gain of nearly a million sterling in the Bank of ngland's gold this week, making nearly 8,000,000 gain thus far in 1908, and e continued increase in holdings by her European banks have come about a natural way.

Of the inflow of gold to the market recent weeks, £2,000,000 came from her countries, chiefly South Africa d Egypt, and £600,000 from home culation, drawn into the bank rough the ingathering of revenue. e German banks' £14,000,000 gain nce the opening of the year has been tained chiefly through the release of rrency from slackening trade.

Despite these increasing reserves, the ropean monetary outlook is not exaordinarily bright. London's bank te may go down to 2½ per cent. next ursday, but it must be remembered at England seldom gets much gold ter March, while Russia is again acmulating gold. Within two months ur to five millions in gold probably ll be dispatched to St. Petersburg, d London must repay France £1,500,-[illegible] the end of May.

t is too early to make out with cernty the prospects for or against a olonged trade setback in Europe. glish railway traffic, however, is fallg steadily, and there are important dustrial troubles in France. Another lication is the great decline in bank profits in Germany through the parpation by the banks in industrial enrprises. Unemployed people also are reasing in number in steel and shipilding districts. Nevertheless, there many who still expect that trade n will revive.

One factor in the situation is the profound distrust with which the security market seems to be regarded. It is believed the bankers must be retaining control of large sums which ordinarily would be going into the stock market. This is true, especially, in France, where stock exchange movements always are originated by bankers and large financiers. Such a rise at this time is absolutely discouraged, bankers finding more profitable use for their funds in lending for short periods elsewhere.

Revival of confidence on the part of the French public would mean great withdrawals of these funds from banks, but for the near future financiers see clearly only the prospect of more profitable employment of money in loan flotation.

It is believed that the banking troubles in Denmark are over, but there are ugly commercial developments in connection with Chile, and important developments affecting credit there, favorably or otherwise, are expected next week.

NO CRISIS IN JAPAN.

Current rumors of a financial crisis in Japan are exaggerated. The actual facts are confined to the failure of a few speculative operators in metals. In the longer view, however, Japanese finance occasions much anxiety, especially in view of the country's adverse trade balance. Last year the excess of imports over exports was 62,000,000 yen against an excess of exports of 5,000,000 yen the previous year. As for the English market it is impossible to exaggerate the distrust of home securities aroused by the policy of the government. Nothing perhaps would better describes the condition than to say that even American securities may be favored here in the reaction against our own.

SEASON OPENS.

NDIA'S SOCIAL WHIRL BEGINS.

LITTERING CEREMONY MARKS THE OPENING.

Brightest Event of the Year, State Ball, Is Given, With the te Lancers, a Solemn and Spectacular Ceremony as the Initial mber on the Programme.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ALCUTTA (India) Feb. 29.—[Exive Dispatch.] Lord Kitchener, mander-in-chief of the British s in India, carried his point and t permission from the Indian govnment to punish marauding Afridis, o have again become troublesome on northern frontier.

But while he has been occupied with is sharp military campaign, he has so displayed gallantry in the social mpaign, which is now fully under y.

e state ball is always the brightest ent of the season, from a spectacular int of view. This year the ball was ened with the State Lancers, a soln and glittering ceremony, carried t with dignified assurance and a aceful air of unconsciousness and atched with esthetic satisfaction by ose who were not admitted to the armed circle.

The dancers were Lady Minto with rd Kitchener as her partner, Vicey Minto with Lady Frazer, Sir Ald Gaselee, Sir Francis and Lady acLean, Sir Harvey and Lady Adamn, Lady Louise Loder, the Maharah of Cooch Behar, Mr. and Mrs. ric Richards, Mrs. Baker (the wife the eminent civilian, who, according rumor, will be our next Lieutenantovernor,) Mrs. Rampini (the wife of distinguished judge of the high urt,) and Mr. Miller.

SPRING FASHIONS APPEAR.

arisian Beau Monde Makes First Display of the Season at the Auteuil Races.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Feb. 28.—[Exclusive Distch.] The budding spring fashions, ndismayed by the frost in the air, ade their first appearance at the Auuil races in magnificent color. The athered tribe as represented (and isrepresented) on the hats of the laes of the beau monde would have en identified only by an expert.

Princess Murat, with her cloth cosme of prune color, affected a voluminous mantle of dark gray, cut in Engh style, and a charming hat trimmed green and prune-colored feathers.

Mrs. George Munroe's costume of deep ue cloth was enhanced by a vest of ter, and her sable toque was caught ith a huge aigrette.

Mrs. Frank Gardner's huge hat of ack crinoline had a panache of wavg plumes that gave her the air of a mmanding officer. The gown in dark oth was heavily braided.

Another effective frock, decorated in e same way, was the blue cloth suit Countess Durfot, with which an open cket, with long sky-blue satin gilet, e worn. A boa of white fox with a e knot of white satin and muff of ame fur were in odd contrast to h-crowned hat of bronze straw, h a bunch of violets, prune, een [illegible] claret plumes.

riends of Constitutional Government in Russia Find Much Hope in Czar's Audience to Duma.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 2[illegible].—[Exclusive Disatch.] Friends of the constitutional ause in Russia have been encouraged y the outcome of the audience granted y Nicholas to members of the Duma.

Although the Constitutional Demorats and the members of the reform ections were conspicuous by their absence from Tsarskoe-Selo, the reception is regarded as a long step toward onditions under which the Emperor nd Parliament will coöperate with more smoothness than hitherto has een possible.

ENGLISH POLITICS.

FOREIGN POLICY QUITE EXPLICIT.

BRITAIN'S ATTITUDE ON TWO QUESTIONS PLAIN.

Sir Edward Grey "Strikes a Palmerstonian Note," Says a Unionist Paper, by His Declarations Regarding Macedonia and the Congo. Europe Is Profoundly Impressed.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Great Britain's foreign policy has been defined anew with great explicitness so far as two important questions are concerned.

Sir Edward Grey, charged often by his opponents with showing too much courtesy and indulgence in handling affairs appertaining to his portfolio, has thrust all such criticism into the background by his bold declarations regarding Macedonia and the Congo. "Grey strikes a Palmerstonian note," says a Unionist paper, which had been urging him to do so, "and there is nothing more timely nowadays.

Macedonia causes the graver issue, though the mere annexation of the Congo territory by Belgium cannot remove the latter controversy from the zone of danger. The Congo is a plague spot in Africa, and were Brussels to fail to create the reforms for which civilization clamors there is no doubt that England would lay a strong hand upon the whole region of Leopold's African iniquity. It is by no means clear even now that the territory will not fall under British dominion ultimately.

Grey's plea for the maintenance of the European concert as the only safe method of settling the Macedonian trouble has impressed Europe profoundly.

JAPAN DETERMINED.

Will Demand Both an Apology and Indemnity from China for Seizing the Tatsu Maru.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TOKIO, Feb. 29.—The Japanese government is maintaining a determined attitude concerning the seizure of the Tatsu Maru, and demands both an apology and an indemnity from China.

The Chinese foreign office wants to submit the entire question to a mixed court. This is refused by the Japanese government, unless the vessel has first been released and an apology made for an insult to the flag.

It appears the Tatsu was regularly cleared from Kobe with a consignment of arms and ammunition for Macao. The Portuguese Minister at Peking supports the contention of Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese Foreign Minister, that the vessel was seized within Portuguese waters.

It is believed here among officials that the Chinese will finally yield to the demands of Japan. It is said by the Japanese foreign office that no ultimation has been issued, and that the sailing of the Japanese cruiser Idzumi for Hongkong is not intended as a threat. It is quite evident, however, that the Japanese will resort to force unless their demands are conceded within a reasonable time.

SUES FOR DIVORCE.

Henry Addison Alexander Institutes Proceedings Against His Wife, Naming Two Co-respondents.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Feb. 28.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Henry Addision Alexander has evidently determined not to wait for and forgive his runaway wife, the daughter of Gen. Torrence. He has entered suit for absolute divorce at Toulon, his French domicile. Only two corespondents are named—one Blakistone, the English solicitor with whom Mrs. Alexander fled to London, and the other John Aspinwall Hodge of New York, the lawyer who, in 1902, brought suit against the steel trust.

Alexander has turned into his lawyer's hands a number of letters written by Hodge to Mrs. Alexander before her elopement. They were found in her bedroom. Alexander was shocked by this discovery, as Hodge was a boyhood friend. For weeks after his wife's flight, Hodge's passionate letters continued to arrive at Alexander's home at Hyeres.

Mrs. Alexander will be served with a notice of the divorce suit tomorrow in London.

ROYAL CROWN DISCOVERED.

Excavators at Thebes Find Tomb and Jewelry of Queen Tausert.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] No less a jewel than the crown of one of old Egypt's Queens has been discovered by the newest excavations at Thebes. In a tomb was revealed the royal jewels of Queen Tausert, wife of Seti II, who was grandson of Rameses II.

Besides the crown were many other ornaments of solid gold and weighty. There were several gold finger rings, three set with scarabs containing the Queen's name, while two were double rings supporting the royal cartouches. One was a very beautiful ring of four strands of gold wire set with precious stones.

A gold circlet and many gold bracelets and earrings were discovered, as were smaller gold ornaments and figures of flowers and hundreds of open work gold balls and poppy heads strung on threads, formerly ornaments for a woman's breast. The tomb also contained a curious pair of silver gloves for a mummy's hands.

OPEN DOOR.

DISTRUST JAPS IN FAR EAST.

BRITISH COMMERCIAL CIRCLES WATCH THE MIKADO.

Cause of Suspicion Is Numerous Complaints in Recent Months Regarding Obstruction of Foreign Trade on Part of Sons of Nippon in Ports of Manchuria and China.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

SHANGHAI, Feb. 29.—There is a growing distrust in British commercial circles on the Chinese coast of the entire policy of the Japanese government in the Far East, and of recent months there has been a succession of complaints regarding the obstruction of foreign trade in Manchuria.

This particularly affects the British steamship companies, and officials of these lines say that obstacles are placed in the way of their steamers going to Port Dalny. The opposition of Japan to the extension northward of the Hsin Min Tun Railroad also is adversely criticised here, it being contended that her sole object in this regard is to eliminate any possibility of opposition to her lines in Manchuria.

Great Britain is now negotiating at Tokio on the question of trade-marks, and in this connection, one of the critics of Japan says:

"It is difficult to convince Japan that no satisfactory solution can be arrived at under the existing laws, which are at variance with the commercial morality of civilized nations."

It is considered essential in English circles here that England should press new trade-mark laws upon Japan.

WANTS RUSSIAN CONTROL.

Foreign Office Counsellor Urges Alliance With Great Britain in Macedonian Affair.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 29.—The Novoe Vremya prints an article by Prof. Pilenko, counsellor of the Foreign Office, who frequently in the past has foreshadowed official action. The article urges that Russia join Great Britain in measures to force the appointment of a Christian Governor-General in Macedonia, and at the same time to nullify the Muersteg agreement, which, it says, serves Teutonic interests.

According to Prof. Pilenko, Macedonia will be dominated either by the Germans or the Slavs, and in order to counteract its Germanization, Russia should win the confidence of Europe by renouncing her attempts to Russify the Balkans, and henceforth devote her influence disinterestedly to the interests of the smaller Slav States.

Prof. Pilenko is of the opinion that Russia will be called to take sides with Great Britain in the irrepressible Anglo-German conflict which is the mainspring of current in European politics.

RIOTING IN CARTAGENA.

Gendarmes Find It Necessary to Charge Striking Shop-keepers—Several Wounded.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CARTAGENA (Spain) Feb. 29.—There was rioting in this city today as an outcome of the strike of local shopkeepers who are protesting against the elevation of the octroi duties.

Gendarmes summoned to disperse the crowd found it necessary to charge. Several of the demonstrants were wounded.

ROMANTIC.

MARRIES A DANCING-GIRL.

Indian Potentate Turns the Smart Set Down.

Takes for His Wife a Poor Spanish Girl.

Her Parents Made a Living by Selling Chestnuts.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

PARIS, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The marriage in India of the immensely rich and powerful Maharajah of Kapurthala and Anita Delago reveals a remarkable romance.

The young woman, who is now a Sultana, was born in Malaga, Spain, in the direst poverty. Her parents made the scantiest kind of a living by keeping a hot chestnut stand in the streets.

While they were still little tots, Anita and her sister, Victoria, learned to dance to the music of barrel organs of strolling players. When Anita was 12 years old, her family moved to Madrid.

One night in a third-class restaurant the sisters danced on a table, with such exquisite grace and dash, that the proprietor engaged them. Soon they made the restaurant famous. They had many admirers, and better engagements followed.

The Maharajah went to Madrid to attend the wedding of King Alfonso, and in sightseeing trips about the city saw the dancers, and fell in love with Anita. He showered presents upon her, and offered to take the dancing girl to India.

He went to Anita's father to make arrangements for the betrothal. Not understanding the position of a sultana, the father of the girl became furious, and threatened to kill the Maharajah unless he promised to marry Anita. This arranged, Papa Delegado received $30,000.

Anita was brought to Paris for educational purposes, and then taken to India, where the marriage ceremony has just been performed with magnificent oriental pomp.

The news of the Maharajah's marriage to a mere Spanish dancer comes as something of a shock. He had been patronized by the handsomest, the most fashionable and supposedly the most fascinating women of French, English and American society, who believed they had raised the Indian potentates conception of what a Caucasian woman should be to a high ruler. They naturally thought that if he were going to choose a European wife that he would select one from the "Smart Set."

The Maharajah's entertainments at the Les Puteau and Ritz in Paris and at the Carlton and Ranelagh in London were marked by true oriental magnificence. He has vast wealth, and soon learned the elementary social fact that in most centers of civilization a man is appraised strictly in the "best circles" by the amount of money he is prepared to spend on his "friends."

Now he is lost to the class that lives to be fed and otherwise provided for by rich people, and although they had no objection to associating with an Indian Rajah with an entirely different notion of civilization from theirs, regarding women as mere chattels, they could not think of meeting an ex-dancer of the fandango, Spaiard and Christian though she be.

Her sister, Victoria, is said to have married an American millionaire, but the Maharajah has decidedly got the pick of the two, whether as a beauty or as a dancer.

JAPS AND YAQUIS FIGHT.

Have Desperate Battle in Which the Yaquis Are Routed, but Three Japs Are Killed.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 29.—A dispatch from Guaymas tells of a fight in which twenty Japanese employed on the property of Luis A. Martines successfully withstood the attack of a superior band of Yaqui Indians yesterday.

After a desperate battle, in which three Japanese were killed, the Indians were forced to retire.

ANOTHER BOMB EXPLODES.

Three Laborers Are Killed by the Explosion of One in a Side Street in Teheran.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

TEHERAN, Feb. 29.—A bomb exploded in a side street of this city at an early hour this morning and killed two laborers.

The occurrence created some local excitement but there was nothing to show any connection with the attempt made yesterday afternoon on the life of the Shah, when unknown parties hurled two bombs at the automobile in which he was supposed to have been riding through the streets.

A deputation from Parliament proceeded to the palace this morning and congratulated the Shah on his escape from death. Tonight the city will be illuminated as a sign of rejoicing.

FRENCH ADVANCE.

Move Against Moorish Tribesmen Without Waiting for Arrival of Reinforcements.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CASA BLANCA (Morocco) Feb. 29.—Without awaiting the arrival of reinforcements which are on their way to assist in his operations against the Moroccan tribesmen, Gen. D'Amade, commanding the French forces, has assumed the offensive against the natives in the Chouia Region.

Several columns of French troops marched against the Madaghra tribesmen near Fidallah, who fought the French a series of combats between February 16 and 18, when four French soldiers were killed and twenty-seven wounded.

BRYAN TALKS TO LEGISLATURE.

NEBRASKAN STICKS TO CHARGE OF USE OF MONEY.

Declares the Trusts and Railroads Are Going to Great Expense to Prevent His Nomination for the Presidency at the Democratic National Convention.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

JACKSON (Miss.) Feb. 29.—William J. Bryan arrived here today from Memphis, accompanied by several members of the legislative Reception Committee, to deliver an address before a joint session of the Legislature. Hundreds of prominent Democrats are here from all parts of the State to pay their respects to Mr. Bryan. Mr. Bryan was asked concerning a paragraph in the current issue of the Commoner, reading as follows:

"Watch the personnel of the delegations to Denver. Money is being used in some of the States of the Mississippi Valley to secure delegations who will be obedient to the predatory interests. The Democratic masses must not be delayed by representatives of that system."

When asked concerning the evidence in support of this charge of bribery, Mr. Bryan said:

"I wrote that paragraph myself, and know what I am talking about. I have my information from a man who overheard a conversation on the subject."

When asked what interests are behind the movement, Mr. Bryan replied:

"I am convinced that it is the interests representing the trusts and the railroads. They don't hope to prevent instructed delegations in the Mississippi Valley States, but they are trying to get a personnel of delegates who will be unfriendly to my nomination."

Mr. Bryan, in his address, made caustic reference to the four Democrats in the Kentucky Legislature who cast their votes for the Republican Senator yesterday. He referred to them as "embezzlers of power," and declared that the embezzler of power is a worse malefactor than the man who embezzles money.

At the conclusion of the address, a resolution indorsing Mr. Bryan as the Democratic candidate, was adopted by a rising vote, all the men, women and children in the theater rising to their feet and applauding the Nebraskan.

CARLOS WAS A BANKRUPT.

Purse Was Stripped by Expenses of Royalty.

His Private Life Was Simple and Methodical.

Even His Life Insurance Was Hypothecated.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LISBON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King Carlos died practically bankrupt. Even his life insurance was assigned to the Bank of Portugal as security for money he had borrowed.

His total allowance from the state was $400,000 a year, on which he had to support several palaces, maintain them with royal splendor, and entertain visiting monarchs on a scale befitting his rank.

As a result he was always hard pressed for money. To secure the loans he was compelled to make, he took out large amounts of life insurance. He had one policy in the Equitable Life of New York for $100,000. His insurance policies he deposited with those from whom he borrowed. He owed the Bank of Portugal $160,000.

There was practically no money in the royal treasury when King Carlos was assassinated. The next day the government paid the new King one month's "salary" which was due his father.

Friends of the dead King deny that Carlos was recklessly extravagant, and say his private life was simple and methodical. They explain his indebtedness by attributing it to the great cost of the entertainments he was compelled to give, and of the maintenance of his palaces. The royal display forced upon him, they assert, was constantly growing more expensive, and it was impossible to make the civil list appropriation meet the King's needs.

Recently Carlos had tried to take out more life insurance, but he found this practically impossible because of the excessively high premium demanded. His exceptional corpulence, and the danger of assassination made him an extra hazardous risk, according to the insurance companies.

PRETTY POLISH EX-DANSEUSE QUITS RUSSIAN SPOUSE.

Departs from St. Petersburg, With All Her Jewelry and Portable Valuables, and Goes to the Riviera. Czar at One Time Enamored of Her, It Is Said.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The most fashionable women, those of perfect fame and of highest title, bid against each other at the auction sale of Mlle. Mathilda Kshessinskaia's furniture, objects of art and household belongings, a sale just ended.

For Mlle. Mathilda was the famous and accomplished premiere danseuse of the opera—she to whose laughing eyes the capital gilded youth drank toasts; she at whose twinkling toes they laid their hearts, and, more important, their fortunes; she of whom the present Czar was once deeply enamored, it is whispered.

Mademoiselle, a celebrated beauty and a most accomplished dancer, understood that a woman cannot dance through life. So of late years she acknowledges to being 30, alas, and she accepted the attentions of Grand Duke Sergius Michaelovitch, one of the Czar's cousins. The Grand Duke is 40, a bachelor, be it said for him. If the Polish dancer has patriotic vengeance in her soul, her complete conquest of him must have delighted her.

March Weather

The wind, dampness and general uncertainty of March weather make it a month of extreme danger to anyone. Especially so for the run down, overworked, brain-tired men and women who have not kept their blood rich and healthful.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey stimulates and enriches the blood, aids digestion, builds up the nerve tissues, tones up the heart and fortifies the system against disease germs.

A Stimulant for the Old

"Writing for my father, would say that he is now approaching his eighty-second year, but owing to loss of sight is not able to go out much and get his accustomed exercise, which he has had for years. He has never been in the habit of using stimulants in any way, but finding that he required something of the kind, has tried several, and prefers Duffy's Malt Whiskey to any other. He takes a small dose once a day, with an equal quantity of water, as the strength is sufficient, and considers that he has been much benefited by its use. As for myself, I never use stimulants of any kind, but heartily approve of your manufacture, as it has been so beneficial to my father."—GEO. E. GOODWIN, (for Geo. I. Goodwin,) Newton, Mass.

Builds Up at 82

"For about two years I have been using your Malt Whiskey, and it has been of great benefit to me. I was all run down and debilitated and nothing seemed to build me up. I read in the Boston Globe about Duffy's Malt Whiskey, and thought it would be just the right thing for me, and have found it so. I am 82 years of age."—WARREN CUTLER. Woburn, Mass.

Cramps Cured

"For 20 years I have been troubled with cramps in my limbs, but I commenced using your Malt Whiskey and have not since been bothered with cramps.

"I have had recently a severe sick spell, with bowel trouble, and your Whiskey again helped me, wonderfully. I am 77 years old."—JOHN H. WOOD, Connersville, Ind.

Does More than Claimed

"I wish to tell you that I have used your Malt Whiskey as a medicine and stimulant and found it all right. It helped me when I had rheumatism, and has almost cured my kidney trouble. I continue to take it with full confidence that I will be much better in the long run."—URIAH RUCH, Burlington, Kan.

A Good Medicine

"I have not used your Malt Whiskey a great deal, but what I have used I found very beneficial. It is a good article and a very good medicine."—J. L. KIRK, Adrian, Mich.

A Medicine Unequalled

"I have used your Malt Whiskey as a medicine and there is none to equal it. I have had the best results from it and can recommend it to anybody."—JOHN STEPHENS, Jeanette, Pa.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure distillation of malted grain; great care being used to have every kernel thoroughly malted, thus destroying the germ and producing a predigested liquid food in the form of a malt essence, which is the most effective tonic stimulant and invigorator known to science; softened by warmth and moisture its palatability and freedom from injurious substances render it so that it can be retained by the most sensitive stomach.

It cures nervousness, typhoid, malaria, every form of stomach trouble, diseases of the throat and lungs, and all run-down and weakened conditions of the body, brain and nerves. It is prescribed by doctors and is recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

CAUTION—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Dr. R. Curran, Consulting Physician, for an illustrated medical booklet and free advice. Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Granite Men of New England and Employees at Outs on Question of Wages.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

BOSTON, Feb. 29.—The granite industry of New England is threatened with a tie-up which may result in the suspension of thousands of granite workers. The adoption of a new schedule of wages to replace that now in effect, and which lapses on March 2, is the point at issue.

The situation at Quincy, Mass.; Barre, Vt.; Concord, N. H., and Westerly, R. I., the four large centers, is almost identical as regards the demand of the unions, which are generally uniform and are apparently centered on a schedule calling for a minimum scale of 41 cents an hour.

The manufacturers seem united on the present scale calling for a minimum of 27½ cents and an average of 40 cents an hour.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ROANOKE (Va.) Feb. 29.—The Norfolk and Western Railroad officials announce the matter of spending $2,000,000 in improvements on the Pocahontas division, which has been under consideration for some time, has been abandoned for the present, owing to the general depression now prevailing.

J. J. Hill Says He'll Build no More Lines at Present in Minnesota Because of Rates.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ROSEAU (Minn.) Feb. 29.—In a letter to R. J. Bell of this city, J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad, says a projected line to Warroad, Minn., a town on the Lake of the Woods, will not be built this year, and that the Great Northern does not care for any additional mileage in Minnesota, because present rates are unprofitable. The letter says, in part:

"At the present time I doubt if there are any stockholders or directors of any of the railroads in Minnesota who desire to hold any additional mileage in Minnesota. The rates which have been established are not profitable on lines where business is reasonably heavy, and certainly would not be on branch lines."

The projected road to Warroad has already been graded, but in all probability will not be railed this year.

SUSPICION EXCITED.

Austria Distrustful of England's Design in the Matter of a Governor for Macedonia.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] England's efforts to secure the nomination of an independent Governor in Macedonia are exciting considerable irritation and suspicion in political circles.

The Austrian Foreign Office is convinced that the proposal is utterly impracticable, and moreover, that it can only be attended by the most perilous consequences in view of the delicate situation in the Balkan States, where there is most combustible material, which is easily ignited.

But Austrian politicians are still more concerned because they suspect that England's proposition means more than appears on the surface, and is really designed to effect a new grouping of the powers.

The Austrian government promises to submit the proposal to critical examination, and then probably will leave it there, confident that other means will be found to defeat it.

MOTHER BELIEVES IN PERUNA.

Mrs. K. Kane, of Chicago, Uses Pe-ru-na in her family of five children, Grace, Myrtle, Edward, Reeves and George.

A HEALTHY FAMILY

Kept the Children Well

Mrs. K. Kane, 196 Sebor St., Flat 1, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Peruna has been used so long in our family that I do not know how I could get along without it.

"I have given it to all of my five children at different times when they suffered with croup, colds and the many ailments that children are subject to, and am pleased to say that it has kept them in splendid health.

"I have also used it for a catarrhal difficulty of long standing, and it cured me in a short time, so I have every reason to praise Peruna."

Pe-ru-na in the Home.

After all, experience is the best teacher. Some doctors may write in favor of Peruna. Other doctors may write against it. But it is the testimony of the mothers and fathers who are raising families, who love their children, who must economize as to doctor bills, who are raising little boys and girls into men and women of the future, it is the testimony of such people that really counts.

There is no way to positively ascertain how many families in the United States rely upon Peruna for the many climatic ailments to which the family is subject. The number must be a great one. Several millions, perhaps. They have learned how to use Peruna for ordinary ailments, and in that way are guarding their homes against more serious diseases.

Such ailments as coughs and colds, sore throat and catarrh, croup and colic, indigestion and loss of appetite, anaemia and nervousness, all these ailments are promptly relieved by a few doses of Peruna at the right time.

Millions of provident mothers and fathers are guarding the interests of the home by using Dr. Hartman's great remedy, and profiting by his medical booklets and personal advice.

Catarrhal Croup.

Few people realize how frequently croup is caused by catarrhal congestion of the throat. Probably nine cases out of ten of croup is of the catarrhal variety.

The medical profession recognizes three forms of croup. The spasmodic variety, membranous croup and catarrhal croup.

Nearly every case is of the catarrhal variety, and a few doses of Peruna taken at the first appearance of the catarrhal symptoms is generally sufficient to avert the attack of croup altogether.

Croup is a frightful disease. No disease of children so alarms the household. It is impossible to estimate how many homes have been protected against croup by the proper use of Peruna.

Household Remedies.

There is no remedy in the world which has proven so popular for catarrh as Peruna. It has been used for more than thirty years and cured thousands of cases, as proven by our testimonials.

In the early history of this country every family had its home-made medicines. Herb teas, bitters, laxatives and tonics were to be found in almost every house, compounded by the housewife, sometimes assisted by the apothecary or the family doctor.

Furnishing medical compounds direct to the people, through the druggists, is simply the extension of the practice begun by the people themselves.

FATHER AND CHILD.
Mr. J. M. Stansberry and Daughter

Catarrh of Stomach

Mr. John M. Stansberry, Amarillo, Tex., writes:

"For several years I had catarrh of the stomach. I wa hardly able to do anything, and could not eat with any satisfac tion.

"When I commenced using Peruna, I weighed only 11 pounds. I took six bottles, commencing in the spring, and b the following winter I had gained 63 pounds.

"I owe it all to Peruna. It cannot be praised too highly.

"I am forty-five years old, and my occupation is that of ar chitect and builder."

NERVOUS SYSTEM A WRECK.

John G. Hirdler, Garfield, Kas., writes: "On December 2, 1899, I was injured by a fall on the Santa Fe R. R., and my entire nervous system was impaired by the same. The help of a physician was useless. I believe I tried every one in the vicinity, but all were alike and I remained without strength.

"I then tried Peruna, and after using it for three months was totally well. I am seventy-one years old, and my work on the railroad is hard and tedious, but I can work like a young man in all kinds of weather, heat, cold, rain, snow or storm alike.

"Peruna is the purest and best medicine, and if used according to directions, it will help any person and cure any disease for which it is recommended. I recommend this medicine by my own experience to any one suffering from an ailment on the order of mine."

FOR HERSELF AND CHILDREN.

Mrs. Aline De Passe, 776 E. 165th New York, N. Y., writes:

"It gives me pleasure to testify to curative qualities of Peruna and Ma lin.

"I was afflicted for over seven ye with catarrh of the head, throat and gestive organs. I consulted many phy cians, but they did me no good.

"One day I happened to read some te timonials in your Peruna almanac. I cided to try Peruna and Manalin. bought a bottle of each, and after tak them for a week, I noticed a change the better. So I kept it up, and af using twelve bottles I was perfectly cur

"I also gave the medicine to my ch dren and they had the same benefic result. I would never be without th remedies in the house.

"I highly recommend Peruna and Ma alin to all my friends, and, in fact, everybody."

Thousands of families have learned trust and believe in Dr. Hartman's jud ment, and to rely on his remedy, Peru

The room where the tragedy took lace was guarded by the police yes- erday. The table by which the couple at and figured out their winnings nd losses at the races had remained ndisturbed when Prosecuting Attor- ey Fleming, Capt. Flammer and de- ectives visited the place yesterday orning. The memorandum on the able showed that McComas and Mrs. oyes had lost about $8120 during the resent track season.

SHREWD BUSINESS WOMAN.

It is alleged by those who knew blooded when it came to a question of making or losing a dollar. That she had invested and lost money in stocks recently and hoped to recuperate by betting on the races was known to friends of McComas.

Detectives think that the couple engaged in a quarrel over the figures, which ended in the desperate fight.

Mrs. Noyes had property in this city and a good income from investments in the East. She had been divorced several years. She came to Los Angeles about six years ago and began to invest money here. Three years later she met McComas at a dance at the Hotel Pepper. The big, gray-haired mining man won her regard almost at sight, and from that time until the hour of the shooting, they had been great companions and friends.

The woman's former husband is a salesman for a prominent millinery house in Boston. A dispatch from that city states that he learned of the tragic end of his wife without the least sign of emotion. His only comment was that he had expected such a fate to overtake her. The couple had been married seven years before trouble arose between them, and the wife came to California. She was the daughter of a carpenter, and in her girlhood was much courted and flattered because of her good looks and charming manners.

Mrs. Noyes furnished apartments handsomely at No. 671 South Little street. McComas lived at No. 1617A South Flower street. He visited her frequently, and was with her as much of the time as business permitted.

The woman had few friends and fewer acquaintances. McComas had scores of them. He was a clubman, a lodgeman and a man of the world. His love for the little woman increased day by day.

But when her funds began to run short through plunging at the track, the trouble began. Quarrels became frequent. McComas told some of his most intimate friends that he feared the woman would kill him, and recited numerous attempts she had made on his life.

After the shooting, into the Hotel Pepper, where a dance was in progress, walked the man, his face seared and blistered with the acid. He gave himself up to the officer there, and with him returned to the apartment, where the body of the dead woman lay on the floor, facing the stairway.

"I killed her," said McComas, "because she was throwing acid on me. I shot once to scare her, and then, when the acid hit me, I don't know where I shot, but she turned from me and took two steps toward the stairway, and then fell."

That was the only statement McComas would make, under the advice of his attorneys, Rogers & Schenck.

The inquest will be held early this week. An autopsy was made yesterday morning at the Pierce morgue.

Public Administrator Frank Bryson was yesterday granted letters of administration on the estate of Mrs. Noyes. The value of it is not known, but Dist.-Atty. Fredericks was yesterday informed by 'phone by a Mrs. Lewis that over a year ago the dead woman left with her a letter, asking her to take charge of the estate in case of the writer's death. Mrs. Lewis's claim will be investigated.

McComas is widely known throughout the mining districts of the West as one of the most brilliant of men. He came here from San Francisco several years ago, after an unfortunate domestic trouble, which caused him to part with his wife, who, it is believed, is still living in the northern city.

His professional career in California has taken him to most of the camps in the State. He has been in charge of the Amador Queen in Amador county, the Four Hills mine in Sierra county, and many others of equal importance. Latterly he was in charge of a property in Inyo county, but resigned a few months ago. He is a son of a very able lawyer, who was for many years a prominent figure in Silver City, Mex., and who was killed by Apaches, together with his wife and daughter, in 1883. McComas is known among his intimates as a charming companion, generous to a fault.

McComas was advised to sever his relationship with her, and had tried to do so, but every attempt was followed by a scene, in which his life was threatened, it is said.

NO SURPRISE TO HIM.
HER FORMER HUSBAND TALKS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BOSTON (Mass.) Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Charles Noyes, husband of the woman shot in Los Angeles, first learned of the shooting when approached today by a correspondent for an interview. He was not greatly surprised and seemed unmoved by the story, saying he expected her end would be of a violent nature. According to his story, Mrs. Noyes obtained a California divorce.

Noyes said his wife was rich in her own right and he will make no attempt to interfere in the matter. He is about 40 years old, and has been employed for several years by a large millinery firm in Boston, as traveling salesman. He bears a high reputation. His home is in Newburyport.

"I married her in 1893, in Newburyport," he said, "where we both lived for years. She was the daughter of Eli Lamprey, a carpenter, and an estimable man. She was 36 years old on her last birthday. I made a good home for her always, as any one in Newburyport will tell you, but I did not have a happy moment during the eight years we lived together. I don't want to say anything at this time disparaging the dead, for she was my wife.

"She finally ran away to California to visit some friends named Lewis and packed up without saying a word. I heard many stories of her relations with McComas. I did not even take the trouble to contest the divorce suit. She owns a lot of property here, but I want nothing."

ANARCHISTIC.

FLOUT RED BANNERS, SING "MARSEILLAISE."

WITH red flags waving, 500 Socialists, singing the "Marseillaise," paraded downtown streets about 8 o'clock last night after the police had scattered their meeting at Franklin street and Broadway and arrested the speakers. Mrs. Jessie Shuck led the mob to Fifth and Los Angeles streets, where they held another meeting.

Mrs. Shuck mounted a platform with her red flag and defied the police to arrest her. The crowd shouted and cheered. When two patrolmen attempted to get up to the platform they were jostled and jeered by the crowd and held back. A riot call was sent in and twenty patrolmen were detailed to disperse the meeting.

When the squad of policemen arrived they threatened to use violence unless the Socialists dispersed. The officers were hissed and jeered. After some difficulty the police pushed their way through the crowd. Mrs. Shuck was placed under arrest for speaking on the street without a permit. She was taken to the Police Station on a street car and a howling mob of 200 persons followed. A committee of Socialists deposited $100 bail for her appearance in court.

George M. Woodby, a negro of Pasadena, and J. J. Hicks of Los Angeles, were arrested at the meeting on Franklin street on a similar charge. The committee also deposited bail for their appearance in court. As soon as the first speakers were arrested Mrs. Shuck leaped upon a box and shouted: "Let's parade the streets!"

Waving a red streamer, she jumped down and started down Franklin to Spring street and then south, the crowd following. Men pulled out red bandana handkerchiefs, tying them on sticks and canes. They sang defiantly as they marched down Spring street. Patrolmen on their beats attempted to stop the procession but were pushed and shoved about and abused.

The police authorities will take the matter up with the Police Commission in an effort to stop further demonstrations. It is probable that a squad of police will be detailed to the special duty of preventing the Socialists from congregating in the streets in defiance of the city ordinance which prohibits such meetings without a permit.

Chief Kern said last night that harsher measures would be adopted to prevent any further demonstrations: that a conference would be held today for the purpose of discussing the matter.

A score or more of Socialists have been arrested in the last week for addressing street gatherings in defiance of law. In each instance the prisoner gave bail in the amount of $100 and the matter is to be fought out in the courts. The Socialists assert that the ordinance is unconstitutional. Those who violate the law intentionally set themselves up as "martyrs," and a new crop is harvested every day.

LINK OF THE PAST AND THE PRESENT BROKEN.

Senora Reymunda Feliz de Romero.

With the impressive Roman Catholic ritual the last rites were held at Plaza Church yesterday morning over the remains of Señora Reymunda Feliz de Romero, who died Tuesday morning. The pastor of the church, Father Caballeria, celebrated the requiem mass and preached the funeral sermon. For eighty-eight years Señora Romero had been a resident of this city, and she was known to all of the old Spanish settlers. Though the mass was celebrated at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, the church was crowded and the funeral cortege to Calvary Cemetery, where the body was laid to rest, was a long one.

The old church was draped in black for the ceremonies, and around the bier were placed the ancient candelabra which have seen service since the days of the [illegible] All of the quaint old [illegible] days church, illuminated only by the small windows and filled with reverent friends, presented much the same picture that it must have on similar occasions in the days gone by.

Within the church have been held the funeral services of not only the mother and husband of the late Señora Romero, but of one daughter and several grandchildren as well. Many of the little decorations, now black with age, were bought with money which she donated in her younger days. For many years her name has appeared on the back of one of the pews.

In the course of the funeral sermon Father Caballeria told of the many years that Señora Romero had been a member of the congregation, and of the great changes that had come to the country during that time. He begged his hearers to preserve the old ideals of churchmanship, and to keep fresh

To Owners of Bad Breath--

Foul Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Eating or Drinking Stopped at Once With Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Trial Package to Prove It Sent Free.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe, they whiff out odor which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

GREET GRAND SECRETARY.

Thirty members of Royal Oak Lodge, Sons of St. George, made the pilgrimage to Pasadena to meet Supreme Secretary Williams. The supreme secretary was the guest of Alexandra Lodge and an interesting meeting was held at the Pasadena headquarters. Mr. Williams gave a talk on the order and its ideals. District Deputy Cooper then gave a brief talk, complimenting the supreme secretary on the work which he has accomplished and congratulating the members of the order on having so able a man in the grand lodge. Next week Grand Secretary Williams will attend a banquet given by the lodges of the order in and around San Francisco.

Fat Is an Offense.

"The female form being capable of expressing a supreme degree of grace, should be an inspiration in our daily lives and lead up to higher ideals of beauty," said the art lecturer. "Therefore the fat woman is an enemy to the artistic uplift, for she is entirely too heavy for any wings of fancy to raise.

"I can't understand how any woman will remain fat when it is so easy to reduce one's flesh. In the Latin quarter of Paris one never sees a gross figure. Although the art models take things easy, sit around a great deal and eat just whatever they please, yet they keep their flesh firm and their figures beautiful. They have a simple fat reducer that takes the place of starving and gymnastics. It consists of a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime of this simple receipt: ½ ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3½ ounces Syrup Simplex. That's all. Why don't fat, pudgy American women try that? It's harmless—nay, very good for them—and will, I understand, take off as much as a pound of fat a day. Any one with a little small change and a drug store handy can have a decent figure."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Do Not Realize It Unti It Has Developed Into Bladder Trouble, Rheumatism, Diabetes or Bright's Disease, Which Will Prove Fatal If Not Attended to at Once

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

CURES TO STAY CURED. A TRIAL BOTTLE OF THIS GREAT KIDNEY CURE WILL BE SENT ABSOLUTELY FREE TO EVERY READER OF THE TIMES WHO SUFFERS FROM KIDNEY, LIVER, BLADDER OR BLOOD DISEASE.

MISS KATHLEEN BUTLERS.

Miss Kathleen Butlers of Virginia, Minnesota, who is prominent in Catholic circles and Secretary of the Social Circle, had pains in the back, was nervous, depressed, run down and her kidneys were diseased. She took Warner's Safe Cure, within three months was a well woman, and cannot say too much in favor of Warner's Safe Cure.

"Before I began using Warner's Safe Cure I was all run down in health and spirits and did not care whether I lived or died. My back ached, kidneys out of order, liver deranged, and there was no time when I was free from aches and pains. I had liver spots on my face, felt depressed and nervous all the time.

"The first bottle of Warner's Safe Cure improved my appetite, made it possible for me to obtain a good night's rest, and in less than three months I was well. My back never causes me any trouble, my complexion cleared of all the liver spots, and I certainly have every reason to praise Warner's Safe Cure."—Kathleen Butlers, Sec'y Catholic Social Circle, Virginia, Minn., June 10, 1907.

CURES KIDNEY DISEASE

When the kidneys are diseased the uric acid is not carried off and this causes Gout, Lumbago, Rheumatism of the Joints, Rheumatism of the Muscles, Rheumatism of the Heart, Rheumatism everywhere. WARNER'S SAFE CURE drives out the uric acid and purifies the kidneys and bladder.

In kidney disease the bowels are often constipated and the liver torpid. Warner's Safe Pills quickly relieve this condition, and no ill after-effect is experienced.

WARNER'S SAFE CURE is put up in two sizes and is sold by all druggists, or direct, at 50 CENTS AND $1.00 A BOTTLE. Refuse substitutes containing harmful drugs which injure the system.

Trial Bottle Free To convince every sufferer from diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood that WARNER'S SAFE CURE will absolutely cure, a trial bottle will be sent FREE OF CHARGE, postpaid, to any one who will write WARNER'S SAFE CURE CO., Rochester, N. Y., and mention having seen this liberal offer in The Times. The genuineness of this offer is fully guaranteed. If you will write us a full statement of your case, our doctor will send you free advice and a valuable medical booklet, describing causes, symptoms and treatment, and many convincing testimonials. OH—AH!

ANY FAIR DAUGHTERS CROSS BURNING SANDS.

ITH trembling footsteps, but with eyes resolutely turned toward the Mecca of their de- two hundred candidates crossed burning sands at the Shriner [illegible] last night and qualifor admittance into Court Al [illegible]ikah, Daughters of Isis. The di- [illegible] of torture had made their prep- [illegible] thoroughly and it was a tired pilgrims that was finally suffered [illegible] the white fez and fasten the [illegible] pin upon jacket lapels. [illegible] night's initiation was the first since the effecting of a permanent [illegible] for the local court and precaution was taken to set a standard. Prominent nobles of Al [illegible] Temple, who are honorary [illegible] of the court, were called in [illegible] advice in regard to handling pilgrim band and they assured the [illegible] that their efforts were fully [illegible] as those of the temple. [illegible] o'clock the candidates presented themselves at the street entrance to the Coliseum. They were kept waiting in fear and trembling for an hour, when the great caravan appeared and conveyed them to their journey's starting point.

Lest some of the pilgrims might be foolishly inclined to look lightly upon the ceremonies, the desert searchers sent delegates to condole with them upon their fate and to prepare them for the torture chamber. The result was that when the signal announced all in readiness most of the candidates were looking for convenient ways of escape.

The Coliseum was impressively arranged. The stage was occupied by a gorgeous throne upon which sat Daughter Lucile I. Mead, Queen Isis. On either side were the ladies of the court and maids-of-honor, while the loyal guard, chosen from among the nobles, was clustered about.

The entrance of Queen Isis and her court was very impressive, the guard and ladies of honor and the members of the court forming a "V" through which her majesty walked. A hidden [illegible] strains as the Queen took her seat and gave the signal for the ceremonies to commence.

At the last note of the selection the caravan convoying the pilgrims wended its way in.

FOURTEEN VICTIMS.

As it was impossible to think of putting the entire class of 200 candidates through the tortures, the Queen designated fourteen victims as fit subjects for experiment and instructed the others to watch from the balconies.

With surprising speed the wonders which had been prepared for the pilgrims were unfolded. Just as a candidate thought that she had reached an oasis in the desert and would be allowed a short period of refreshment and rest, she was urged on to the next station, passing over sands hotter than the preceding ones and being subjected to new terrors.

The costumes of the Queen, court and torture directors were strikingly beautiful. Queen Lucile Mead wore the Cleopatra gown belonging to Miss Florence Stone, and presented a regal appearance. Gracefully she moved about among her subjects and with all of the dignity of a temporal ruler directed them regarding their duties.

All of the ladies of the court were dressed in oriental garb, each costume different but all wonderfuly artistic and effective.

The Coliseum was draped with flags and pennants. Over the throne hung [illegible] drawn back in graceful folds. Along the balconies were hung brilliant-hued flags inscribed with the words "Isis and Osiris." On every hand were the trophies of the order, while oriental draperies, hung in festoons, gave an air of barbaric splendor to the great hall.

Thousands of electric lights furnished illumination. Cunningly hidden in the folds of the draperies, the bulbs cast forth a subdued glow, red being the predominant color, and made the hall as brilliant as day.

Noble William P. Jeffries, Illustrious Potentate of Al Malaikah Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; Noble D. E. Barclay, Recorder, and Noble W. C. Durgin, Treasurer, represented the temple at the ceremonies.

Members of the official divan who assisted Queen Lucile Mead were Daughter Gertrude Flint, First Lady of Honor; Daughter Coray Y. Logan, Second Lady of Honor; Daughter Emma M. Carson, Historian, and Daughter Mabel V. Pritchard, Executive Secretary.

THE TORTURE DIRECTORS.

The floor officers were: Daughter F. Lang, High Executioner; Daughter Eva Zaiser, Marshal; Daughter Frances Parker, Oriental Guide; Daughter Ruby Daniels, Inventor of Tortures; Daughter Ada P. Whiting and Daughter Mae J. Spaulding, Knights of Torture; Daughter Clara Fowler, Director of Grips; Daughter Adelaide H. Imler, [illegible] Griffith, First Surgeon; Daughter Esther Hart, Second Surgeon; Daughter Rosamond Rankin, Director; Daughter Mary L. Hartwell, Daughter Appalona Fraser, Daughter Edith Morrison and Daughter Ida May Hart, Assistant Directors, and Daughter Anna Stevenson and Daughter Minnie Wolf, Queens of the Masks.

The floor assistants were: Daughters Ella Mitchel, E. F. Vawter, Jeanette Beal, Zoe Holton, Susan Sherman, Mildred Lyke, Minnie Van Culen, Jean C. Durgin, Laura Beyrle and Enid Daniels.

The Side Show Committee was composed of Daughters Mayme Goodrich, Elizabeth Everhardy, A. K. Brauer, Elizabeth Wheeler, Margaret Chambers and Augusta H. Follmer.

Noble W. R. Chambers and Noble R. I. Follmer acted as Court Guards.

The court assistants were: Daughters Virginia Coate, Addie Dunn, Alice Pierce, Jennie McCray, Etta Patillo, Mildred Sawtelle, Zora Eisenmeyer, Alice M. Jones, Elizabeth Ward and Jennie Mathis.

The desert searchers, to whose efforts, largely, was due the size of the class of candidates, are the following: Daughters D. W. Imler, Tropico; Calvin Hartwell, Pasadena; J. C. McPhersons, Pasadena; W. J. Griffith, Covina; Esther Hart, San Dimas, A. R. Fraser, Ocean Park; N. F. Morse, Orange county; C. W. Grassell, Redondo; Lena M. Stannard, Long Beach, and Daughter Jennie P. Mossholder, San Diego.

Many of the candidates [illegible] is spreading rapidly in the oasis of Los Angeles. Court Al Malaikah now numbers more than 1000 members, counting those admitted last night. Not all of the candidates were able to present themselves for the work, however, and another initiation will be held before the end of the year.

Last night's initiation was the last to be held with the $5 initiation fee in force. At the end of the ceremonies it was announced that future candidates will be required to pay $10.

THE COMPENSATION.

At the close of the initiation ceremonies, a leap-year ball was given. Determined that, for once, the women should have a fair chance in selecting partners, the queen decreed that every man who asked a Daughter of Isis to dance wth him should be fined the sum of $1. For a time the penalty frightened the men into obeying orders, but toward the last many succumbed. So large was the sum received in fines that the queen found it necessary to make some use of it, so she ordered that it be used for charitable purposes.

As soon as they heard the order, the nobles determined to help charity along, and soon the women found themselves forced to accept homage rather than pay it. The dollars pouring into the treasury soothed their feelings, however, and they willingly let the men do the asking, when they [illegible]

Theron H. Kellogg, one of the best-known newspaper men of the country, died on Friday night. He was 76 years old, and had been a resident of Altadena for two years. The funeral will be held on Sunday afternoon. Only members of the family will be present. Mr. Kellogg was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, and had worked for every Republican nominee for the Presidency since the time of John C. Fremont.

SWEET PEA BRIDGE.

The social event of yesterday was the sweet pea bridge party given by Mrs. Lawrence Hurlburt at her home on South Orange Grove avenue. The drawing-room and library, where the card tables were arranged, were fragrant with the blossoms, relieved by the green of asparagus plumosus. After the games, each guest was given an exquisite split straw basket, tied with pink tulle, and filled with pink sweet peas. An elaborate collation was served. Those present were Mmes. H. H. Sinclair, Henry T. Fuller, Henry H. Sherk, Walter L. Wotkyns, E. D. Neff, F. G. Bland, Winslow Taylor, Hampton L. Story, Philip L. Auten, I. B. Winslow, W. S. Wright, Seamans, Torrey Everett, Ernest B. Hoag, Lutie Wright Benton, and the Misses Seamans, Dean, Wheelock, Dreer and Bates.

DINNER DANCE.

At an informal dinner dance at the Country Club last evening, covers were laid for forty. Among the club members present, who entertained from two to ten friends, were: Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jerome Eddy, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Orbison, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pitcairn, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harrison I. Drummond, Mr. and Mrs. William Parks, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Rowan, W. B. Snyder, Don McGilvray and Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Tulloch.

INFORMAL TEA.

Mrs. Charles D. Daggett of Columbia Hill gave a small informal tea yesterday afternoon, complimentary to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pixley, who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Holmes at Hotel Green.

Beginning Monday, March 2, and extending one week, Miss Marie Johnson will hold an exhibition and sale at her studio, 255 So. Fair Oaks, of fifty paintings, consisting of fruit, flowers, and interiors at half price. As Miss Johnson intends devoting her time to portraiture and landscape, this will be the last opportunity to secure one of her flower paintings.

DISCUSS EBELL SITE.

Pomona Club Women Listen to Projects for Location of House for Them.

POMONA, Feb. 29.—The Ebell Club yesterday discussed the matter of a site for the projected new clubhouse. Morris H. Wilson, right-of-way man for the Huntington interests, was present, and for the Ganesha Park tract offered a lot free on the electric-car line on Huntington boulevard, the only condition being that the ladies should erect a building thereon; he also offered a commission contribution to the clubhouse building fund on some lots sold. M. H. Potter of the Kenoak tract also offered a lot, upon which a value of $1600 was placed, if the ladies would agree to build a $5000 clubhouse on the site within a year. The ladies were taken in tallyhos and automobiles by Messrs. Wilson and Potter to both tracts, which are near Ganesha Park, and the proposed sites were inspected. The ladies postponed decision until next Saturday.

PLAY PLEASES.

The production of "The Outpost," given at the Fraternal Aid Theater last night, under direction of Frank W. Balfour, for the benefit of Co. D, N.G.C., pleased a large audience and was a success. The cast included Messrs. Balfour, Thompson Grant, Duffy, Fay McFarland, Elsasser, Hickok, and Mrs. C. E. Hibbs, Misses Wilcox, Nance and Greenleaf. The comedy supplied by Misses Wilcox and Nance and Messrs. Fay and Duffy kept the audience in mirthful mood, all of the cast acquitting themselves with credit. There was special music and scenery for the production.

POMONA POINTS.

Misses Bertha Sanborn and Charlotte Smythe of the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School are guests of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Sanborn and Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Pitzer.

Rehearsals are in progress, under the direction of A. H. Witman, Jr., for the production of "Secret Service," to be given by local talent for the benefit of the Pomona Fruit and Flower Mission this month, at Fraternal Aid Theater.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jameson are planning to remove to Los Angeles.

Joseph L. Stanton, district passenger agent for the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, St. Louis and San Francisco and Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroads, was here from Los Angeles yesterday and today.

About $420,000 has been spent here in the past five years, under the Vrooman street-improvement act, in cement sidewalks, curbing, road grading and oiling in various parts of the city.

OCEAN PARK.

OCEAN PARK, Feb. 29.—To the petition praying the Trustees to permit the people to vote on the liquor-license question at the election in April, only 150 signatures have been attached. It will be presented Monday night, but it is improbable that it will be granted.

Shark bait was in steady demand today, as the run of pompano that set in yesterday continued. Fishermen have enjoyed rare success.

The request of Aaron Edinger, the carpenter who died suddenly last evening from heart disease, that his body be buried at the Soldiers' Home, will be granted. He was only 15 years old when he enlisted in the army. He was a native of Pennsylvania and came to this beach four years ago.

HUNTINGTON PARK.

HUNTINGTON PARK, Feb. 29.—The question of fixing rates for water and lighting occupied the attention of the City Trustees Wednesday night. The opinion seemed to be that the rates charged by the South Los Angeles Water Company were reasonable, and the City Attorney was ordered to prepare an ordinance in conformity with the company's charges. Some objection was made to the cost of electric lighting, it being claimed that the rates charged were higher than in other places, but no conclusion was reached.

AMERICAN PUSH.

QUICKLY CLOSES THEATER DEAL.

RUSH ORDER FOR PLAYHOUSE IN LONG BEACH.

South Dakota Man Makes Contract for Site on the Front and Proposes to Have the Building Completed by the Time of the Arrival of the Battleship Fleet—For Reopening Bank.

LONG BEACH, Feb. 29.—Record time was made yesterday and today by L. H. Bentley of Millbank, S. D., in closing a deal whereby Long Beach after many promises is at last to have a modern theater. Mr. Bentley, who owns a theater in Millbank and is one of the owners of a popular playhouse in Minneapolis, came here three weeks ago to visit his family, which is located here for the winter. He decided that the city's future was promising and yesterday began negotiations with the Strand Company for the site formerly occupied by Tarrytown, lying between the Majestic rink and Hotel Virginia. The deal was closed early this morning and an hour later Mr. Bentley had accepted plans drawn by the Naples Construction Company for other parties, and this afternoon is busy with contractors, getting bids on the new structure, which, he says, must be commenced next Wednesday. The successful contractor must agree to have the theater completed by the arrival of the warships in May, under penalty of $150 for every day beyond that time. The new structure is to be of brick, with main floor, balcony and gallery, and is to seat 1000 people. The lobby will be modeled after the Chicago Auditorium and the stage will be 35x50 feet with a fly gallery fifty-five feet high. A seventeen-foot storeroom facing the Pike will be on either side of the lobby. The new playhouse will be called the "Bentley Grand," a name borne by his other theaters. It has been leased to Braden & Reed, theatrical men of Portland, and Mr. Braden will arrive Wednesday to assume direct charge and control. The cost of the structure will be $35,000.

The theater will be run as a popular price house, playing road shows in winter and vaudeville in summer.

Mr. Bentley will go to Millbank next week, but will return in the summer.

FRANCHISE BUYER PROFITS.

On application of the Pacific Electric, the city last December advertised for sale the electric line franchises on Seventh street, running from the river to the east city limits and on Pine avenue from Sixth to Fourteenth. On the day of sale, Frank A. Crowe of this city caught the Pacific Electric napping and purchased the franchises for $250 each. He claimed to have bought as a speculation and sent out hundreds of notices to financiers to that effect. Several days ago George H. Bixby made him an offer for his holdings, which was accepted. When he proceeded toward closing up the deal, he found that he was working with attorneys for the Pacific Electric, and that that corporation was to funish the bond, binding the purchaser to begin work within four months. Mr. Crowe refuses to make known the terms of sale, but says he made a handsome profit. The acquisition of the Seventh-street line gives the Pacific Electric a freight line to the Long Beach market on the east and the inner harbor on the west, and opens up rapid transit for a well-settled residence district.

WOULD REOPEN BANK.

Stockholders of the Citizens' Savings Bank are much elated over the four days granted them by Judge James to make a showing on their plans for resuming business without the intervention of a receiver, and on Monday, with nineteen autos, a tour of the city will be made, presenting to every depositor the plan for reorganization, with all the old managers eliminated. The bank has $37,000 cash on hand, and it is claimed that if the larger depositors will accept certificates of deposit they can pay off 1300 of the small depositors and be able to continue and realize on their assets with no loss to depositors or stockholders and the saving of several thousand dollars of court costs.

AGED TWINS CELEBRATE.

A birthday out of the ordinary was quietly celebrated yesterday by Thomas G. and Robert G. Holmes, 76 years old, and believed to be the oldest twins living in this section. Both are venerable old men, with flowing white beards. They were born in Ontario, then known as Upper Canada, and were pioneers of Albion, Minn., where they held public office for thirty years.

Rain last night and this morning added .09 inch to the season's total, which is now 9.29 inches.

The steamer J. C. Elliott made her first trip to this city today with her new eighty-horse-power engine, just installed.

R. C. Talbot, aged 77, died this morning at his home on Bishop street. He was a native of Canada, and had lived in Long Beach fifteen years. He leaves a widow.

The City Council yesterday amended the building ordinance to permit the erection of a summer theater on the Strand, similar to the old Tarrytown, which burned several months ago.

The City Council has leased from the Western Boat Works two floats and advanced $150 for building a third one, all to be used in facilitating the handling of passengers during the visit of the battleships. The rental will be about $50 a day.

ADMINISTRATION CRITICISED.

VENICE, Feb. 29.—The Pick and Shovel Club has elected these officers: Mrs. George E. Sibley, president; Mrs. J. L. Dean, vice-president; Mrs. Abbot Kinney, recording secretary; Mrs. C. H. Bouck, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Margaret Kirk, treasurer. On Saturday Mrs. Matthew Robertson will address the members of the club on "Parliamentary Law."

The first public ratification meeting during the present municipal campaign was held at the Auditorium this evening. It was called by the Good Government League in the interests of the candidates named by that organization. The present city administration was harshly criticised, and the voters were asked to "cast off the yoke" of misgovernment.

Work has commenced on handsome residences for T. L. Ely and M. Thompson. Both are in the Rialto section of the city, and each will cost about $4500.

The Polytechnic High School of Los Angeles will make an exhibit in the Crafts gallery in the pavilion. It will be installed soon and will, no doubt, prove quite an argument in favor of the formation of a local high-school district, and the founding of a polytechnic school here.

Arrangements have been completed for the opening of the fair and exposition in the dancing pavilion Monday evening, under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias. The opening address will be delivered by Kenton A. Miller, colonel of the Third Regiment.

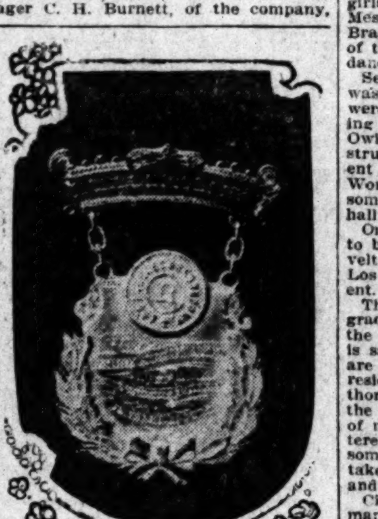
GRATITUDE.

SOUL IS SHOWN BY CORPORATION.

RAILROAD COMPANY DOES HONORS AT REDONDO.

Presents Medals to Members of Car Crew and to Passengers for Service Frustrating Highwaymen Who Attempted Robbery—Looking Further Into Sewer Construction.

REDONDO, Feb. 29.—A highly-appreciative audience assembled at the Pavilion this evening to witness the presentation of medals to the car crew and passengers who were instrumental in frustrating the threatened hold-up of the car of the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway at Athens Heights on the evening of January 11, last. Manager C. H. Burnett, of the company, made the presentation speech, and gave a feeling expression of the gratitude of the management to the men who, at a dangerous crisis and at the risk of their lives had given adequate protection to the lives and property of the company's patrons, as well as the company's property. He referred particularly to the cool and courageous conduct of Conductor Greer, who, in spite of the two guns leveled at his own breast, had not hesitated to act quickly and fearlessly, even to the taking of human life, to protect lives and property that were under his care in the line of his official duty.



For Frustrating Crooks.

Type of gold medals presented by the Los Angeles and Redondo Railway company to two of its employees and two passengers last evening.

It is said that the men, Conductor J. C. Greer, Motorman H. C. Aiken, and passengers R. O. Williams of Moneta and R. J. Gillespie of Los Angeles, were wholly unaware of the intentions of the company to present them with medals. In fact so great was the modesty of the recipients of the beautiful testimonials that their presence at the pavilion this evening was not secured without considerable guile on the part of Manager Thomas of the pavilion, aided by the wives of the "victims" themselves. The attitude of all was expressed by the statement of Conductor Greer that he had done nothing more than his duty and therefore did not deserve any special reward.

The medals are all identical except as to the name of the recipient engraved upon each. They are all of heavy gold—in shape a shield, partially surrounded by a wreath, surmounted by the insignia of the railway company, and depending by links from a scroll on which are engraved the words "Presented By." The legend in the shield comprises the words "For conspicuous bravery, January 11, 1908."

LOOKING INTO SEWER.

Attorney Willis of the Los Angeles firm of Davis, Rush & Willis is in this city today to consult with leading members of the Civic League and to inspect the papers in the sewer contract with a view to determining the rights of the taxpayers and the resulting remedies in the event it should be found that the contractors are doing work not in accordance with the specifications. This visit is the result of the investigations made earlier in the week by a committee of the league. The committee has made no formal report, but it is understood that it is prepared to make a report charging gross violations of the contract.

A meeting of the League was called last night, but it was so late when the City Trustees adjourned that little or nothing could be done, and the report of the investigating will not be formally made until next week, when it will probably be accompanied by a report with recommendations from the league's attorneys.

FIXES WATER RATES.

The City Council fixed the city water rate at its adjourned meeting last night. No material changes were made in the old rate.

NOT YET BUT SOON.

Enumerator J. G. Stark has completed the work of the city census, and reports that the population of this city will not exceed in the aggregate 2900. The totals have not been fully determined, but sufficient is known to realize that the number, 3000, necessary to enable the city to change from the sixth to fifth class, has not yet been reached, and that the proposed change will have to be postponed.

SANTA MONICA.

SANTA MONICA, Feb. 29.—A new ordinance makes it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine not exceeding $100, to post bills, signs or placards on houses, walls, walks, fences or posts without first having secured the permission of owners. This is the first result of the recent anti-billboard agitation on the part of the Civic Association's outdoor art section.

Tomorrow the local baseball team will play at Santa Ana.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Heath are spending a week at Elsinore.

Mr. and Mrs. G. J. Mager of Courtland, N. Y., are visiting here.

Mrs. T. S. Hutton has gone to San Francisco.

Santa Monica Masons have installed N. R. Folsom as worshipful master. The ceremony was followed by a banquet that had been prepared by the women of the Eastern Star.

SOUTH PASADENA.

SOUTH PASADENA, Feb. 29.—The decision of Judge Smith in the case of South Pasadena vs. Murphy, being habeas corpus proceedings to test the antipoolroom ordinance lately passed, sustains the contention of the city. The only poolroom in town was established just before the ordinance went into force, and the proprietor was arrested for its violation. The proceedings in the Recorder's Court were also to test the validity of the ordinance, but they were suspended pending the trial before Judge Smith. Backed by this decision the city will probably be able to enforce the ordinance hereafter.

The Woman's Improvement Association has fixed upon Saturday, March 7, as Arbor Day.

B. V. Garwood has announced his intention to run for the office of City Clerk.

PLAY FOR LIBRARY.

Local Talent at Sierra Madre Appears Twice Before Crowded Houses in Society Skit.

SIERRA MADRE, Feb. 29.—The Town Hall was filled Thursday and Friday evenings at the presentations of a three-act farce-comedy, "The Fairchilds," given by local talent in aid of the Public Library. Miss Edith Blumer, a social leader, played the principal role, that of Mrs. Fairchild, a widow. Mrs. E. W. Camp, wife of Attorney Camp of the Santa Fé Railroad, played the part of a servant. Miss Anita Carter and Miss Lottie Humphries appeared as two society girls. The gentlemen in the play were Messrs. Teele, Simpson, Ferguson, Bransby and Bourke. After the close of the play on Friday evening a social dance was given.

Several years ago the Town Hall was declared unsafe, and the owners were required to strengthen the building by putting in additional supports. Owing to changes being made in the structure, it is charged that the present supports are insufficient. The Women's Club started a movement some time ago to erect a large public hall suited to the town's needs.

On Thursday evening next there is to be a meeting of the Lincoln Roosevelt forces, and some speakers from Los Angeles are expected to be present.

There is much opposition to the grading and paving of Central avenue, the main thoroughfare of the city. It is said that the Trustees of the town are not listening to the voice of the residents and property owners of this thoroughfare, and are going ahead on the improvements in spite of a protest of more than 50 per cent. of those interested. The Trustees deny this, but some property owners say they will take the matter up at the proper time and contest the legality of it.

City Marshal Caley has received many reports of promiscuous shooting lately. Many visitors, apparently, do not realize that there is now a city ordinance prohibiting this.

Although it is stated that the trail to Wilson's Peak is in bad condition, more people come out to make the beautiful climb on Sunday and holidays than has ever been known before, and the electric road has been sending out extra cars on these days.

SAN PEDRO IN LINE.

Citizens Arrange for Entertainment of "Fighting Bob's" Men—Water Carnival Planned.

SAN PEDRO, Feb. 29.—This city will do her share in the reception and entertainment of the officers and men of Rear-Admiral Evans's fleet upon its arrival in April. Last night a mass meeting was held, under the auspices of the San Pedro Chamber of Commerce, to discuss ways and means. President Storer of the chamber directed attention to the importance of the visit of the battleships, and the great benefit that would ensue to this city. He urged the citizens to show their patriotism and give the sailors a rousing welcome.

Floats and barges will be provided for the accommodation of the thousands who will visit the men-of-war. Landings will be constantly policed to prevent confusion and accidents, and tickets will be issued which will insure the return to land of all persons going to the vessels, and at a uniform rate.

A programme of competitive events for prizes on the waters of the inner harbor will probably be arranged, and the freedom of the South Coast Yacht Club and of its craft will be extended to the officers of the fleet.

Other speakers at the meeting last night were Senator W. H. Savage, W. C. Miller, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, and E. D. Seward. President Storer appointed a Citizens' Committee, which will arrange details. A meeting has been called for Wednesday evening, when subcommittees will be appointed.

PASSING OF STEWARD.

J. R. McAvoy, chief steward of the steamship Roanoke, and well known among shipping men here, died Thursday at Portland of typhoid fever. He was a Mason, and a member of the Seattle lodge of Elks.

Early this morning .08 inch of rain fell, making the total 9.81 inches for the season.

COVINA.

COVINA, Feb. 29.—The farewell service of the Brooks brothers, who for the past five weeks have been holding revival services in the Christian Church, will be held Monday afternoon. There have been over eighty additions to the Christian Church in the course of their stay in Covina.

Postmaster Matthews announces that on Monday Rural Route No. 1 will be extended so as to serve all residents on Central avenue between Glendora and Sunflower avenues and west on Gladstone avenue to the center line of section No. 1. This will add two and one-half miles to the route and will serve twenty additional families, who formerly received their mail through the Charter Oak office.

GLENDORA.

GLENDORA, Feb. 29.—M. A. Foster has sold his eleven-acre orange ranch, near Glendora, set solid to five-year-old navel and Valencia oranges, to Walter L. Willey, a recent arrival from Peoria, Ill.; consideration stated, $13,000. Less than two years ago this was purchased for $7000.

E. W. Wamsley has sold his seven-acre navel orchard to A. Foster; price stated, $7000.

C. E. Needham has plans out for an eight-room residence to be erected on his fine foothill ranch fronting Sierra Madre avenue, just northeast of Glendora.

B. J. Cutler is building a modern six-room cottage on South Vermont avenue. He will build also a seven-room cottage on Vermont avenue, near the electric car line.

J. Dane is building a five-room cottage on East Whitcomb avenue.

C. H. Converse is preparing to build a two-story business block fronting on Michigan avenue, next to the car line.

BLIZZARD.

IS IN NEED OF STORM DOORS.

BRITISH CHANCELLOR HAS RAISED A TEMPEST.

His Bill to Wipe Out a Large Number of Saloons in the Kingdom Creates a Great Stir—Asquith Says Is Was Expected and Remains Unmoved.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] "Got up your storm doors?" asked John Burns, president of the local government board, of H. H. Asquith, in the lobby of the House of Commons, shortly after the Chancellor of the Exchequer had finished his speech introducing the bill to wipe out over 30,000 liquor licenses in fourteen years, and then summarily extinguish all private property in these licenses.

"I don't know. Why, John?" replied Mr. Asquith.

"You'll need 'em," said John.

The old labor leader is proving a true prophet. The blizzard provoked by the bill is blowing with ever-increasing violence. Already, according to financial experts, it has overwhelmed brewery-share values to the extent of $160,000,000.

The Tory newspapers are fairly tearing their hair and frothing at the mouth. "Sheer brigandage," "Gigantic public theft," "Precursor of universal legislative sandbagging and robbery," "The bill and its authors are doomed," and scores of similar expressions adorn the pages of the papers opposed to the government.

The bill is discussed alike in society and in saloons. Last night it was the only topic discused in beer-drinking groups.

"If this bill is made a law," said a Strand publican addressing his customers, "you chaps won't be able to pay for a glass of beer, even if you find a public house. Beer is going up, and, as a matter of fact, may not be had at any price. At this rate, all the breweries will go to smash."

"Yes," said Lord Burton, the great brewer, answering interviewers. "We can keep our places of brick and mortar, but seven-eighths of the value of a public house lies in the license. The bill means utter confiscation, and cannot pass. It would not advance temperance in the least, but would merely drive drinkers to form clubs, where the police, who now enter all saloons freely, could not exercise any effective supervision."

Mr. Asquith is unmoved by the deafening clamor. "It was all expected," he says. "We welcome sound criticism, but cannot consider sheer frenzy. If the uproar in the trade measures the public good promised by the bill its virtues at least are equal to the faith of its authors. We hold the greatest cause of intemperance in this country to be the too abundant means of obtaining spirits. Saloons are almost as thick as hansom cabs. No inconvenience or loss of time stands betwee the thirsty man, or the man who suspects that he is slightly thirsty, and the gratification of his appetite. Spirits are a good deal more easily got than plain water from the tap. We want to change this. Moreover, we want to close up the saloons for a greater number of hours on Sundays, keep children out of them, and regulate the employment of women behind the bars."

Marked by an assemblage which included many of the most distinguished men in public life, with ceremonies particularly impressive, the funeral of Crosby S. Noyes, editor of the Washington Star, who died in Pasadena, Cal., February 21, was held yesterday at St. Thomas Protestant Episcopal Church in Washington.

KOKOMO WOMAN GIVES FORTUNE

To Help Women Who Suffer.

In the past few years Mrs. Cora B. Miller has spent $125,000.00 in giving medical treatment to afflicted women.

Some time ago we announced in the columns of this paper that she would send free treatment to every woman who suffered from female diseases or piles.

More than a million women have accepted this generous offer, and as Mrs. Miller is still receiving requests from thousands of women from all parts of the world, who have not yet used the remedy, she has decided to continue the offer for a while longer, at least.

This is the simple, mild and harmless preparation that has cured so many women in the privacy of their own homes after doctors and other remedies failed.

It is especially prepared for the speedy and permanent cure of leucorrhoea or whitish discharges, ulceration, displacements or falling of the womb, profuse, scanty or painful periods, uterine or ovarian tumors or growths; also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, and piles from any cause, or no matter of how long standing.

Every woman sufferer, unable to find relief, who will write Mrs. Miller now, without delay, will receive by mail free of charge, a 50-cent box of this simple home remedy, also a book with explanatory illustrations, showing why women suffer and how they can easily cure themselves at home without the aid of a physician.

Don't suffer another day, but write at once to Mrs. Cora B. Miller, 438 Miller Building, Kokomo, Indiana.

RED TAPE LETS JAPS GET AWAY.

MYSTERIOUS LANDING NORTH OF SANTA BARBARA.

Party of Nipponese Comes Ashore in Small Boat and Secures Accommodations in Hotel—County and Federal Officers Are Informed but Nothing Done About It.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SANTA BARBARA, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Slow unwinding of official red tape seems to be responsible for the escape of seven Japanese who were mysteriously landed on the beach a mile west of Naples, sixteen miles north of here, several days ago.

The Japanese, three men and four women, applied at the Naples Hotel for lodging. The women were dressed in male attire, and the entire party looked as if they had been shipwrecked. Earlier in the afternoon, however, people along the beach in the vicinity of Naples, had seen a small boat containing seven people far out on the channel. It is believed that some steamer from the Orient dropped these people off this coast, to find their way ashore there rather than risk arrest and deportation at open ports.

George Mack of the Naples Hotel telephoned to Quarantine Officer Stoddard here, who sought Sheriff Stewart with the news. The Sheriff could do nothing, and notified the United States Marshal's office in Los Angeles. There they said the office had no jurisdiction and would notify the Immigration Bureau. Nothing was done. In the meantime the Japs left for the North on the train, after remaining three days at the Naples Hotel, where they bought a change of clothes. They seemed to be well supplied with money, but were exceedingly uncommunicative about themselves and their mission. The officials here believe the case to be one of smuggling.

CONTEMPT CITATION.

A citation for alleged contempt of court was issued by Judge Walter Bordwell of Los Angeles, sitting in the Superior Court today, against Leslie Allen, a youth, and his grandfather, H. P. Allen, requiring them to appear in court on March 9 to show cause why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court. The charge is based upon an anonymous letter received by Judge Bordwell in Los Angeles some time ago, which missive he read to the lawyers in open court here. The statements in the letter were based upon the litigation in the case of Addie L. Allen against A. C. Williams, which has become so tangled that few know the real status of the case.

H. P. Lane, who is aged, and distinguished about the Courthouse for his tangle of litigations, which has become tantamount to a mania with him, was in court when the missive was read. When he heard the last line of the missive read; "Who is worst, you or Williams, you ——— ———," he jumped up and asked to see the letter. He said it was in the handwriting of his grandson, Leslie Allen, and that the address on the envelope had been written by another grandson.

Judge Bordwell stated that, so far as he was concerned, he would not take any action in the matter unless advised to do so by the lawyers interested in the cases involved. He was so advised, and he today issued the citation.

AFTER FISH HOGS.

State fish and game wardens are planning a crusade against fishermen who are taking steel-head trout by means of dynamite and spearing, in the Santa Ynez River, in this county. The fish are being taken from the river under the name of "salmon," and the depletion of the stock of fish in the river is so serious as to prevent the run of the fish to the upper part of the river, where they belong. There is a fine provided by law of $250 for each offense, and the case is triable only in the Superior Court. The game wardens are determined to put an end to the slaughter of these fish, and it is expected that a number of arrests will follow within the next few weeks.

GENERAL'S WIDOW DIES.

Pioneer Also Passes Away at Ventura. Stork Pays Visit—Developing Blythe Estate.

VENTURA, Feb. 29.—Mrs. William Vandever passed away last night in her eighty-sixth year. Mrs. Vandever was the widow of Gen. Vandever, who served as Congressman from Iowa and from this State. She came here with her husband in 1884. She leaves one daughter, Miss Florence Vandever. The funeral will be held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

MRS. PARSONS DEAD.

Mrs. Sarah Parsons, a well known pioneer of this county, died last night, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Judge Williams, on Ventura avenue. She was in her usual health yesterday and had driven to this city and when she retired last night made no complaint of being indisposed. Her daughter was aroused during the night by her call, and found her dying. Mrs. Parsons was aged 81 years, and a native of Ohio. She came to California by way of the Isthmus of Panama in 1850, and moved with her husband to this county thirty years ago. The funeral will be held at the Williams residence at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. A. V. B. Comstock has been appointed administratrix of the estate of James T. Comstock, with bond fixed at $3000.

The Palo Verde Land and Water Company on the Colorado River, which is exploiting the Blythe estate, owned principally by the Hobson brothers of this city, is erecting a large sawmill on the property.

Lester Ready of the Mound district, has been offered by Congressman Smith the second alternate candidacy for a cadetship at Annapolis Naval Academy.

HOLD ALLEGED BURGLARS.

Three Oxnard Youths Are Held for Trial Accused of Breaking Into Poolrooms.

OXNARD, Feb. 29.—Punk Hoffman, Chris Woerle and Tom Green, three young men of Oxnard, who were arrested here the first of the week, charged with the burglary of the Arnold billiard and poolrooms of this city, were given their preliminary examination in the Recorder's Court this morning. They were bound over to the Superior Court. Green is the youngest, and is 19 years old.

With the arrest of these three boys, who have grown up in Oxnard, has been revived a great deal of talk concerning a large number of burglaries that took place a number of weeks ago. The officers are now looking for evidence to connect at least one of the three with these offenses.

CITY POLITICS OPEN UP.

City politics opened today with the announcement of C. R. Rowe for Marshal, as a candidate against W. E. Kelley, present City Marshal, and the announcements of Deputy City Clerk B. S. Braddock and E. G. Lewis as candidates for the office of City Clerk.

FOR PAVING.

An ordinance has been placed on its first reading by the City Trustees, ordering the work of paving Fifth street in the city from the Southern Pacific depot westerly through the main business part of town and around the public park on B and C streets. This work was decided upon some time ago, and will be rushed as fast as the legal proceedings will allow. It will mean an expenditure of about $45,000. The paving is to be of heavy macadam, with tulleford base, three layers of crushed rock and a surface rolled with oil.

Mrs. Eliza Styles, a pioneer of Ventura county, died at the home of her son, Gus Styles, of the Conejo Valley Wednesday, aged 88 years. She had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church for seventy-five years.

ORANGE COUNTY PROSPEROUS.

Decided Increase in Property Valuation Predicted—Deputy Assessors Take Field Tomorrow.

SANTA ANA, Feb. 29.—When the assessments for Orange county are footed up next July, the total will be considerably in excess of that for 1907, says County Assessor W. M. Scott. There has been considerable improvement of realty holdings during the year, and an equitable assessment will mean a decided increase in valuations. A corps of field deputies will begin listing property on Monday. They are D. N. Kelly and O. E. Steward, Santa Ana; E. A. Chaffee, Garden Grove; W. H. Spake, Anaheim; G. A. Ruddock, Fullerton; Fred Struck, Orange and W. J. Kelly, Tustin.

COMPANY WON'T LOSE.

The stockholders of the Arizona Sandstone Company, all of whom live in Southern California and most of whom are residents of this city, have watched with much interest the periodical agitation in Los Angeles to change the specifications for the government building now being erected there. Under the contract red sandstone produced by the Arizona Sandstone Company is to be used for facing the five upper stories. There is now some talk of substituting granite. If that is done, an additional appropriation of not less than $120,000 will be necessary. The sandstone company has a bond for the acceptance of its product.

A. G. Finley, a well-known rancher, was today elected a director of the Santa Ana Valley Irrigation Company to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Asa Cox, who has moved to Hemet.

A shower last night added twelve-hundredths inch to the season's rainfall, the total now being 9.85 inches.

Suit to quiet title to oil property at Olinda was brought today by W. H. Bailey, Jr., against the Rob Roy Oil Company and D. G. McDonald.

IMPRISONED FOR LIFE.

Murderer of Constable Sentenced at Riverside—Listing of Property to Begin Monday.

RIVERSIDE, Feb. 29.—Accepting the recommendation of the jury, Judge Densmore sentenced Horace Magee, this morning, to life imprisonment in Folsom for the murder of Constable P. V. Swanguen at Temecula last Christmas eve. A motion for a new trial had been made by the prisoner's attorneys but it was withdrawn today.

DEPUTIES APPOINTED.

Field deputies have been appointed by County Assessor Montague and the work of listing property will begin Monday. The deputies are A. C. Pickett, J. F. Reimer and R. J. Nelson, Riverside; H. H. Paulson, Arlington and vicinity; Frank P. Ogden, Highgrove; A. G. Wildar, West Riverside; D. M. Browning, Corona; S. A. Stewart, Elsinore; A. B. Barnett, Temecula and Murietta; S. V. Gates, Perris; William McMahill, Moreno; G. H. Richmond, Winchester; Charles Stetson, Hemet; J. B. Hurt, San Jacinto; W. W. Watson, Beaumont and Banning; Roy McCarrel, Desert, and D. U. Wilferd, Palo Verde and Neighbors.

SENT TO ASYLUM.

Joseph L. Bender, Jr., who claims to be a Chicago lawyer and whose peculiar business transaction brought him into the hands of the police a few weeks ago, was today taken to the Highlands asylum. He made fifty-cent deposits in two of the local banks and then proceeded to draw checks for larger sums in payment for goods bought.

ANAHEIM.

ANAHEIM, Feb. 29.—There was no quorum at the annual meeting of the Anaheim Union Water Company today and the present board of directors will hold over another year.

The Trustees have granted the petition of a large number of residents, who ask that the question of closing the saloons and wineries on Sundays be submitted to the voters on April 13.

Albert Lemrou of Pasadena and Miss Annie Hodel of Anaheim, were married in Los Angeles yesterday.

Albert Neipp of Honolulu, son of Michael Neipp, is visiting here, after an absence of fifteen years.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Weisel have returned from Milwaukee.

A horse attached to a heavy spring wagon, ran down the sidewalk of Center street, today, for a distance of nearly two blocks, breaking three large plate glass windows in Asher and Jalkenstein's store, and a number of smaller ones.

AFTER QUAIL TRAPPERS.

Alleged Wholesale Slaughter of the Game Birds Not Far from Ontario.

ONTARIO, Feb. 29.—City officers are uniting their efforts with those of the county officers in securing evidence against an Italian gang, living in Cucamonga, which is charged with slaughterig quail wholesale, contrary to the State game laws. According to information received, the offenders strung a net of fine mesh across a gully, which crosses land of the Italian Vineyard Company, at South Cucamonga. On stated occasions the Italians swarm their lodges in the vicinity of the line, and with branches slowly drive the birds before them until they run into the light and almost invisible mesh, where they are at once entangled and easily dispatched. One eye-witness says that he saw hundreds of the helpless birds thus collected. He says that the men do not stop at the killing of the quail, but that thrushes, robins, meadow larks and other protected birds are as ruthlessly slain. The officers working on the case are said to have secured evidence to warrant the arrest of fully fifty accused foreigners.

FOR GUM TREE LUMBER.

The Eucalyptus Timber Company has just finished a 600-foot well and pumping plant, with a fifty-horse-power gasoline engine, on the comapny's land, lying southeast of town. The well, which is now throwing fifty inches of water, will insure proper irrigation to their 260 acres of eucalyptus trees which the company is setting out. The company is headed by San Francisco men, who are interested in the telephone business, and expect to be cutting thirty-foot poles within four years.

WITH SUICIDAL INTENT.

Coroner's Jury at San Diego Finds Former Angeleno Drank Acid to Die—Bond Issue Mooted.

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 29.—The Coroner's jury decided today that Morris Gottleib came to his death through drinking carbolic acid, with suicidal intent. Prior to coming to this city he was employed for three months by L. Heilbronner at No. 111 West Ninth street, Los Angeles. A brother in New York City has been wired to send instructions as to what shall be done with the body.

J. H. Dodson, for nine years justice of the peace at El Cajon, will resign soon. A petition, signed by a majority of the taxpayers of the valley, will be filed, asking for the appointment of H. E. Tallant as Mr. Dodson's successor.

TO IMPROVE ROADS.

The Supervisors are planning a bond issue for road improvements. The county will be free from debt in April. Whether the incorporated cities, Escondido, Oceanside, National City, Coronado and San Diego, shall be included in the issue has not been decided.

HENRY HOWARD DEAD.

Henry A. Howard, who died yesterday, was one of the pioneer residents of the city. He came here in "boom times," and formed a copartnership under the firm name of Howard & Lyons. After an absence of several years in Los Angeles, he returned here four years ago. He organized the Ralston Company, and was at one time president of the Columbian Realty Company. With Thomas Fitch, he bought the San Diego Bee, which was afterward merged into the Union.

In its annual report, the Board of Public Works will recommend the purchase of a suitable site for the erection of a new City Hall.

CARPENTERS' STRIKE.

On account of the announcement that wages would be cut to $3.25 a day, the carpenters who were at work on the Hotel Grant, struck today. Some weeks ago they voluntarily reduced their schedule from $4 to $3.50 a day, but the present action is taken by Contractor Leonard without their consent.

ELKS SCORE TRIUMPH.

Enthusiastic Redlands Audience Hears "Brown's in Town"—Unity Church Meeting.

REDLANDS, Feb. 29.—The Elks gave their first performance of "Brown's in Town" last evening, and repeated it tonight. It is a farce and abounds in amusing situations. The lodge has in two of its most popular members, Carl and Hal Smith, former actors of unusual talent. Mrs. Carl Smith has also been an actress, and these three and Mrs. Henry Stockbridge of Los Angeles assured the success of the play. The others in the cast were: Senator Henry M. Willis, Charles R. Jones, Gordon Sucher, Frances Hamilton and Babbett Gagel. An enthusiastic audience filled the house to overflowing. It is expected that the proceeds will amount to several thousand dollars.

UNITY CHURCH MEETING.

At the annual meeting of Unity Church last evening, 120 people were present. It was preceded by an elaborate supper, served by the young women of the church. A. G. Simonds, president of the board of trustees, gave the financial statement, and then named J. J. Suess and Mrs. I. G. Davis as a nominating committee for trustees. A. G. Simonds and W. A. Nichols will succeed themselves for a term of three years; E. B. Patterson will succeed William Stowe Devol and Mrs. M. G. Austin will succeed herself.

Mrs. J. E. Noyes, Mrs. I. G. Davis and Mrs. L. J. A. Stone spoke briefly upon the work of the Woman's Branch Alliance. J. J. Suess reviewed the work of the church, under the guidance of Rev. Maxwell Savage, and moved a rising vote of thanks to the minister. George C. Griswold gave a brief sketch of Longfellow, whose birthday anniversary it was, and the closing address was by the pastor.

Bankrupt Shoe Sale.

The bankrupt shoe stock of M. Lesser was purchased from the San Francisco Board of Trade for 55c on the dollar by the Mammoth Shoe House, and will go on sale commencing tomorrow at their store, 519 S. Broadway.

FIRST BAD SIGN IS IN THE BACK

BEST NOT TO NEGLECT NATURE'S DANGER SIGNALS IN SUCH CASES.

Too Much Kidney and Bladder Trouble Here in Los Angeles—Harmless Prescription Given Which Anyone Can Prepare at Small Cost. Relieves Rheumatism and Backache, and Is Really Wonderful.

Take care of backache. A great many cases of kidney complaint are reported about here, also bladder trouble and rheumatism.

An authority once stated that pain in the back, loins or region of the kidneys is the danger signal nature hangs out to notify the sufferer that there is something wrong with the kidneys, which should receive immediate attention. Only vegetable treatment should be administered and absolutely no strongly alcoholic patent medicines, which are harmful to the kidneys and bladder.

The following prescription, while simple, harmless and inexpensive, is known and recognized as a sovereign remedy for kidney complaint. The ingredients can be obtained at any good prescription pharmacy and anyone can mix them: Compound Kargon, one ounce; Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime.

This preparation is said to restore the natural function of the kidneys, so they will sift and strain the poisonous waste matter, uric acid, etc., from the blood, purifying it and relieving rheumatism. Backache will be relieved, the urine will be neutralized and cleared and no longer a cause of irritation, thereby overcoming such symptoms as weak bladder, painful, frequent and other urinary difficulties.

This is worth trying and may prove just what many people here need.

A Large Cancer in Each Breast.

Cured Without Knife or Pain — Patient Visited Doctor's Office Every Day and Cared for Her Two Children---Almost a Miracle!

Naco, Ariz., Feb. 27, 1908.

Mrs. Hudspath, a prominent and wealthy lady of this place, has just returned home from Los Angeles, where she went two weeks ago to have a large cancer in each breast cured by Dr. S. R. Chamley, the most successful cancer specialist living, so stated by the leading magazines and medical journals. The writer has known of at least one hundred cancers that Dr. Chamley has cured. He has had offices in both Los Angeles and San Francisco for nearly twenty years and has published and sends free the most wonderful book on cancers, cured without knife or pain, ever written.

The doctor offers $1000 if he fails to cure any cancer he treats before it poisons deep glands. He charges nothing until cure is complete. The book teaches that any lump in woman's breast is cancer.

Mrs. Hudspath says she saw women who said that they had actually seen miracles performed there; large cancers drop out without a particle of pain or blood shed. The book is full of testimonials of ministers, doctors and millionaires who have been cured. Mrs. Hudspath will be pleased to write to any one all about her wonderful cure.

FIRST CEREMONY OF KIND.

Picturesque Wedding at Masonic Temple Under Auspices of Order of Eastern Star.

A novel wedding was solemnized last evening, at Masonic Temple when Miss Elizabeth Bauer of New Jersey became the bride of Lewis F. Zazier of the Zazier Brothers Company. The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Robert J. Burdette, was under the auspices of Pacific Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. It was the first marriage of the kind on the Pacific Coast. A floral altar was erected in the center of the hall over a large cloth star. On each point of the star, a pillar, festooned with smilax and ablaze with fancy lights, was placed. A canopy of white satin ribbon and asparagus plumosus completed the pretty arrangements.

The bride, attired in a over soft silk and Miss Jessica Smith, the worthy matron, marched into the room, preceded by officers of the lodge, all of whom carried shower bouquets of pink carnations. Then the officers, who include Oswald Justice, Mrs. Hattie Walker, Mrs. Mary Wirth, Mrs. S. Smith, Miss Mamie Smith, Mrs. Ethel Roth, Mrs. Sarah Thatcher, Mrs. Elizabeth Winston, Mrs. Bruce Davis, Miss Ethel Cross, Miss Clara Perras, Miss Agnes Buisseret, Miss Lottie Young, Mrs. Mary McDowell, Miss Anna Shorb and George Wood, stood in a circle around the altar. Miss Bauer was given away by the matron.

After the service a musical and literary programme was rendered. A beautiful cut glass water set was given to the young couple by members of the

No need of days when you are not at your best. No need of headaches, dullness, irritability. A Cascaret, taken in time, avoids them.

All women need Cascarets.

Simply because they don't exercise enough. They don't eat coarse food, or enough fruit and green vegetables.

Those are Nature's ways for keeping the bowels active. But very few women employ them.

The next best way is Cascarets.

Nearly all the minor ills of women can be avoided by Cascarets alone.

There is no need to have headaches, depression, bad breath, bad complexion.

The remedy is Cascarets.

Not in large doses—unless you wait too long. The best way is one Cascaret at a time—just when you need it.

One every day, perhaps.

It is simply a matter of keeping clean inside, as you do on the outside.

You don't use soap in large quantities, and rarely. You use it frequently, regularly, just as you need it.

Do the same with Cascarets.

Then you are always well, always at your best.

Cascarets are candy tablets. They are sold by all druggists, but never in bulk. Be sure you get the genuine, with CCC on every tablet. The price is 50c, 25c and nion prices continue to advance owing to ht receipts. The local market depends for supply almost entirely on Oregon; a few rmudas are arriving from Imperial Valley, t are of inferior quality. Colorado and Ohio ons are not showing good keeping quali- s in this warm climate and many have outed. This has caused considerable loss. will be at least three weeks before the tter Bermudas begin to arrive in quantity d since they are controlled principally by e company, the California Vegetable Union, ces are expected to remain high. At pres- jobbers are asking up to $4 per hundred fancy grade stocks.

HE MARKETS.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

resh candled eggs have declined to 19 cents dozen. Forty cases of case-count were sold sterday below this quotation and northern gs are still cheaper. A few eggs are go- into storage for possibly two or three eks. The present product has no long- eping qualities owing to the fact that the ns are eating so much green or soft feed. is produces a fine egg for immediate con- mption, but one worthless for keeping. Ar- als yesterday were 856 cases.

Butter receipts were 19,260 pounds of the olah creamery product; the week's arrivals re among the best in several months. There re no changes in quotations, but weakness as apparent in the heavy offerings. Extras, sts, cooking and eastern butter were all aced on sale without bringing buyers at the ver figures in force.

heese receipts were not reported, but of- rings were large. Ten cases of northern esh full cream sold considerably below the ted price. All varieties are showing weak- s. Tulare, longhorns and Daisy cheese are ong the best sellers.

Potato receipts were 3306 sacks. Never in history of California have so many po- oes been raised and nearly 100,000 sacks main in the hands of the growers, while e new crop is being planted and in some aces harvested. The acreage under potatoes is year was nearly twice as large as last. ferings were heavy and seed potatoes had particular demand. Volunteers are plentiful d are principally from the Sacramento River Valley.

Light arrivals of beans aided in strength- ing the price during the latter portion of e week. Yesterday only 56 sacks were re- ived. Lady Washingtons, pinks and limas re the chief offerings.

he price on sweet potatoes remains sta- nary and the receipts were 74 sacks. Of- ings were light. The demand for nuts was tter last week, almonds, peanuts and chest- ts moving freely. Walnuts are pretty well aned up.

The first ruby blood oranges of the season rived yesterday and sold for $2.50 a box. her citrus stock moved better and there as a general clean-up in all lines of fruit. rawberries were lower again and there was fractional decline in bananas. A large nsignment of Hawaiian pineapples was re- ived; the fruit will sell from 8 to 10 cents pound. Changes of prices were few in e green vegetable market.

LOS ANGELES-NEVADA EXCHANGE.

BONNIE CLAIRE ONLY FEATURE.

TRANSFERS TOTAL OF TWENTY-THREE THOUSAND SHARES.

Rumors That Debts of Concern Will Be Retired and Work Resumed. Almost Total Absence of Orders for Goldfields—Last Week's Business.

There was an almost total absence of orders for the usual favorites at yesterday's sessions of the Los Angeles-Nevada Stock Exchange, with the result that one of the quietest days in the history of the exchange was experienced. The only feature of any note was a sudden demand for Bonnie Claire, which resulted in the transfer of 23,000 shares at prices ranging from 9 to 8¾. The balance of the day's trading resulted in sales of only 3600 shares and, of this amount, only 1100 shares were accounted for by the Goldfield leaders.

While no authentic information was obtainable on the floor it is entirely probable that the demand for Bonnie Claire has been caused by definite assurance that the troubles of the company are in a fair way to be settled. It will be remembered that the company's assets are now in the hands of a receiver and that, some weeks ago, it was intimated that the heaviest stockholders had about formulated a plan by which the debts of the concern would be retired and the property again worked. It is equipped with a mill which had just been completed when the troubles shut the property down.

The Goldfield demand was confined to 600 shares of Daisy, which went at 1.06—two points down from the last sales of the previous day, and 400 shares of Fraction, which showed a recession of two points from last sales. One hundred shares of Extension commanded 42½, a loss of two points.

Last week's transactions show a serious falling-off from normal levels, only totaling 270,-900 shares of a value of $59,007.25, as against 274,500 shares for the previous week, with a value of $84,695. Daisy again led in value, with, transfers of 22,300, worth $22,797; Consolidated was second, with 1700, at $8110; Florence third, with 1400, at $5735; Jumbo Extension fourth, with 9400, at $3959; Bonnie Claire fifth, with 41,000, at $3697.50, and Johnnie sixth, with 27,000 shares, at $3247.50.

LOS ANGELES-NEVADA EXCHANGE QUOTATIONS.

LOS ANGELES STOCK EXCHANGE.

GOOD DAY IN LOCAL STOCKS.

UNION TRANSPORTATION BONDS SHOW ACTIVITY.

Trade Restricted, but Brisk—Associated Oil Sells to Extent of Seventy-five Shares—Home Preferred Seeks Lower Levels—Bank and Mine Stocks Neglected.

Business conditions on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange yesterday were much improved, compared with the previous day. Trading was active in a few restricted issues, and the bidding, as a whole, was strong.

The feature of the session was the sale of five $1000 bonds of the Union Transportation Company, which changed hands at 87. This is the first sale in these bonds, or any others, in fact, for several weeks. The close was 87@88, the bid showing an advance of one point. There was sharp bidding for Associated Oil Company bonds, which closed at 79@83, up two and three points, respectively, compared with quotations for the last week. Bidding for Home Telephone First Mortgage bonds also was heard, and they closed quoted at 78@82, two points higher for the bid, compared with Friday's closing. Edison Electric First Refunding bonds were up one point also, closing at 95@1.00.

Associated Oil engaged the attention of most of the traders during the call on the oil securities. Sales totaled 75 shares. Prices ranged from 29.25 for a five-share lot, to 29.37½ cash for the regular board lots, and reached 29.75 on a buyer thirty contract, where ten shares were involved. The close was at 29.25@29.50, the asked price being off one-fourth point. Few changes were made in the remainder of the list. Union closed at 215.00@219.50, up one point on the bid and off one-half on the asked compared with the preceding day. There was a fresh bid of 75.00 for Western Union, which was not offered. Others were inactive.

Ten shares of Home Telephone Preferred sold at 49.75, setting the market level for the day, the stock closing at 49.37½@49.75, off one-eighth compared with Friday's closing, while the asked price was down three-eighths. United States Long Distance closed with 45.00 bid, and was offered at 47, no sales being reported. Other industrials were unchanged. The bank stocks closed the day unchanged from the previous session's quotations.

Business on the mining call was represented by the transfer of a 5000-share lot of Consolidated Mines on a buyer-sixty contract at 1 1-8 cents a share. The remainder of the list was neglected.

During February business on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange amounted to $106,653.30, representing the market price at which 290,984 shares of stock and bonds changed hands. Eight bonds were sold on the floor during the month at $6225. Industrials and public utilities stocks were handled to the extent of 674 shares at $24,469.30. There were 38,102 shares of oil stock handled, having a valuation of $61,556.75. Mining stocks were traded in to a total of 252,200 shares at $14,402.25.

FRIDAY'S SMALL GAINS MORE THAN LOST.

Narrowness of the Market Clearly Shown When Room Traders Attempt to Take Profits—Government Action Against Harriman Roads Sends Prices on Downward Course.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The tone of dull depression reasserted itself in the stock market today and yesterday's small gains were more than lost. Room traders found themselves long of stocks as a consequence of yesterday's movement and, when they attempted to take profits the narrowness of the market was clearly demonstrated. News of the day was unfavorably construed. The assertions current earlier in the week regarding the revival in the copper trade came in for some dispute and demand for that metal from producers of finished products was pronounced to be still insignificant. Former rumors of reopening of operations in Montana and of consolidated control in the copper industry were without verification and lost their influence. The consequence of the measures by the government at Washington to enjoin the payments of Southern Pacific dividends into the Union Pacific treasury came into renewed discussion. These developments turned the principal stocks which led yesterday's advance towards a downward course and affected the whole market by sympathy. The attempt by the Texas State authorities to force a receivership for the Texas and Pacific disturbed speculative sentiment and aroused apprehensions of bad effects on railroad properties generally. A bad impression was caused by the unexpected receivership for the Orient National Bank, for which success was hoped in the efforts to resume operations. The prospect of an unfavorable bank statement was of some sentimental effect although the immediate condition in the money market is not a pressing factor in the stock market. Sterling exchange receded and the Bank of England received a large consignment of gold from Egypt. The private discount rate in Paris, however, advanced. The London press voices the opinion that foreign exchange at New York is being kept down by a considerable investment of European money in the United States and reports that American railways continue to realize additional capital by means of short term notes, many of which were placed in London. It was in the statement of actual conditions of the clearinghouse banks on Friday night and not in the statement of averages, that the week's cash decrease was reflected. The expansion in the loan accounts cuts some figures in progress for the week that has not appeared in the newspapers. Bonds irregular, total sales, par value $1,456,-000; U. S. 3's have advanced ⅛. The 3's registered 1 and the coupon 4's, 1 per cent. on call during the week.

BULLS RULE IN WHEAT MARKET.

BUYERS FIND THEIR INSPIRATION IN DOMESTIC SITUATION.

Foreign News Ignored and Leading Cereal Rules Strong and Exceedingly Firm All Day—Corn Is eBaringly Firm All Day—Corn Is Bear-Active.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29.—The wheat market was strong all day and sentiment at times was extremely bullish. There was a feeling of uncertainty at the start owing to a decline at Liverpool, but the market soon became strong and continued decidedly firm the balance of the day.

Demand for several of the larger commission houses led in the buying. Foreign news was almost totally ignored and buyers found their inspiration in the domestic situation. Primary receipts were again very light and stocks of wheat in store at a number of grain centers were said to be materially depleted. Selling throughout the day was chiefly by holders. Prices reacted considerably late in the session on reselling, but the close was firm.

May opened ⅛ to ¼ lower at 97⅞@95⅛, advanced to 99¾ and closed at 99¼.

Trade in corn was very light and the market failed to respond to the strength of wheat, sentiment in the pit being bearish all day. May closed easy at 61.

Oats were quiet and steady. May closed at 53@53¼.

Provisions were active and strong. Much smaller receipts of live hogs than had been generally expected were chiefly responsible for the improved tone. At the close, May pork was up 17½, lard was 10 higher and ribs were up 10 to 12½.

Cash quotations were as follows: Flour was firm; spring patents, 5.05@5.30; straights, 4.20@4.60; bakers, 2.75@4.25; winter patents, 4.40@4.45; straights, 4.10@4.45; No. 2 spring wheat, 1.08@1.12; No. 3, 98@1.10; No. 2 red, 96¾@99¼; No. 2 corn, 58¼@59; No. 2 yellow, 60@61; No. 2 oats, 53¾@53; No. 3 white, 51@53¼; No. 2 rye, 82; fair to choice malting barley, 82@90; No. 1 northwestern flaxseed, 1.19; clover, contract grades, 19.50; short ribs, sides (loose,) 5.87½@6.50; mess pork, per bbl., 11.25@11.45; lard, per 100 lbs., 7.40; short clear sides (boxed,) 6.37½@6.62½; whisky, basis of high wines, 1.25.

Weekly Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The statement of the clearinghouse banks for the week shows that the banks hold $29,262,675 more than the requirements of the 25 per-cent. rule. This is a decrease of $3,205,675 in the proportionate cash reserve as compared with last week. The statement follows: Loans, $1,161,057,700; increase, $17,088,000. Deposits, $1,167,423,700; increase, $21,323,300. Circulation, $64,133,600; decrease, $2,664,100. Legal tender, $59,850,400; decrease, $816,300. Specie, $261,318,200; increase, $2,943,400. Reserve, $321,168,600; increase, $2,127,200. Reserve required, $291,905,925; increase, $5,332,075. Surplus, $29,262,675; decrease, $3,205,675. Ex.-U. S. deposits, $43,100,200; decrease, $4,270,625. The percentage of actual reserve of the clearinghouse banks at the close of business yesterday was 27.30. The statement of savings banks and trust companies of Greater New York, not members of the clearinghouse, shows that these institutions have aggregate deposits of $722,801,000; total cash on hand, $53,093,400, and loans amounting to $289,650,500.

New York Cotton Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—In the face of the disappointing advices from Europe, our market has shown strength due to buying by a Wall-street house. The strong statistical position and small stocks in New York has attracted their attention, and they are advising purchases of cotton on a moderate scale. On their buying, the market closed steady, with May in demand. There seems to be buyers of cotton at the decline. Traders are bearish and sold short. Dick Bros. came out with a bullish circular, and these letters will have more or less effect in changing the sentiment. Port receipts are estimated at 17,000 bales, against 22,000 last week and 23,000 the same time last year.

Following is the range of prices today:

Boston Copper Market.

[BY PRIVATE WIRE TO FRED DORR.]

BOSTON, Feb. 29.—There has been quite a little action in copper shares this week, with a tendency toward higher prices, until today, when there was an evening up. They opened fairly steady and gained fractionally in the initial transactions, but the early weakness of the New York list caused a corresponding heaviness here, and stocks were offered quite freely. Traders who have been trailing the upward movement were the principal sellers and were inclined to press offerings.

Butte Coalition was sold for New York account, with Hayden & Co. the heaviest buyer. Some of the low-priced shares made wide declines on a few transactions. The market steadied toward the end, but in the final transactions was soft, and not far from lowest levels of the day.

The following from New York is affecting the market:

"It is mainly due to the foreign investment in copper that the visible supply here has been so nearly exhausted as to make the reopening of the Montana mines necessary. In October the stocks of copper were reckoned at 220,000 pounds. The production since then has been running at the rate of possibly 75,000,000 months monthly. There has all the while been a moderate domestic consumption. It will be seen how scant a margin is left of the 330,000,000 pounds, available from October to February. The statistical position of copper today is certainly stronger than in many months, the trade is infinitely healthier than a year ago, when the demand so far exceeded the supply as to create a runaway market for prices.

J. T. Atterbury says: "I am told on fairly good authority that the smelters' dividends will be at the rate of 8 per cent."

Clement Curtis says: "Copper will sell higher and the rest of the market likely will follow."

The regular dividend has been declared on Copper Range of $1.00 quarterly.

HUNGRY AS A BEAR AND CAN'T EAT.

If, When Mealtime Comes, You Suffer From a Yes-Not Kind of Hunger, You're a Dyspeptic.

How to Cure All Stomach Troubles.

A good many people get mad when you tell them they've got dyspepsia, but way down deep in their stomachs they know they've got it.

"I'd love to eat it, but I can't," is one kind of dyspepsia.

"I hate to think of it," is another kind. There are thousands of people today who hate their meals, and love them at the same time. They haven't that fine empty-hungry eat-everything-in-sight kind of feeling which goes with every good strong healthy stomach. That's because they have dyspepsia. And then there are others whose mouths don't water at meal time or at any other time. They sit at the table and go through the motions, only because it's time to eat. These people, too, are dyspeptics.

Every possible kind of stomach trouble can be cured by taking something which will just take right hold of all the food in your stomach and digest it alone without the help of the stomach, and let the stomach take a rest.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do this very thing. They are composed of the best digestive known to science, and are absolutely safe. One ingredient alone of one of these tablets will digest 3000 grains of food! These tablets do exactly the work that a good strong healthy stomach does.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure all cases of dyspepsia, indigestion, burning or irritation, loss of appetite, bloat, brash, belching, aversion to food, fermentation and gas on the stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will make you feel "good" before and after each meal, and make your stomach strong and healthy again. They will make you happy.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold at every drug store for 50c a box.

BREVITIES.

To the Public: As everybody knows the high rents in Los Angeles are altogether out of proportion to the volume of retail business; for this reason the ordinary shoe store is compelled to make an immense profit. Realizing this condition, we concluded to experiment with a "New Idea Shoe Store," in an office building where a rent of $1 a day reduced our expense to a minimum. This, with cash discounts of 25 per cent. on sample lines, has enabled us to give extraordinary shoe values, and we have demonstrated that the public appreciates bargains. Our business has grown steadily from the start, and we have hundreds of regular customers. Special values on sale Monday; all styles and sizes for men, women and children. Sample Shoe Company, top floor Bryson Block, Second and Spring sts. Take elevator.

The San Francisco Board of Trade took possession of the M. Lesser shoe stock and offered it for sale for the benefit of the creditors. Said stock was purchased by Mr. Olcovich for the Mammoth Shoe House of this city. The entire stock is here and will go on sale at bankrupt prices tomorrow at their store at 519 South Broadway. This stock is high grade, practically new, and comprises shoes for men, women and children. Extraordinary price reductions are promised. Be there tomorrow and see the big bargain display on both floors of this big shoe store.

The Ville de Paris, 317-325 S. Broadway, announce the return from eastern fashion centers of the following buyers: Miss E. Lucas, buyer of "Ville" exclusive millinery; Mrs. A. W. Morris, buyer of suits and wraps; Mr. R. E. Barry, buyer of silks and dress goods; Mr. M. A. Milbach, buyer of laces, dress trimmings, jewelry and leather goods. Exclusiveness of style is the cardinal feature that characterizes "Ville" novelties for the current season.

Sunday Real Estate Liners. Classified real estate advertisements for insertion in THE SUNDAY TIMES must be in the office not later than 10:30 o'clock Saturday night. Other "want" advertisements for Sunday insertion taken over the counter until 11:30 p.m. The great volume of liners printed in The Sunday Times, numbering regularly over 5000 separate announcements, makes this regulation absolutely necessary in order to get the big Sunday issue out on time.

The National Towel Supply and Mfg. Co., have purchased the 20th Century Laundry, and are now in position to compete successfully with the combinations, being an independent concern, the public will be served in a first-class manner at reasonable prices; remember they are not in the trust, and have located in Los Angeles to stay put notwithstanding the assertions of the combination.

Mr. Sigismund Piotrowski, the well-known pianist and teacher, has recently arrived from New York, where he has been studying with the best masters, both American and foreign, has opened up a studio for piano instruction at 1184 West Forty-sixth street. Will receive a limited number of pupils. Special care given to beginners as well as to advanced students.

Mrs. N. E. Smith, 315 W. Third st., has returned, after a month's stay in New York, bringing with her the most choice of the season's models and novelties, which are now ready for display. The coming season Mrs. Smith will make a specialty of hats to be sold for from $10 to $35. No formal opening days.

I want a few more clients to manicure, shampoo, hairdress and give facial massage as well as make puffs, switches and Janes. Will call at residence if desired by regular appointment. Phone Home A6020. Estell B. Dewey, suite 15, Renshaw Apartments, California st., and Bunker Hill ave.

EXCITING DAY.

TRACK MEET FOR POMONA.

LONG BEACH ATHLETES LOSE BY VERY CLOSE SCORE.

Louis Thompson of Losing Team Does Good Work in the Sprints, Winning Both—Pomona Finishes First in Seven Events and Forfeits Chances in the Relay Race.

Fifteen hundred people witnessed the track events here this afternoon between teams from the High Schools of Pomona and Long Beach, Pomona winning by the very close score of forty-five points to forty-one for Long Beach. The relay race was forfeited to Long Beach and this was the only event not contested. The feature of the day was the fine work of Thompson of Long Beach in the sprints. He got a very bad start in the 100-yard dash, but came fast at the finish and won. In the 220-yard dash, he jumped into the lead at the start; set the pace and was never headed, breasting the tape in twenty-five seconds. Davis, the other Long Beach runner, was handicapped by the fact that he played baseball in the morning and yet finished third in both of the sprints.

The results were as follows:

100-yard dash—Thompson, Long Beach, won; Mahoney, Pomona, second; Davis, Long Beach, third; time, 10 3-5s.

High jump—Bennett, Pomona, won; Canney, Long Beach, second; Kauffman, Pomona, third; winner's jump, 5ft. 4in.

Quarter-mile dash—Nesbit, Pomona, won; Moffit, Long Beach, second; Stone, Long Beach, third; time 1m. 36s.

Shot put—Buckles, Pomona, won; Cranston, Long Beach, second; Malcolm, Long Beach, third; distance 41ft.

220-yard dash — Thompson, Long Beach, won; Mahoney, Pomona, second; Davis, Long Beach, third; time, 25s.

Broad jump—Richards, Long Beach, won; Bennett, Pomona, second; Kauffman, Pomona, third; distance, 20ft. 4in.

Mile run—Davis, Pomona, won; Lorbeer, Pomona, second; French, Long Beach, third; time, 5m. 14s.

Pole vault—Mosher, Pomona, and Seward, Long Beach, tied; Bennett, Pomona, third; distance, 10ft. 4in.

Half-mile run—Blackmoor, Pomona, won; Lorbeer, Pomona, second; Moffit, third; time 2m. 13 2-5s.

Hammer throw—Buckles, Pomona, 141 feet; Seward, Long Beach, second, 110ft. 10in.; McIntyre, Pomona, third.

American and English Teams May Decide Superiority Before Kangaroos Are Tackled.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—While the American Lawn Tennis Association has sent a formal challenge to Australia for the Davis Cup, which was won by the Australians in England last year, it is by no means certain that a team will go to Australia to play.

Under the gift of the cup it is necessary that the challenge be made before March 1, and the challenge sent yesterday carried with it an explanation that it is made simply to qualify, and that it is not certain that a team will go to Australia. It has been tentatively proposed that the English team, for which a challenge has also been sent to Australia, come to America and play the American team to be selected to play for the cup. Then only the winning team would make the trip to Australia.

POMONA THE VICTOR.

Basketball Team of High School Has Little Trouble in Winning from Orange Five.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

POMONA, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Pomona High School basketball team, champions of the Citrus Belt League, added another victory to its list this afternoon by defeating the Orange High School team, champions of the Orange County League, in the semi-finals on the local campus. The score was 35 to 17.

The Pomona boys played a fast, consistent game in the first half, but with the score 21 to 7, and sure of victory, they eased up in the second half. It was a clean game, good feeling prevailing throughout. Clinton Evans, captain of the Pomona team, is one of the best forwards in Southern California, and Nisbit, Dills, Belcher and Kepner have established good reputations.

As a result of the victory today, the Pomona boys will meet the basketball team from Whittier High next Saturday on neutral ground at Occidental College, to struggle for the interscholastic championship of Southern California. The Pomona lads are trained to put up a fast, stiff game in the championship struggle, and will go to Occidental with a crowd of loyal rooters.

The line-up for today's game was as follows: Pomona—Evans, Nisbit, forguards. Orange — Kogler, Campbell, forwards; Riley, center; Bullingsley, Adams, guards.

The Pomona team won the championship silver cup of the Citrus Belt League on Washington's Birthday, having defeated the Redlands High School team. The team's games are: San Bernardino High School, 26 to 19; Ontario, 38 to 13; Riverside, 30 to 14; Redlands, 27 to 11.

GUESTS AT "THE BIVOUAC."

Max F. Friederang, the noted artist, arrived in the city yesterday afternoon from New York, coming via New Orleans, accompanied by Mrs. Friederang. They are guests of Gen. Otis at "The Bivouac." Mr. Friederang has gained credit and won celebrity as the rediscoverer of the lost process known as antique fresco painting, once practiced by Michelangelo, the secret of whose process was lost for hundreds of years. Mr. Friederang's studio is in Brooklyn, where he has many associate artists employed. Last year he executed a commission from the government of the United States involving an important piece of decorative oil painting upon the walls of the Supreme Court room in the Capitol. This celebrated German artist will remain in Los Angeles and Southern California for a month or more. He has been an extensive traveler, but never before visited the Pacific Slope.

TALKS OF GRAFT PROSECUTION.

Harris Weinstock of Sacramento spoke at yesterday's City Club dinner on the moral effects of the graft prosecution in San Francisco. He said that to him the saddest thing about the many misfortunes to which San Francisco has been subjected is its low moral tone, where one should rightfully look for the highest ethical spirit. "It is sad," said Mr. Weinstock, "to find men holding high public office prostituting their power, to betray their fellow citizens, to barter away their reputations—all for greed." Mr. Weinstock said that the prosecutors in the graft cases have made mistakes, but that the wonder is that these mistakes have been so few. He hopes to see many convictions, but he says that the moral effect of the municipal housecleaning that has already taken place must be of benefit to the State and to the nation. In his address, Mr. Weinstock referred repeatedly to the dulled public sense that permitted Ruef and the union-labor agitators to boost into office men known to be their creatures. He said that the effect was one that must follow such a cause.

Death of Capt. Golden.

Henry C. Golden, until three years ago agent of the Star Union Line at Kansas City, died at his home, 1031 S. Bonnie Brae street, last Wednesday morning. Capt. Golden was an invalid for three years, but death came quietly while he slept and so peaceful was his passing that his wife, who had watched over him carefully during his sickness, was not awakened. He was 64 years old and leaves a widow, who has been his devoted companion for thirty-two years.

He was born in Chatham, N. Y., and at the beginning of the Civil War enlisted in Co. E, One Hundred and Eleventh New York Volunteers, and won a commission. He was also a member of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. Soon after the war he engaged in railroad work. He was particularly well known in western railroad circles, having for a number of years held the responsible position he filled before coming to California. Close attention to work caused a general breakdown in health and in the fall of 1905 he removed to Los Angeles. The funeral service at the Cathedral on Friday was conducted by the vicar general of the diocese. The body was then taken to beautiful Calvary Cemetery and laid to rest among the flowers he loved so well. Requiescat in pace.

Members of Ct. Morris Vineyard, No. 532, I. O. F., are requested to attend the funeral of our late Bro. J. L. Menegay, Monday, March 2nd, at 2 p.m. Funeral from Dexter Samson's undertaking parlors, 1132 S. Flower st. Interment Rosedale. N. A. Pontius, C.R.

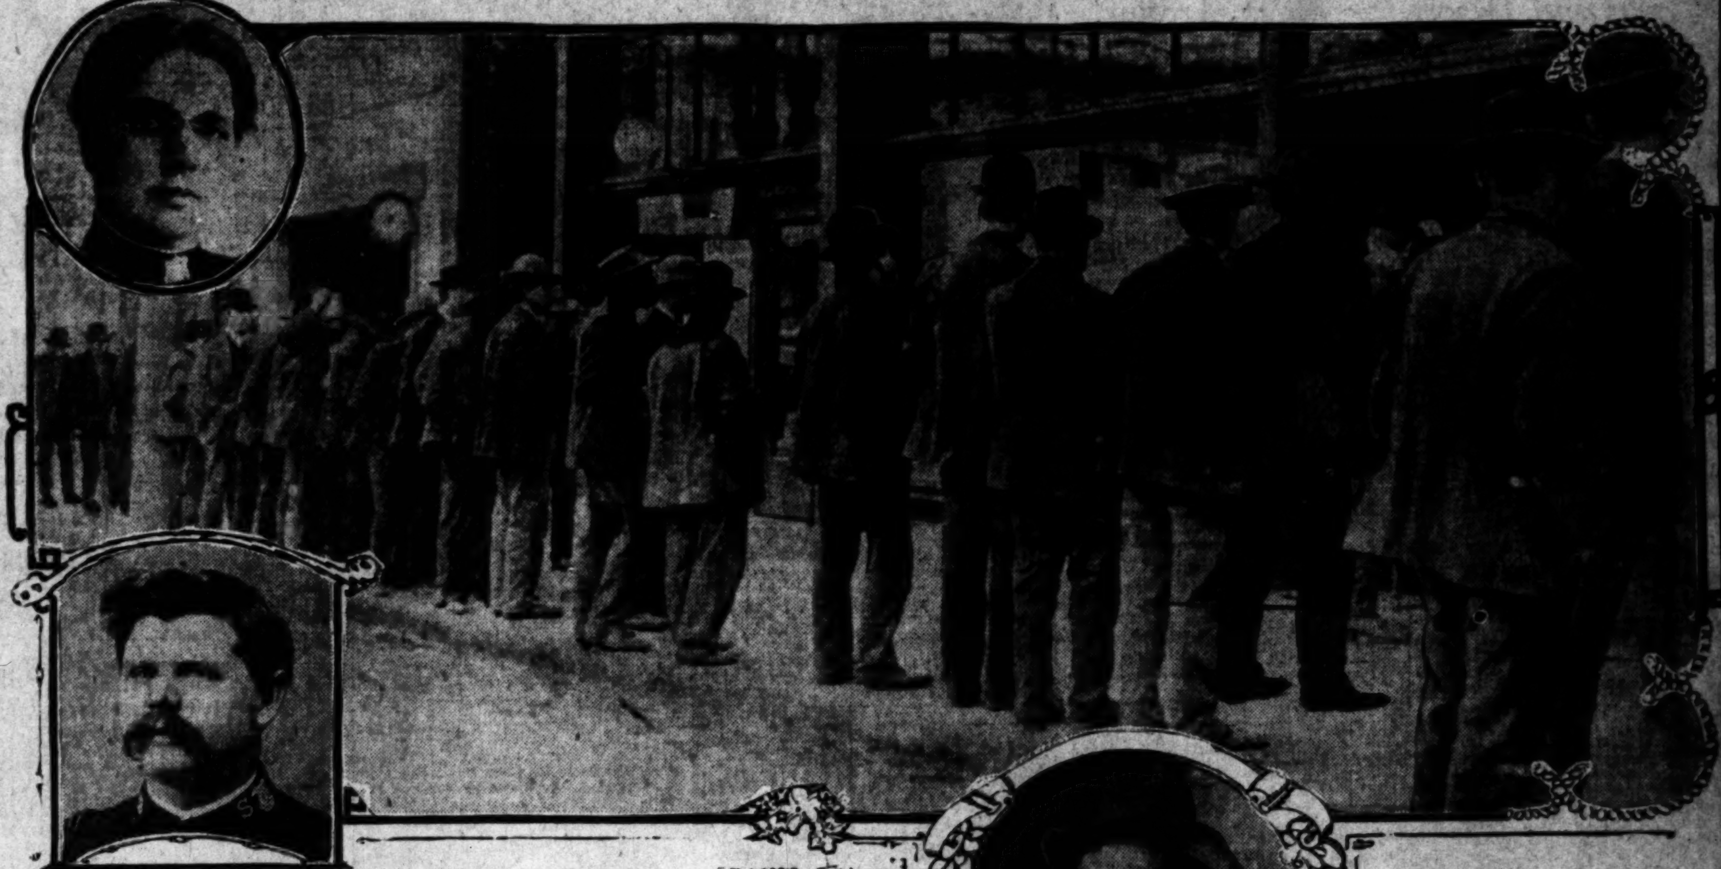
DAILY BREAD LINE SEEN IN FRONT OF SALVATION ARMY OR VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICA HEADQUARTERS, THE PAST WEEK.



THE LOWER TIER.

"MY THREE DAYS IN FREE SOUP HOUSES."

Writer for "The Times" Finds Out What It Is to Be "on the Hog."

Tells of Waiting Hours in the Bread Line and of What the Unfortunates Had to Say—Many Instances of Hard Luck That Touch the Heartstrings—With the Shipwrecked in the Cheap Lodging-houses.

BY BEN S. LEMMON.

THIS, in a nutshell, is what was ascertained by The Times writer, who, in hobo garb, investigated the free soup houses and lodging-houses for the unemployed:

That the Salvation Army and Volunteers of America are carrying on a meritorious work and helping men who are really famished and deserving.

That Dana Bartlett's "Bethlehem Institution" is a hot-bed of socialism and that proselyting is openly carried on there among the embittered and dangerous classes—the inflaming sheet, "Appeal to Reason," being passed out to the unfortunates as a starter.

That very many of the fellows who frequent the free soup houses refuse to work when work is offered to them, preferring to loaf and live on charity while they may. The Los-Angeles-Pacific Railroad has been forced to hire Japanese laborers, most of the soup-house unemployed declining the opportunity to work on the big track-widening job.

That the operations of the Salvation Army and Volunteers of America are carried on economically; and that complete and open accounts are kept.

That in the soup lines and "free beds" (mostly, but not all, paid for at 5 to 15 cents a night,) heart-stirring pathos abounds. No man can get right down into this misery without thanking God that these institutions are engaged in this work.

You are too late, it is All Gone.

It was with a sense of relief that I deciphered this sign in the hallway of the Salvation Army building at No. 123 Wilmington street. In my character of workingman out of work I had conscientiously, almost automatically, I might say, returned to the army's free soup kitchen for my bowl and "bunch of bread."

But I didn't really care for any more of the same, and I slipped away as fast as I could and dropped into a modest little restaurant on Main street. Of course, if I hadn't known that I really was not the hobo I looked I shouldn't have had the courage to go into so respectable-looking a place as this. The waiters eyed me askance, but I rattled a couple of dollars in the pockets of my corduroy trousers, and they took my order for short ribs of beef, potatoes, macaroni and cheese, coffee and pie. I was hungry, you see. For I had been living at soup kitchens for two days, just to find out how fares and feels the man who is out of work and out of money.

Not soon shall I forget the sensations which crowded upon me when first I took a place in the Salvation Army's soup line on Wilmington street.

"We want you to go out and live with the unemployed for three or four days," said my editors to me. "Mingle with them, eat with them, sleep with them, live as they live. Find out whether it is true that there are hundreds of hungry men in Los Angeles, and what is being done for them. Get their experiences, their points of view. See what the Salvation Army, the Volunteers and 'Bethlehem' are doing for the poor which they are supposed to befriend; how faithful they are to the trust given them by the charitable people of the city. Be a hobo of the hobos, keep your eyes and ears open and come back and write what you see and hear and feel."

With these instructions, then, I donned, Tuesday morning, such garments as I thought fitting the character I was to assume, and went forth to find and to learn. I may as well admit in passing that it was with some mortification I came to swift realization that clothes make the man, and want of them the fellow. I was immediately and unreservedly accepted by the hobos, whom I quickly found, and with whom I commingled as one of their number and ilk. None questioned or suspected me. Was I not ragged, like them? Unshaved, ungroomed, homeless and hungry? Undoubtedly I looked as bad as they, and certainly I was hungry, else I would not be in the soup line.

If any might have been disposed to suspect my masquerade, my position in the soup line at once allayed all mistrust. For no man may be found here who is not "down on his luck," "on the hog for proper." This is the logic of the submerged, and it may not be refuted by any man who ever has shared their hard lot.

CAME EARLY.

It was 11:30 when the soup line began to form, although the sign in the hallway read plainly enough: "We serve soup—12 o'clock noon." But these fellows were hungry, mind you. Some of them had had a bowl of black coffee for their breakfast with a big piece of bread. Some of them had tasted no food since soup hour the day before. And they knew that those who came first would eat soup first. So, half an hour before the doors to the Salvation Army chapel would be opened, the soup line was forming. Soon it extended the length of the hallway from the chapel doorway to the street and began to extend north on Wilmington toward First street. At noon, when the doors were opened, 200 men were waiting. I was midway down the line, and already beginning to feel the impatience which many of them openly expressed.

"Pretty tough," said an old fellow in the line just behind me. He pronounced it as if it were spelled with a double oo. "Pretty toof, all these fellers hungry and aint got no money." And he shook his head mournfully. Efforts to extract further philosophy from him failed. He had expressed the sum and substance of his reflections and he had nothing further in the way of conversation to vouchsafe. A beaten, broken old man he was, with faded, weary blue eyes and mouth all pitifully sagged at the corners. The creased and corrugated skin on the neck, the blunted finger ends, the bowed back and patient, humble air of dejection and defeat told his story: here was the workingman, without craft or trade, grown old and useless for the real work of the world, and, now, at a time when able-bodied men were glad to pick up odd jobs, standing no chance whatever to secure employment of any kind. A legitimate member of the soup line, he.

BUMMING THREE YEARS.

Later I talked to the old fellow some more and I learned that he had been living on the bounty of the Salvation Army for three years.

The doors opened and the soup line passed into the chapel. The first dozen men took the seats in the back row of chairs on the right of the hall; the

TOO LOFTY.

POMONA FROWNS ON HIGH THOUGHT WAVE.

Young Doctor Who Shared Roycroftie Ideas With Pretty Nurse Makes for Tall Buildings Here After Stormy Suburban Career.

KICKED in the ribs by the rude papa of his soul's affinity.

Thrust out of the Pomona Hospital.

Debarred the courtesies of the medical society.

Requested, peremptorily, by his medical partner to take his duds and move out.

These are some of the things that have happened to Dr. R. K. Barry of Pomona, formerly of East Aurora, N. Y.,—the home of Elbert Hubbard and the Roycrofters—who tried to bring the Higher Thought to Pomona.

Although strong for county division, Pomona wasn't prepared for the pale intellectual ideas of East Aurora—the birthplace of the Philistine.

Dr. Barry, although nonchalant and airy and young, is completely discouraged about Pomona. Yesterday afternoon he packed up and came to Los Angeles—reflecting that the philosopher ever has had the crust end of the loaf.

The young lady who discovered, East Aurora-wise, that her soul was attuned to the doctor's, has been asked to leave the hospital—"resigned"—virtually spanked and sent home.

Her name is Daisy Bates.

She, like the East Aurora doctor, has a pale high brow, a 60-horse-power intellect and—curves.

It is enough to make one shudder to relate this tragedy of bulging thoughts.

HOW IT STARTED.

About three months ago, there came to Pomona a New York capitalist with a sick son. He was recommended to Dr. George W. Forrester of Pomona for treatment.

Dr. Forrester's work was very pleasing to the boy's father.

"Why," he said, "you have done even better than Dr. Barry could have done." He spoke in much the same tone a man might have talked of Aesculapius.

The local physicians were much impressed and learned that Dr. Barry was a young man living in that city of throbbing brows—East Aurora, N. Y.

When, a little later, Dr. Barry of East Aurora intimated that he would like to come to California, Dr. Forrester was only too delighted to take him into partnership. Dr. Forrester himself had more business than he could attend to. He needed a partner.

When Dr. Barry arrived he was received with open arms.

There is a residence clause to the constitution of the Pomona Medical Society making a probationary term of waiting necessary. But they could hardly wait for Dr. Barry.

At a meeting held at Dr. Forrester's residence, they let down the bars and made a special arrangement whereby Dr. Barry was to be admitted to certain special privileges before attaining full membership.

At the nurses' training school, attached to the Pomona Hospital, there was a vacant chair on the faculty.

Arrangements actually were under way for Dr. Barry to be raised to this distinction when this dreadful thing befell Pomona.

ALL SO ROYCROFTIE.

Daisy Bates, the prettiest girl at the hospital, announced that the awfully fascinating Dr. Barry had been making love to her, and that he had a wife and children in Roycroftie East Aurora.

Miss Daisy herself was hauled before the horrified hospital matron and closely questioned. But she was defiant—"philosophical."

They didn't know what to do about it. Daisy was a beautiful girl of a good family in Rialto. She was quiet and much liked at the hospital; but the trouble with Miss Bates was, she was intellectual.

It is claimed that she told the girls in the hospital the young doctor's attentions were forced upon her. But she didn't seem to mind much. She discussed it calmly.

Dr. Barry was also summoned before the hospital committee. It was a hot session.

Miss Bates was called upon to repeat her story in his presence and, it is alleged, did not do so. She became confused and rattled.

The end of it was that her resignation was "accepted" by the hospital.

RUSHES WORK ON RAILROAD

Southern Pacific Moving In Owens Valley.

Anticipating Adjustment o Rates With City.

Means New Industrial Epoc for Southwest.

Confident that the negotiations pen ing with the Board of Public Wor over freight rates will reach an ear and amicable adjustment, the Sout ern Pacific Company is rushing th construction work of its new railroa line from Mojave to Keeler, in th Owens Valley.

More than 150 cars of rails and ti for use on the line have been receive at Mojave, and the construction cre in charge of Contractor Whittmeye has already completed the grade f more than a mile and a half of th new road.

Thursday evening Gen. Chaffee an Mayor Harper talked with Contracto Whittmeyer about the progress on th new line. To them he said that if th company furnishes him men and material he can build the road into Keele within eighteen months. He has estimated that he can have the line ov the first section, to Jawbone Cañon ready for operation within sixty day

"As to this question of freight rate and the final agreement with the cit of Los Angeles, you probably know great deal more about that than I do, said Mr. Whittmeyer to Gen. Chaffe "I have been sent here by the company to start work on a new line int Keeler, and I am following instructions."

The railroad men at Mojave say tha the crews of two work trains that ar to assist in the new road have alread been selected; brakemen on bot freight and passenger trains on th Mojave division are laying their plan to win a conductorship on the ne line.

NEW INDUSTRIAL EPOCH.

The opening of the road to Keele will mark a new epoch in the industrial development of the Southwest While this line is building the Southern Pacific Company expects to wide the gauge of the road running fro Reno to Keeler and the entire lin from Reno to Mojave will be of standard construction.

This will mean a short freight hau from Reno to Los Angeles. It wil avoid the heavy grades of the Sierra and will clip at least twenty-four hour from the running time between th two cities. The Union Pacific will become an active competitor of the Santa Fé and the Rock Island for the perishable freight business of Southern California.

Through the new gateway trade wil come to Los Angeles that has heretofore gone to the North and East; th road will make Los Angeles the natural shipping and receiving point f Central California and Southern Nevada.

The advisory commission of th aqueduct has reached the conclusion that all bids submitted a month ag for carrying Owens Valley freight shall be rejected, and that the city shall readvertise. In reply to the request from the commission that the Southern Pacific name a lower rate for freight than that proposed in its bid, the attorneys for the company have advised that it enter into no contract except at a figure named in a competitive contest.

COMPETITORS TO BID.

The Los Angeles and Owens Valley Railroad has signified its intention to bid if the contract is readvertised, but this company is asking that the city move its base to a point twenty-five miles from Mojave. This road will not enter Mojave itself, and is somewhat remote from the city's cement plant at Tehachepi. The new advertisement will be worded, however, so that both companies may compete.

The aqueduct commission is asking that the freight rate named on the new line shall be the same as that which prevails at present in the district adjacent to Mojave. This means a rate of about 5 cents per ton mile; the bid submitted by the Southern Pacific Company provides for a rate of 6

GOLD—SALT?

BACK-YARD "STRIKE" SETS MOJAVE WILD.

Town and Desert for Miles Around Staked as Placer Claims, Gun Fight Over Cemetery and Citizens Guarding—Gilded Hoax.

He Started the Wild Gold Fever.

S. Clark, the man who inoculated all Mojave, at work on his placer claim in the back yard, "horning" the black sand that came out of the cesspool.

RUSTY, decrepit oyster can half-filled with black, greasy sand that came out of a cesspool, has set the ert town of Mojave gold mad.

he disreputable mess came from a e that Dingy Clark, the cactus-belt cher, was digging in his back yard. Dempsey, the desert postmaster, ysician and handy man about town, d it looked like pay dirt, and he t a can of it to a Los Angeles as- er for investigation.

hat was ten days ago. By noon terday the last foot of land within corporate limits of Mojave had n staked out as placer claims. The ngs extend for miles out on the sert.

Tuesday three prospectors engaged a picturesque gun fight over the lo- tion of a choice section in the "city" metery. A citizens' committee has en formed to keep watch over the aveyard lest the gold-mad pros- ctors turn the very corpses out of eir coffins.

The girls in the Harvey eating-house, d the clerks in charge of the ware- uses of the Los Angeles Aqueduct, ve deserted their posts to go gold ning.

The Los Angeles assayer sent back report to Doc Dempsey that the ack sand in his oyster can is worth .50 a cubic yard. A placer miner in nd like that could clean up $200 a y.

PROSPECTORS FLOCKING IN.

The news of that discovery has been refully guarded from the public, but has swept across the desert as only e rumor of a new strike can travel. iners are trudging across the pallid, kali plains from camps 150 miles way in the hope of locating some for- tten niche in the desolate, windswept ush that stretches for miles away on l sides of Mojave. The thirst of the esert is reddening their eyes and velling their tongues, but they are aggering on, wrapt in the hallucina- on that pay dirt awaits them at the d of the bow.

Mojave lives and breathes in the amor of hidden treasure. At night e residents gather on the one strag- ling steeet that extrends the length the town and feast their eyes on the ectric lights that twinkle like stars the distance at the entrance to the ueen Esther mine, on the mountain- de to the south. On this mountain- de are located mines that are valued t $15,000,000.

Half the residents of the place work r hire in those mines; their lives are long dream of gold. Naturally, they ere ready and eager to believe that illions of free gold lay hidden be- eath the shifting sands of the valley.

RUMOR THAT IT'S A HOAX.

But even as the last location was ade the rumor crept in from nowhere hat it isn't pay dirt, after all, that ome one "salted" the black sand in he oyster can just to get a joke on Doc Dempsey, and that it is all a hoax.

Thursday afternoon a representative f The Times visted Dingy Clark's mine in the back yard of his restau- rant. He found Clark there in per- son working away in the wasting desert sun "horning" out the black sand. The prospect wasn't panning well, and Clark looked worried.

"I don't know whether it is pay dirt r only just the black sand of the desert," said Clark, moodily, as he squinted at the "traces" in his pan. "All hat I know is that Doc Dempsey sent some of it away, and the report came back from the assayer that it would run better than $41 to the yard. If it's salted it won't be very healthy 'round here for the fellows that did the trick; and if it wan't salted it's funny that we can get only a trace when we horn it out."

AFTER IT FORTY YEARS.

Clark is a product of the California mining districts. He has followed the lure of pay dirt for forty years. The desert has swallowed up three of his partners and it has burned his skin to the texture of dried parchment. A few times he has "struck it rich," and he has saved enough to enable him to establish a restaurant, a butcher shop, and a cold-storage plant in Mojave.

"I wan't lookin' f'r gold," he explained, half apologetically, "but I wan't passin' nothin' up, an' when the report came back from that assayer I did a little locating on my own accord. I have sent some of the sand away self to make certain whether it is t or not." ering his voice to a gurgling, confidential tone, "I don't take no stock in it, but y' never can tell where lightnin'll strike in the gold country, and I ain't takin' no chances.

"Now, if Murray, m' old partner, was here, he'd know just whether it was pay dirt. But Murray's been gone this twelvemonth, owin' to th' perversity of a mule."

"Murray wanted to make a prospector out of that mule," he added, talking half to himself, "but th' mule didn't like Murray and it didn't like the desert. One noon twelve month back th' mule broke away from Murray and headed right out for the desert. Peared like it was dead set on commetteed suicide.

END OF MURRAY.

"Murray wan't goin' to let no mule get th' better of him so he started out after th' varmit. About the middle of the next forenoon the mule came strolling back kind o' lazy like, but Murray didn't come along.

We made up a little party and went out an' brought his body back; that's how I lost my partner—owin' to the pervarsity of a mule. An' now I strike what they say's pay dirt right in my own back yard."

Down in the Harvey eating house the waitresses are making a sorry mess of the Harvey cut glass and China. Each girl has her placer claim. She thinks that by the middle of next week she can throw up her job; she can't get her mind down to ham and with a ribber on the coals when her automobile is waiting for her, just around the corner.

CITY'S FORCE "MINING."

When Mayor Harper and Engineer Mulholland visited the city's warehouses at Mojave Wednesday night they found a lone clerk on guard. He said that the rest of the force was out doing development work on their placer claims. Two hours later they came strolling in for the night. The aqueduct boys have located eight claims; they say ex-Fire Chief Tom Strohm is at their head. They work for the city during the day, and at night they go out and dig industriously away sinking their shafts through the black sand that the Los Angeles assayer has reported to be filled with free gold.

Engineer Mulholland snorted his disgust when they told him their story.

"Suppose Clark did strike some pay dirt in the sand in his back yard," said Mulholland. "It doesn't follow that the valley's full of it. This is all made ground. Naturally there are traces of lost gulches under the surface and in some of them may be pockets of gold; but you won't find enough to pay you for sinking the hole.

The gold seekers looked discouraged, but not disillusioned; they have faith in Mulholland, but the gold fever has to run its course.

RAILROAD MEN "WISE."

No one in Mojave will father the rumor that the black sand in Doc Dempsey's oyster can was salted; but the railroad men have taken no part in the general stampede to locate placer claims. It seems that the men in the frieght yards have inside information that has rendered them immune to the fever.

Here is the story that one of the yard men told to a Los Angeles friend.

"I was going through the yard one evening two weeks ago when I heard a couple of the old-timers chuckling to themselves over the joke they had worked off on Doc Dempsey. Two days afterward a dozen fellows came down here from Tehachepi and located placer claims right in town. We had a rumpus with a couple of them who wanted to do their development work in the freight yards. They said they had a right to locate railroad property, but we couldn't stand for it.

"A couple of days after that word went round that Clark had found the black sand in his back yard, and the postmaster had sent it to Los Angeles to be assayed. Those fellows who came down from Tehachepi are all friends of Clark.

"I told some of the boys about the talk I had heard and we went round and got some of that black sand, too. We sent it over to the assayer at the Queen Esther mine. He is a relative of one of the boys, and he made us a test.

His report on two samples is that it runs about $1.35 a yard. It must run $2 a yard to pay expenses. That's why none of the railway boys has placer claims up here."

LOVELESS.

IRATE FATHER PLAYS CUPID.

CALLER SCARED INTO SUDDEN UNION WITH HOSTESS.

Girl's Parent Enters Parlor About Midnight and Compels Her and Visitor to Go at Once to Justice of Peace—No Apparent Reason for the Act.

A strange tale of being forced into marriage by an irate father was told to Judge Smith yesterday afternoon, when R. C. Reed, a young traveling man, formerly of Berkeley, applied for an annulment of the bond. He was wedded to Wanda M. Reed at Oakland on May 4, 1904. He testified:

"I had known Miss Masow, now my wife, for three years, and I had called on her frequently at her Berkeley home, but we were not in love, nor were our relations improper in any way. One evening as I was leaving the house, about 11:30 o'clock, her father came downstairs and said: 'I will not stand this thing any longer. You have got to marry my daughter right away.' He told her to put on her things and come along with us at once.

"I protested, but it did no good. The man was enraged, and I feared him; so we started for Oakland. We were unable to get a car and had to walk two miles. We stopped for awhile at an all-night restaurant, and later Masow took his daughter to a friend's house until morning. Then he took me to a room at a lodging-house and sat up with me until daylight. When I remonstrated he said: 'If you do not marry her, I will follow you to the ends of the earth and cut your heart out.' Next morning he took us to a justice of the peace, who performed the ceremony. I was thoroughly frightened.

"After the marriage I said to him: 'What shall I do now?' He replied: 'I don't give a —— where you go. I don't believe in marriages anyhow.' We parted and I went over to San Francisco. I never lived with my wife, and have not met her more than six times since, and then it was usually by chance. We met about a year ago in a restaurant in Oakland, and talked for half an hour."

"I have known Reed and his family since my student days at the University of California," testified Attorney S. M. Haskins, the plaintiff's counsel. "His mother has never known of his marriage. He is known as a single man among his Berkeley friends, and I understand that his wife also is known to her friends by her maiden name." This was confirmed by a deposition made by a San Francisco mutual friend of husband and wife.

Judge Smith questioned Reed closely, but the latter denied that his father-in-law had any just cause for forcing the marriage.

The decree of annulment was granted.

CHORUS GIRLS' PETTED BRONCO IS MAN-HATER.

" Little Dick,"

bad broncho and man hater, who likes to be coddled and fed sugar by pretty chorus girls.

Petted and coddled by the chorus girls who visit Los Angeles with comic operas, and made love to by leading women and matinée stars, "Little Dick," a small white bronco and "horse Johnnie," has become so spoiled that the sight of a "mere man" throws him into a frenzy.

The jealous little beast stands hitched to a small, black buggy in front of the Mason Operahouse. He is there every day in the year, except Sunday; knows nearly every man who regularly passes the theater, and has learned to hate every male.

Ah, that is where Little Dick shines. He loves to be petted and fed sugar by the fair sex, and he just as eagerly throws back his ears and strikes with his fore hoofs at the men. Some expert horsemen say Dick is a Mormon, others that he is a bad horse, simply because he is shod too tightly, and his corns hurt him. Another suggests that because of bad eyes he has grown peevish.

But no matter how bad the weather or the pain of cramped hoofs, Dick always has a horse smile for the women.

Every star that has visited the Mason Operahouse for a year or more has petted the vicious little white bronco. That is, every female star has. Dick plays no favorites in the man line. He would just as soon bite a matinée hero as a hobo.

The fact that a man is an actor does not help him any. Dick is a confirmed man hater. But when a chorus girl rubs his nose he becomes like a little lamb.

Women who have got close to the bronco have been startled by feeling a gentle tug at their skirts or at their sleeves. It was only Dick trying to make friends with some one he would like to know better.

He has become so used to receiving the homage of the fair sex that he demands it.

But when a man approaches, the horse snorts, shows his teeth, his eyes go white with fury, and his ears lay back. If the man tries to make friends, the bronco strikes out viciously with his fore hoofs.

Little Dick has never yet failed to make friends with an actress, including the exclusive Maude Adams, and hopes to greet Mary Mannering with the hoof shake of an old friend when she arrives in Los Angeles this week.

HIS EIGHTH BIRTHDAY.

Deputy Tax Collector Celebrated Yesterday His Thirty-six Years With a Few Candles.

Deputy Tax Collector Clarence Chappelear celebrated his eighth birthday yesterday, and at the home of his father, Capt. H. S. Chappelear, a member of Loyal Legion, whose eldest son is a captain in the Coast Artillery, he received the proper congratulations and a cake with eight candles.

In truth Clarence Chappelear is not an infant, he boasts of 36 years, but he was born on February 29, 1872, and as leap year was skipped in 1900 he has had an opportunity to enjoy eight birthdays according to date. His next celebration will be in 1912.

Sunflowers for Profit.

The sunflower crop is one of the most profitable harvested in Russia. A good crop is worth, as it stands in the field, $20 an acre. The seeds are sold by the farmer for $1 to $1.50 a pound; then the merchants salt them and retail them for $2 a pound. At every street crossing in Russia provincial cities are stands and peddlers with baskets, selling to the passerby the salted product of the sunflower, which forms a favorite food.

The Confession of a Rebater.

E. TOBIAS EARL'S RAKE-OFFS FROM THE SOUTHERN PACIFIC, AS DESCRIBED BY HIMSELF ON THE WITNESS STAND.

THAT journalistic tumble-bug, the Evening Express, has passed almost forty years of a zig-zag, devious, indeed altogether crooked career among men.

The Times felt it to be due to the public a few days ago to refresh their memories as to the variegated history of this preposterous pretense of a newspaper. Almost from the day of ts birth it has never moved for more than a short period along any straight path. Discredited and bankrupt under ne management, which had failed to grasp the need of principle to guide a newspaper, like some filthy restaurant condemned by the health board, it has ung out a sign "Changed hands. Unler new management." But with each ergiversation, one hand has been as ame as the other and no less dirty.

If in these forty years there has wept over this community any wave f false sentiment, of dangerous docrine, of misleading notions, a heresy n politics, finance, commerce, or any ind of business which this myope, trabismic journal did not make its wn pet hobby for an hour, no "oldesthabitant" can recall what it was or hen it happened. Started as a solled "neutral" sheet, but early merg g into a Republican paper by a few en who were real Republicans, it soon ll under the influence of cranks who arped it away from its mooring in inciples and set it drifting on the dies of fallacious notions tending nohere definitely, but bumping against any rocks.

The Express has been, after being unded as a Republican paper, in sucssion, Democratic, Granger, Greencker, Workingmen's organ Populist, publican again, Free Silver, Water gan, Railroad organ, Laborite advote and personal organ of its owner, with lightning-like changes. It s been saloon advocate and Sundayool teacher by turns.

But it has never for any long period all its devious career breathed a e, independent breath.

Some clique, some corporation, monopoly or cult has always held the key what little conscience it had, and rned the little crank which made little wheels in its little head go und.

This The Times, in briefer form, felt proper to set forth a few days ago, en lo! the little, wiggling thing wled out in the gloaming, and consing in the main its guilt, with a le whining whimper, wishing to ke it appear that it had been shed in the blood of reform and s now "real good" under the moral dance of its present owner, one win T. Earl, known under the ses E. Tobias Earl and E. Toous Earl. The defense is hollow, ocritical and futile. The paper, as n, without reference to its individual trollers at different periods, has le its bed, must lie in it (which it s) and answer for its own sins.

he present pretense of virtuous duct is as preposterous a bit of ocrisy as the Evening Express r was guilty of, and that is as ch as to say that it continues to d the world's record in hypocrisy. all the will-o'-the-wisps the Exs has ever followed, not one has so dangerous as the pet hobbies is now bestriding. Never at any vious time did it lack principle so rly as today, under the guidance dictation of this wonderfully great wholly good man, Ed Earl. His r has no more conscience nor inendence than when it was owned right by a utility corporation and under that corporation's dictation its own "hired man." The Express y is posing as a "reform organ," it is under the dictation of a litclique of political mountebanks, nt above all things on bossing tics and getting the ringleaders lled on the taxpayers as officeers. The paper has no mind, no no conscience of its own. It is a k echo of the bosses of the little e whose aims are selfish, whose ved principles are un-Republican, e tendencies are socialistic. If fornians are ever misled so much follow it, we shall have the State under the dominion of men of the moral and intellectual stripe as n of Oregon, and we shall have a government as thoroughly Popc, as nearly socialistic, as that lahoma.

e hypocritical pretense of this prerous journalistic faker is that it reformed under the direction of arl. When did this blundering and ling blacksmith of an editor get the n of virtue he is now suffering ? How long since he became so ed to political bosses, to monopoa most greedy monopolist himself close ally of political bosses and polists? What soured Ed Earl uch against his old-time friends "partners in crime," W. F. Her- J. C. Stubbs, and others of the same ilk?

T. Earl first came to Los Angeles e early nineties and entered into ess at shipping fruit to eastern ets. In a few years he became a shipper on a large scale, the prinholder in a refrigerator car line, yer of fruit on account of his company, acting as a commission hant for the sale of other people's and a fruit grower himself. This ination was so exceedingly adageous to our present-day antipolist, but so disadvantageous to ruit growers of Southern Califorhat in about eight years he had inch so tight upon them that they driven to send out a Macedonian o the Interstate Commerce Comon to come here and deliver them f the clutches of a relentless inual monopolistic octopus which alleged as reaping all the harvest hich they had sowed the seed and ht the crop to perfection.

e form which this investigation mainly concerned the use of E. arl's line of refrigerator fruit cars. not only loaded his own cars but others when he could get them. being a purchaser of fruit, a shipon commission, controlling his own of fruit cars, using other cars n he could, and having fruit of his to ship, the other growers seemed ink the game a little too strenuous them to play at any longer. He ed them worse than the S. P. did.

en the commission sat in Los les, the views of J. C. Stubbs, al traffic manager of the Southern c Railway Company, whom the s, the other day, under the inn of its reform editor, called Stubbs," were placed before the tigating committee to set forth the Southern Pacific Railway pany allowed Ed Earl to run his cars over the lines, the neglectto furnish cars on the part of railroad company, as the growers ed was a part of their duty as mon carriers. Mr. Stubbs's reks are interesting:

am free to say that Mr. Earl was big for me in this matter. He had wn cars on our line, and we were pelled to take them. Before he his cars on the line, he had con- he could go to a grower as you might or he would get out of business. Mr. Earl nor any other shipper nor grower living now or ever will live, ever got or will get a cent of rebates from the Southern Pacific.

"I have recently said to Mr. Earl that I would give no other shipper a line, and we have a contract for two years, and the contract will have to be carried out."

Mr. Earl and Mr. Stubbs of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company were very good friends when they both confronted this commission to be tried. But that is not all. Mr. Hunsaker, the attorney for the orange growers, in opposition to Earl, found himself confronted, not only by the very astute Stubbs, but also by W. F. Herrin, chief counsel, and as the reformed Ed Earl says, political boss of the Southern Pacific, then acting as Mr. Earl's attorney, as well as for the railroad. Mr. Herrin was flanked by other railroad attorneys, and also by Earl's brother, to take care of his inest before the commission.

The commission wanted to know what the trouble was. Mr. Naftzger, who represented a large portion of the orange growers of Southern California, said: "I want to know if we are to be subjected to Mr. Earl's domination?"

Mr. Moulton, another orange shipper, said: "Every shipper in Southern California objects to Mr. Earl's car line."

In this investigation it came out that Earl got a draw-down of $15 a car from the railroads. It was contended that some of this ought to have gone to some of those associated with Mr. Earl in the business. He was asked: "Did you make any allowance to Mr. Maud of Arlington Heights Fruit Company last year?"

Mr. Earl's answer was: "Not that I know of."

The next question was: "Did you make allowance to shippers generally?"

Earl's answer was: "To some shippers by the C. F. X."

Question: "What allowance did you make?"

Earl's answer: "Oh, $10, possibly $15."

The allowances made to Earl himself (controlling the car company, the fruit company and the fruit-growing company) sometimes were as high as $25.

The commission made long and strenuous efforts to get at the inside history of these drawbacks and what was done with them. They asked Earl how much he made. His answer was: "I don't care to have my business made public."

Commissioner Clemens took the witness in hand, saying to him: "You see here a common carrier having a public service which is required and under the law to be done at reasonable and just rates without undue discrimination, and somebody is responsible to the shippers and to the public for reasonable rates; and it seems to be that these are not common carriers, but the common carriers substitute some one who is not a carrier to perform a service to carry regardless of the requirements of the law as to equity and reasonableness, and nobody to be responsible for what the charges are, whether they are reasonable or not."

Here it was brought out that Earl was getting $90 for refrigerating the cars and up to $25 drawbacks, making $115 per car. Under a good deal of pressure it was brought out that he gave up in some cases to some shippers as much as $20 per car.

Commissioner Clemens made the caustic remark: "Neither the railroads nor car lines, nor any one else, cares about giving up unless there is some pressure to do it. That is always the case. Every one was forced to do it."

One of Earl's answers was this: "I would not say he was a very wise business man if he threw away his rebates."

Again Commissioner Clemens retorted: "That is, if he had more respect for his financial interests than for the law."

It was exceedingly interesting to watch the fencing between the commission, the lawyers and Earl as to what this money was. Earl's remark here about the unwisdom of giving up rebates was about the only time that he or his railroad lawyers used the word as standing for what they were doing. It was given back as mileage, but the mileage was not always regular. Sometimes, apparently, to cinch some troublesome competitor, the amount of mileage paid to the Earl outfit was more than at other times. It never was got at, so far as known, how much of this mileage, apparently actual rebates, was distributed among the fruit growers and how much of it was unfairly retained by the regular combination of commission merchant, independent shipper, fruit grower on his own account and owner of the car line.

Commissioner Clemens at one point asked the question direct: "Have you been getting rebates?"

Earl answered: "They increased our mileage." [One form of rebates.]

Commissioner Clemens: "You gave about $15 a car when you got $25?"

Earl: "Yes."

Commissioner Clemens: "What railroads paid rebates last year?"

Earl: "I cannot tell without my notes, except two."

Mr. Herrin at this point, seeming to think his partner, Earl, was a little bit too closely pressed, came to his rescue and adroitly delivered him.

The inquiry then turned upon the Earl Fruit Company. Earl, the president, was asked if it, too, got rebates. With as virtuous an appearance as he assumes now in his new role of reformer, Ed Earl chirped up, in effect: "Oh, no. I controlled that concern myself, and I would not permit it to take rebates."

Neither he nor W. F. Herrin could have been quite prepared for Commissioner Clemens's withering remark: "It was worse than paying rebates." The commissioner's conscience was entirely too obtuse to see the difference between paying rebates and receiving them. Mr. Earl, even at that early day, had developed such tenderness of conscience and clarity of judgment that he was quite ready to make a statement that he could see a vast and radical difference between the two acts. In fact, it appeared as if the taking of a rebate was a mortal sin, but the giving of it a very high type of virtue.

Now, The Times thinks it has set Earl's record entirely straight. He was an exceedingly bad man eight years ago, or he would not have cooperated with Mr. Herrin and the other "horribles" among the railroad attorneys. It was well for both of them that the Elkins law was not in full force, and the President, with his investigators at the fore, the "big stick" behind them, trying to ascertain who was breaking the law.

But all that was eight years ago, and since then E. T. Earl has reformed his own ways [huh!] and having done so, is exceedingly sour against his former friends, W. F. Herrin, J. C. Stubbs and the other officers and attorneys of the rebate-giving railroads then in partnership with shippers of monopolistic instincts, who, having become the name of "mileage," have now received a certificate of conversion, and are sent forth to bless the world as high moral and political reformers, intent upon trust-busting.

Praise be to God! we have in Earl, according to his own account, a brand plucked from the burning, but a burnt brand all the same.

WORKS HIMSELF TO DEATH.

Bank Cashier Who, Though Ill, Insisted on Continuing Duties, Dies Very Suddenly.

The fact that he insisted on continuing his work although ill, led to the rather sudden death yesterday morning of Edwin J. Scott, cashier of the Globe Savings Bank and the Los Angeles Investment Company. He passed away at the residence of his sister, Mrs. Anna S. Walker, No. 1110 West Seventeenth street.

Mr. Scott had been indisposed since last Sunday but he continued to attend at the office of the bank and the investment company and to his duties as cashier. His friends urged him to take a rest and he had arranged to go on a short vacation next week. In anticipation of the holiday he was putting his affairs in order so that everything would be shipshape while he was absent.

Last Friday the strain of his incessant and hard work proved too much for him and he left the bank very early, reaching home in a very fatigued condition. He went to bed and when a member of the family sought to call him yesterday morning he was found to be in a semi-comatose condition, from which he never rallied.

Mr. Scott was nearly 58 years old, having been born in Buffalo, N. Y., in June, 1850. When a comparatively young man he moved to Colorado and for eighteen years was manager of the Scott and Stephens Furniture Company of Greeley. Disposing of his interests he came to this city in 1887, and organized and was the head of the Scott Hardware Company. He sold out of this concern to become actively identified, in 1898, with the Los Angeles Investment Company, being elected a director and cashier, which positions he held at the time of his death. He was one of the organizers of the Globe Savings Bank, being also director and cashier.

The funeral service will be held at the chapel at Sixteenth and Grover streets, Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The remains are at the rooms of the "Well, Jed, how are you today?"

"Tol'able, sah, tol'able!" cautiously replied Jed. "Ah'd be all right, sah, if it wa'n't for de rheumatism in mah right laig."

"Ah, well, Jed, we mustn't complain," said the questioner. "We're all getting old, and old age does not come alone."

"Old age, sah!" was the indignant protestation of Jed. "Old age ain't got nuthin' to do wid it, sah. Heah's mah other laig jest as old, an' dat's sound an' soople as kin be!"—[February Lippincott's Magazine.

NO MORE LIVER TROUBLE.

Noted German Physician Tells of Simple Remedy, That Puts All Liver Trouble to Rout—Will Be Welcomed by Californians.

If you've been a victim of liver trouble—you can say goodby to it now. A prominent German specialist has hit on a remedy that he says will cure any case of liver trouble and will even keep it away. It's good news for Californians, for here we have more than our share of liver trouble, due, according to medical authorities, to the mild, even nature of this climate.

The matter of diagnosing liver ailments is very simple—constipation, headaches, dizziness, skin eruptions, heart palpitation, and nervousness, are all signs that the liver is neglecting its duty and throwing too much work on the stomach, heart and other organs.

Hundreds of Californians have these symptoms and never suspect the liver—when if this simple homemade medicine were used it would alleviate the trouble in short order.

You can get the ingredients at most any drug store—1 ounce Heptonic, 1½ ounces Elixir Calisaya Bark, and 1½ ounces Simple Elixir. Mix them well and take in doses of one teaspoonful each four times a day.

Smaller doses are sufficient for children. Clip this out and save it, even

JUST CALIFORNIA.

It lies not East nor West,
But, like a scroll unfurled,
Where the hand of God hath hung it,
Down the middle of the world.

"Here is California, but we don't know how to play on it," said Charley Lummis, one time, in a black outburst of pessimism. And if this be true what excuse has any one to offer? Certainly we are not like Kipling's sailormen who wanted to break out of heaven because they had no ocean and no ships, and because they could make no fist of the golden harps that were given to them, saying,

"Our fingers they are tarred,
And the tune is very hard."

Surely not that, for our fingers are a-tingle with the wine of morning and the tune is so easy that it plays itself.

Who that has eyes to see and ears to hear does not enthrall his heart and enrapture his soul with California of the South as she gleams in glory now in the blossoming springtime o' the year? Uplands aflame with poppies, the winding highways hedged with roses, the desert carpeted with the woven web of the splendor of wild-flowers, lilies in the gardens of wonder, the hum of bees and the deathless song of the mocker and the lark—these be the things not of dreams but of reality. Green hills and purpled valleys aglow in God's big sunny mornings and sinking softly at twilight into the mantle of the stars between the Sierras and the sea—

Sun and dews that kiss it,
Balmy winds that blow,
The stars in clustered diadems
Upon its peaks of snow;
The mighty mountains o'er it,
Below, the white seas swirled—
Just California stretching down
The middle of the world.

THE DANGERS THAT THREATEN SOCIETY.

The following quotations are from an article printed on Saturday in a periodical published at Chicago as the official organ of the Catholic church, one of whose priests fell dead at the altar, a victim to the shot of a poor, half-witted anarchist whose weak mind had been inflamed against "society:"

"The policy of the Giordano Bruno Club is the same as that which the Hearst newspapers have pursued ever since their establishment—a policy of envy, greed, of intolerance toward stable government, of class hatred.

"The Chicago American sympathizes with the Giordano Bruno Club as perfectly innocent of any attempt to do wrong, notwithstanding the villainous nature of its platform.

"Why not? Did not the Hearst papers commend the murder of McKinley in 1901 as a consummation devoutly to be wished for? Did they not write of the most lovable President that ever entered the White House: 'McKinley, bar one girthy, Princeton person, who came to be no more nor less a living, breathing crime in breeches, is therefore the most despised and hated creature on this hemisphere. His name is hooted, his figure burned in effigy.'

"And this in April, 1901: 'Institutions, like men, will last until they die. If bad institutions and bad men can be got rid of only by killing, then killing must be done.'

"The Chicago American has declared itself once more for the benefit of its thousands of Catholic readers, who, we hope, will take this lesson to heart: That a newspaper like the American is a blight and a source of untold harm in the Catholic home."

This Chicago Catholic organ (the New World) says of the Italian who committed the crime and of the one who murdered President McKinley: "The assassin in each case was a deluded, weak-minded degenerate who had been maddened into the commission of crime by hearing the passionate, intemperate utterances and reading the criminally suggestive literature of 'gentlemen' anarchists who, too cowardly to carry out in person their diabolical plots against society, play upon ignorance and the criminal instincts of their unfortunate victims, until they have goaded them to bloody acts of violence such as that which has just been recorded."

Every word of this is true, as thousands of us know in our inmost souls. But the ultimate responsibility is not touched yet. The "yellow press" is here to make money. The business men who, through fear of a "roast" or through the cupidity of a dollar, support such incendiary journals must bear the blame in the last analysis.

Nor is the absolutely "yellow press" the only sinner, nor the chief sinner. As we have said often, the Most he-biped and the Goldman she-biped may mouth until their breath gives out and society will remain unmoved. But when men of respectability and reputed right morals—William J. Bryan, for example—mount a rostrum and harangue against the social system as it is, their homeopathic doses of poison little by little affect the minds of tens of thousands. The "yellow press" may preach assassination and the danger to society is small, for it only affects half-crazy creatures like the murderers of the President and of the priest. But the semi-restrained newspapers—which by hundreds have taken up this wretched cry against the "man higher up," against business men in a wholesale way as "predatory rich," against wealth in general as "swollen fortunes," against innocent corporation managers as "all deliberate lawbreakers," against all combinations of capital as monopolies—these are all preparing the ground for the seed of the "yellow press" to fall in and bear a big harvest.

What has this cry done already? It has led hundreds of thousands of men and women who have been sent into this world with limited ability, who, worse still, have never practiced economy, who are in many cases not over-industrious, to think that their failure to acquire a vast fortune is not because they have not the talent for business, or application at business, not because they have been wasteful, extravagant, perhaps idle, dissipated, but because "society" is at fault, because the laws are unfair, because their employers have robbed them, because everything is against the honest person, and that it is no use to try.

We hear much about limiting the amount of wealth that any man should be permitted to hold, much to the effect that $1,000,000 cannot be justly acquired in a lifetime, and many crude notions of the same kind. These half-yellow newspapers daily encourage such notions. Their readers spread them broadcast. The talk reaches the ears of the wretched. It comes from the mouths of people of respectable positions, and from newspapers which are not branded with a distinctly yellow streak. Then the continual blowing kindles a flame—and the anarchist's bomb explodes.

The question, what is "society?" is never allowed to trouble these crude thinkers. "Society" is the aggregate of us all, and no man owes anything to another which is not a reciprocal debt. Society owes no man anything more than an even opportunity to use what talent, industry, ability, skill, endowment of any kind he may be sent into the world with or may have acquired here. And "society" cannot furnish any one with brains, or ability, or prudence, or providence.

These are basic ideas as old as society, as unchangeable as the law of gravitation. But the waves of Populism and socialism, new thought, the charging of "society" with the duties of each individual, have caused many to forget these principles, and are teaching notions subversive to society, because contrary to these basic principles.

Limit wealth? How? By law? Yes? At what point? Law is general, universal. Will you make a law which will hold a man honest who makes and saves money as he pleases—honestly, of course—until he shall be worth $100,000, or $500,000, or $1,000,000, and then brand him as a thief if he saves one more dollar? Shall he be honest who earns and saves the last dime that makes the limit and the other be a thief subject to imprisonment and fines of their own fortunes, have equal opportunity with others (according to their ability and industry) to get clay, make bricks and build as they judge best.

Every word printed or spoken which does not lie in lines exactly parallel in meaning with these principles either prepares the soil for the "yellow press" to seed, or is itself a scattering of the dragon's teeth, the harvest from which will be the destruction of society.

MERRY WU.

Our merry old friend Wu Ting Fang has returned to this country to take up the yellow man's burden in the diplomatic line at Washington. He is as happy and likewise as canny as ever. An army of interviewers met him at San Francisco day before yesterday and he routed it horse, foot and artillery; in other words not a man on the staff of any northern newspaper made him say anything he did not wish to remark.

The talk of trouble between China and Japan he dismissed with an airy wave of his long-nailed fingers. The relations between the two countries "are corlial," he said, just as cordial as the wolf was before he swallowed the lamb. But which is to be the far eastern wolf? China is organizing a real army, not a Boxer brigade, and Wu remarked, "It is a good army—yes, a modern army." But genial Mr. Wu intimated in his really pleasant way that there is not likely to be war anywhere. These armies are got together for the fun of the thing and millions of dollars (Mexican) are expended in military preparations simply to be in the fashion. Wu may represent the dragon which may become the wolf, but he is still as foxy as ever.

The awakening of China is very interestingly referred to in The Times Magazine today. The article is particularly apropos and taken in conjunction with Minister Wu's statements in yesterday's issue should do a great deal to open the eyes of the American people to the vast forward movement on the other side of the Pacific. The oldest civilization in the world is taking on the modern airs of the youngest. Of course China is still far in the rear on the path of progress, as we reckon it, but it is negotiating for seven-league boots, and the time is not far distant when it will be abreast of Japan.

This advancement of China is a great aid to the preservation of peace in the Far East. With its modern army it will keep Japan in check. "A good army—yes, a modern army," as Wu calls it, is an excellent curb to use on a fiery, prancing power which is "feeling its oats." But though the Chinese have a large army they do not wish to be made to try its mettle. They are the most peaceful people in the world. The Celestials really wish peace on earth. They want to live the tranquil life, and, having inherited calm, it takes a good deal to disturb them. But when aroused they are veritable devils. If ever Japan and China meet in battle again the story will be vastly different from that which related the ludicrous campaign of fourteen years ago. As Minister Wu says, China has "a good army—yes, a modern army." And that counts.

TAFT AND BUSINESS.

Two movements are going along side by side, nose and nose, like a well-matched team in double harness. State after State gets into line in the Taft army, organized to carry all before it in Chicago. As the matter looms up today it looks like Taft the winner and the field is still left at the starting post. The President has his "favorite son" figured out as nominated on the first ballot. Most observers have settled down to the conviction that it will be that or nearly that.

Side by side with this development of Taft sentiment business in all its ramifications is picking up all over the country. The banks are full of money, the hotels in the East full of merchants buying goods, the fires are relighted under the boilers and the machines set humming in the mills. The more Taft looks like the winner the more confidently business men count on good business under sound Republican policy for the next five years.

It will be interesting to note this march of Secretary Taft toward the White House and this forward movement of business toward new prosperity week by week. The harmony of motion will not be broken. The Taft band-wagon and a full dinner pail for every industrious citizen will go side by side for the next sixty months.

Come right along with us, friends! You know The Times is the original, unwavering, consistent Taft paper of all California.

TARIFF ARK OF THE COVENANT.

"California lemons may eventually be the only variety sold in eastern markets." That is what a leading fruit dealer of Boston, now visiting Southern California, says.

Last year these eastern markets absorbed imported lemons the cost of which was $4,253,296. Imported oranges cost the people of the country $354,495. Times were when imported oranges cost us as much as $7,000,000 a year. That is not long ago. Now California oranges have driven the imported out of the market almost totally. The protection given to native-grown oranges has made the wonderful development of the industry possible. What protection has done for orange growing it will do for lemon growing if the protection is strong enough. The Dingley tariff act has done this good work for the orange-growing industry. The tariff is 1 cent a pound on citrus fruit, or about 60 cents a box. This, with the superior quality of our oranges, has overcome the competition of cheap labor in Southern Italy and Sicily and cheap freight between Mediterranean ports and this country. But the surplus lemon crop of Southern Europe is so large it still seeks a market here.

The protection is none too high. Labor in Southern Italy which handles the fruit, mostly that of children and women, costs 10 to 25 cents a day, in California $1 to $2.50. The freight cost betewen the Mediterranean and New York is not over 50 cents them under our flag. The freight from California to eastern points is twice as much. It costs about 35 cents to put a box of our fruit on the cars and without ice, $1 on lemons and 90 cents freight on oranges. The cost is thus $1.25 to $1.35 a box. The same items from Sicily cost about 55 to 60 cents. Then there is the extra cost of cultivating the ground here. This, added to the difference of at least 70 cents, as above, would more than make up the amount of protection in the duty.

The free-trade contention of the Populists, acquiesced in by a few unsound Republicans and papers of the same false views, is that the tariff makes the fruit cost consumers more money. Market figures will correct this notion. In all cases the result of industries fostered by protection is to eventually give our people cheaper prices than they had been paying when foreign goods held a monopoly of the market. It is so with fruit.

The lemons imported last year were not sold in Boston and other eastern cities on the basis of cost to the importers. The California lemons made the price. Under conditions prevailing here lemons must bring the grower not less than $1 per box to make the industry profitable. This is a net price. Add $1.35, cost of taking the fruit from the tree and laying it down in eastern markets, with commission, and we find $2.50 about as low an average as lemons can be sold at wholesale. The imported lemons do not cost so much in eastern cities, duty paid. But it is quite within bounds to say they average that price, because California lemons fix the price. The importers get just what they can and shut out the California fruit, or prevent ours from shutting out the imported. As our crop increases and drops in cost to the consumer, the importer will come down until it is shut out, or sells so low as to force ours out.

The use of fruit in the daily ration of the people is increasing rapidly. The increase in the use of lemons will be rapid. We are just beginning to learn the preservative effect of this fruit on health. With proper tariff protection there is every reason to hope that California will be able in time to sell $10,000,000 worth of lemons annually.

California fruit growers of all classes will weigh these considerations well next November when they cast their votes for Presidential electors, for Congressmen and for members of the State Legislature who will elect a United States Senator. Those who are wise will not like children play with edged tools whose uses they do not know and take any chances on a free-trade President and House of Representatives under the false notion that the Senate will block the way to free-trade measures. The Senate may prevent the passage of a bad tariff law, but it cannot stop violent free-trade discussion in a Populist House of Representatives with a Populist President to cheer them on. Another thing. For the first time in many years a dangerous tariff heresy has gained a lodging in the minds of some Republicans; a few of them are in the Senate and more of them may break in from time to time.

The Irishman's way of keeping out of trouble, by "not getting into it," is effective.

GAIN OF A SENATOR.

The Republican party gains a United States Senator and the country gets a good statesman in the Senate by the election of William O'Connell Bradley in the Kentucky Legislature. The long deadlock was broken Friday by the vote of four Democrats who have all the time been uncompromisingly opposed to the reëlection of former Gov. Beckham. These four had been voting for members of their own party until the situation became hopeless and then they came over to the Republican candidate.

The new Kentucky Senator is a man of wide reputation. His life since he was 21 has been devoted largely to politics. He is now 61. For twelve years he has been on the Republican National Committee. He has the distinction of being the only member of his party ever elected Governor in his State. Many times he has been a delegate to national Republican conventions.

In Kentucky the Democratic party is badly split, and it is not out of the reach of possibility that it will go Republican next fall.

LET IT BE INVESTIGATION.

"Civil service" was a reform which was supposed to promise great things for good government. It was to upset that sacred Jacksonian and Democratic dictum "to the victors belong the spoils" and make the public service the thing in view in appointing men to office, not paying political debts nor providing a living for "nincompoop" members of an office-holder's family.

To keep the stream pure the fountain must be clean. If the Civil Service Commission is to be filled with scheming politicians who give play to favoritism and personal pulls, the public service must be worse corrupted than if there were no Civil Service Commission in existence.

A pretended investigation of civil service abuses was made behind closed doors, which was merely the application of a thick coat of whitewash to the board charged with devious procedure. The charges were reiterated in a fuller, more specific form. Now let the probe go its deepest. This thing must be done in the open, and due opportunity to let the light shine must be given. Let no reform apostle be permitted in modesty to put his light under any kind of cover, but let it shine right on the reformer's brow and show how spotless his inmost thoughts are.

The city owes it to its great reformers to prove they are angelic.

When the movement to clean out the anarchists begins, the first thing that should be done is to run the King of the anarchists out of the country. His name is William R. Hearst and the harm he has done by leading poor ignorant dupes to com-

JOYFUL DAY.

[From "California: Where Sets the Sun."]

O day so bright, O day so free!
I kneel in love to worship thee!
The clouds like rosy petals lie
On the tender breast of the sunset sky,
And the breath of the winds is soft to me,
And I feel the kiss of the restless sea!
And life is glad—it is joy to be!
O day of beauty I worship thee.

The Lancer.

I CAN wager that, in San Francisco, members of the graft prosecution are looking at one another with significance.

In this Hetch-Hetchy water proposition, they have pulled the very gee string of the whole affair. There's something way down deep that concerns the Spring Valley Water Company and the Hetch-Hetchy that lies at the very heart of all this "crusade."

You just keep your eyes on Hetch-Hetchy.

Something Candid About Henry.

It seems that Prince Henry of Holland can't even hold the horses.

We knew he wasn't worth much, but now he has failed even as an ornament and volunteer coachman.

Henry is the young royalty who eats at Queen Wilhelmina's house and generally sticks around and listens to his wife's speeches when a peace conference is being held in order to give the Czar time to rush his new cannon factories.

Stories of the unhappiness of the young Queen, as his wife, have been frequent. Comes now the story of the royal runaway in which Wilhelmina sprang from the toppling carriage and seized the bridles of the rearing horses." Her husband stayed in the carriage.

Whether he is royal or not, this sniveling little runt ought to get out and go to work. Being the husband of a queen isn't a dignified job.

Park Picnics.

A wall has gone up because picnics may be stopped at Eastlake Park.

That anybody should desire to go to a city park on a picnic is a sure indication of the frailty and foolishness of the human race. With a good home and a table cloth, why should anyone wish to slide around on a dirty lawn, accumulate colds and listen to the "orator of the day"—which is on the whole worse than the cold.

Parks were not made for State picnics. They were made for spoony couples, dead gold fish that float belly up in the fountains, and bad-smelling bears that are sentenced for life to solitary and cruel confinement, for doing nothing.

Mistake Somewhere.

Our American admirals are said to have left the bullfight at Lima when a matador was wounded.

This is inconceivable. To see the bull get back at the bullfighters would be the only cheering feature of the show. When I saw a bullfight, we were all anxious to have something happen to the bullfighters that one of the party wanted to throw the matador back when he jumped over the fence to escape the wounded animal.

What really disgusts an American at a bullfight is not so much the cruelty; it's the poppycock and silly ceremony that goes with sticking a knife into a cow.

If, instead of dancing out in spangles and a pig tail, your bullfighter entered the ring in a pair of copper-riveted overalls and, instead of dramatically pledging his life against the bull's, said, "Excuse me while I now slaughter the beef," the bullfight would be a more presentable affair.

A bullfight is a filthy business where a lot of strutty little men in chorus girl clothes get unduly agitated and make a very poor pretense of being in danger.

Snobbish Policemen.

There seem to be several grades of aristocracy in San Francisco.

The policemen snubbed the sailors at their annual ball, the policemen's ladies declining to dance with the bluejackets.

Having had liberal experience with both the sailors and the cops, The Lancer is still unable to become excited at the escape of the policemen's ladies.

The sailors from this same fleet, whom most of us have met, we found to be boys, appealingly young and frank and civil and exceptionally good-mannered. The San Francisco police have been proven to be crooked, are usually uncivil. During the last car strike it was proven beyond a doubt that they cold-bloodedly set the scenes where the strikers might murder and kill and slaughter the strike-breakers; spill blood until they got tired.

On the whole, the sailors showed a good deal of broad-minded charity in being willing to go to the policemen's ball. However, so far as known, this frightful affair won't bring on general war or anything like that.

Davis—War Correspondent.

Every book issued on the Russian-Japanese war shows more clearly that this great drama has been practically lost to us.

Frederick McCormack's two volumes, just out, on the "Tragedy of Russia," are about as dramatic as a dictionary. The whole of Russia's ghastly misfortunes are set down as coldly as the recital of the "minutes of the previous meeting."

Richard Barry wrote a book on the war which was so dramatic you couldn't tell, most of the time, what he was talking about. Jack London made a rowdy of himself as usual; wrote a tub of rubbish about getting arrested, and about the mean Japanese police.

It is a great misfortune that the little coterie of men, like John Fox and Richard Harding Davis, should have been turned back.

Mr. Davis is a much-slandered man, but he is the greatest war correspondent now living. He has never had the best chance yet. During the Spanish war he was shunted off to Porto Rico, and the best of his war stuff we got in the matchless little story, "The Derelict," of which Stephen Crane was supposedly the hero.

Most men go to war and fairly vomit adjectives about the blaze and the roar and the bang and the clang, etc., etc. Davis tells you of some little thing, like the Greek goatherd in the Grecian-Turkish war—a dispatch said by the London Times to be the best battle story they ever published.

His account of the coronation of the Czar of Russia, some years ago, wasn't war, but was a news classic. Other men threw spasms trying to tell of the splendor. Mr. Davis told about the little Prince of Siam and the boy Prince of Montenegro, showing off their orders and bragging to each other down on the floor; told how rattled the Queen of Greece got trying to kiss the Czarina, and how clumsy some of the other monarchs were.

He would have made the great Japanese war live.

Old Subscriber: No. The Lancer is not a cousin of Richard Harding Davis, and does not owe him money.

Jim and the Jackies.

So far as the jackies themselves are concerned, all but one of the arrangements made for the fleet entertainment are superfluous.

The following programme is suggested as being inexpensive and as exactly pleasing the sailors:

First day—Reception by Jim Jeffries.
Second day—More Jim Jeffries.
Third—Jim Jeffries.
Balance of the visit—J. J. Jeffries.

On the occasion of the recent visit of the "big four" armored cruisers to the Los Angeles ports, most of our geniality was wasted. They viewed our greatest tourist sights with a blasé lack of interest, but they followed Jim Jeffries wherever he went.

They received our delegations and chambers of commerce with courtesy, but a certain calmness. But the day Jeff went on board!

Well, there was only one dignitary for whom the big guns were "hitched up" and a gun drill was given. No, 'twasn't the Mayor, nor Chamber of Commerce either. Wasn't a bishop!

If we really get short of money for barbecues and things, we can set Jeff on the City Hall steps and we'll still be voted the greatest city on the map.

Mr. James's Nifty Soul.

When Brother Lummis of the Lion's Den and the City Library, sees the current number of the Philistine there will be remarks.

Elbert Hubbard devotes about half the magazine to a frantic paean of praise of George Wharton James, the Pasadena near-author. "He has the soul," says Fra Elbertus, "of a God." He doesn't tell what his nerve is like.

Some of us who have lived a while in California do not waste much vocal energy singing paeans of praise of Mr James's god-like soul. It may be that we're not so well posted on the habits and characteristics of gods.

Mr. Lummis is one who notably fails to perceive the god in the man. Lummis, in fact, asserts that the god-like Mr. James has a most uncelestial carelessness about using other men's writings as his own.

Fra Elbertus is something of a genial faker himself. Of late years he seems to have petered out.

Hubbard was a maker of soap in Buffalo. With considerable business shrewdness he saw that a class of near-intellects had grown up that ought to be worked—by somebody. These are the people who have done away with the haircloth sofa, have sent daughter to Vassar; have "taken up" George Bernard Shaw's awf'lly clever things, and are trying to forget the happy days on the farm.

Hubbard wrote cultured things for them in words of one syllable, and made them feel Bohemian and intellectual to beat the band.

Of course, nobody objects to this—except some jealous ones whose imaginations could rise no higher than gold bricks or cumulative credit schemes. It's all right. He saw them first. He has a right to them.

But when it comes to touting George Wharton James's "god-like soul," we must say that Fra Elbertus's work is getting coarse.

The Anti-Asiatics.

All things having been considered, the prize goes to the Anti-Asiatic Association.

This association of hoodlums and emigrants has devised a series of riots to be held all over the Coast. Their object is to demonstrate the eminent unfitness of the Japs and Chinese, and the extreme desirability of the rioters for citizenship.

In discussing their riot plans at Vancouver the other day, their convention broke up in a free fight.

It might just be whispered in their ears, however, that they might look a leetle oud before they start the trouble.

In the first place, when it comes to rioting, they will find the Japs able to take care of themselves; the meek submission of the Chinese to the Denis Kearney riots need not be expected. The Japs are a fighting race. When it comes to a scrap, they are there with the Irish.

In the next place, there's a pretty good-sized fleet coming around this vicinity about the time these riots are planned to occur; if the Japs can't protect themselves from murder by these ruffians, Admiral Evans can.

No More Fine Feathers.

The National Guardsman of today is a very businesslike young person.

The crowds who attended the militia inspections this week found that out to their disappointment. They came expecting plumes and prancing and excitement, with officers yelling orders and having sham battles.

They found none of these things, but, instead, a regular army officer, with a profound attention to the business in hand, who stopped in front of the men as they stood in line, and asked, in a confidential tone, how much bread constitutes a day's ration, and how big the bullseyes of the 500-yard targets ought to be.

Most of the old picturesqueness of the army is gone.

It's been severely shorn of all the gew-gaws and fancy frosting that women, and soldiers, too, used to love.

The majestic old-time "wheel" has been replaced by the shuffling scurry of "right turn;" to be thoroughly logical, the movements by fours have been done away with, and the unhandsome but very practical squad movements have taken their place. "Right forward, fours right," which was the prettiest movement in company drill, has gone.

The uniforms have been clipped of all their splendor.

All that now remains is a somber-clad, thin line, that does not know one thing that makes alone for "show."

"And remember," said the inspector, at the end of the Co. A inspection, "that more important than all this is your shooting. Above everything else, shoot well."

The army that runs up against the new militia that is growing up under the Dick bill will have some serious troubles. The old "training days" have gone. Parades are frowned down upon. When the encampments come hereafter, there will be no more girls and band concerts and lawn parties mixed in with it. They will go out into the hills with the regulars and do their work in a military workshop, far away from the crowds.

English 'Piccadilly' Suits

These are the famous English "Piccadilly" Suits, for which we are sole agents. Tight-fitting and semi-fitting models among them, in worsteds, cheviots, panamas and other fabrics. Colorings are delicate in character—stripe effects in greens, tans and many other shadings. Details of cuff, lapel and pocket—things that you will have to see to appreciate—give these garments a style and character all their own.

White Serge Suits, Rajah Silk Suits, and other fashionable effects. We invite you to visit this section of our Boys' and Girls' Department—Second Floor rp altercation occurred between

This is one of the "Piccadilly" Suits, sketched from a living model, especially for Harris & Frank.

The harbor commissioners asked that the city appropriate $100 a month for the office expenses of the new commission.

When this request came before the Finance Committee Chairman Wallace said that the commission is apparently taking the Council for a "good thing." He said that he thinks the Council has been fairly liberal in appropriating $200 a month for the maintenance of the Harbor Commission.

Commissioner F. W. Braun replied somewhat pointedly that the commission is not in the "hold-up" business and that it has asked for only what is necessary in order that it may be housed properly. The Finance Committee took the request under advisement.

AT THE COURTHOUSE.

HOLLYWOOD BOY BURGLAR TALKS.

LEADER OF GANG CONFESSES WITHOUT EMOTION.

Skeleton Keys Made by Himself. Blame for Robberies Put on Him by Parents of Companions—All Defendants Bound Over for Trial in Superior Court.

"I made my skeleton keys myself, and whenever we entered any house, I gathered up and kept all the keys we found," 15-year-old Merle McReynolds told Justice Selph, yesterday morning, when, with 13-year-old Eddie Eschrich, he was examined on a charge of robbing the Colegrove postoffice of $85 a fortnight ago. Both boys were bound over to the Superior Court under $1500 bonds each. Security was furnished for Eschrich, but McReynolds, the leader of the boys who are accused of burglarizing more than thirty Hollywood homes in the last two years, was committed to the Detention Home.

Prominent among the Hollywood people who attended the examination of the youthful prisoners was Mrs. Philo Beveridge. She talked long and earnestly with Howard Straw, 15 years old, who was arraigned, with McReynolds, on a charge of entering Howard Wood's home last July and taking a watch. Mrs. Beveridge finally told the court that she would be responsible for Straw's appearance and he was released under orders to report regularly to her and to the Hollywood City Marshal until the date set for his appearance in the Superior Court.

McReynolds admitted on the witness stand that he had engaged in burglary with the other boys. As he told without emotion about entering the postoffice and the Wilson home, his mother, Mrs. Mary McReynolds, a widow, sat weeping in the rear of the courtroom. Eschich and Straw admitted that they were members of the gang, but gave no explanation of their actions.

"Howard was always a good boy until he began going with that McReynolds lad," said his mother, Mrs. W. E. Straw. "I never suspected anything until he was arrested, and he tells me that as soon as he found what the McReynolds boy was doing, he stopped going with him."

"Fred and Eddie never gave me any trouble until they fell in with that McReynolds boy," said their father, John Y. Eschrich. "I never suspected what was going on. That boy is to blame." Eschrich then began to denounce McReynolds, but the court stopped him.

"Merle has been difficult to control," saids Mrs. McReynolds. "He is very ingenious and has a decided mechanical turn, but I never thought he would do these things charged against him."

"Lack of proper parental supervision is at the root of the whole affair," said School Supervisor H. F. Clark of Hollywood. "The boys have given us some trouble by their truancy, but otherwise their conduct had not been noticeably unruly."

ASSISTS POLICE.

ESCAPES IMPRISONMENT.

Because William Nelson, a thief, materially assisted the police in capturing a burglar last summer, by furnishing a description of him, Judge Smith yesterday put the defendant on probation for two years.

Nelson pleaded guilty to stealing a suit of clothes from a room in a Los Angeles lodging-house, while he was drunk. He told the court that he is a cook, that he had been drinking with another cook, and that he did not know what he was doing when he took the clothing.

"We will make a temperance man of you, Nelson," commented Judge Smith. "If I hear of your being drunk again while you are under parole, you will go to the penitentiary."

DOUBLY BOXED.

TALE OF INFELICITY.

"When my wife asked me for money, and I refused, she swatted me on the head and body several times. I staggered back on a big box on the porch of the Downey-avenue house, where we were talking, the cover broke, and into the box I went," testified James Buchanan yesterday in Judge Summerfield's court. He was giving his version of the events that led his wife, Mrs. M. B. Buchanan, to cause his arrest for alleged threats to kill her on February 14.

"When I finally got out of the box, I gave my wife a dollar," the witness continued. "I never threatened to put her light out, to kill her, or do anything of the kind, but I did tell her that I thought she ought not to come to me for money."

Mrs. Buchanan insisted that her husband had threatened to do her harm, but as the blows appeared to have been delivered by her and not by him, the charge was dismissed.

COURTHOUSE NOTES.

BREVITIES MISCELLANEOUS.

WOMAN VS. WOMAN. Jeannette J. Kiger yesterday filed in the Superior Court a $15,000 damage suit against Mrs. Martha Osborne and F. M. Osborne, charging that, on February 22, in the presence of Mrs. Virginia Otis, John C. Kiger, Belle Collins, Rena Mackay, J. J. Mann, I. D. Krosen, and others, Mrs. Osborne made statements reflecting on her character.

NEGRESS PUNISHED. Mrs. Annie Barnett was yesterday sentenced to one year in San Quentin by Judge Crow for assault with a deadly weapon on Mrs. Bernie Morris, another negress, last December. The judge stated that he was led to impose a short sentence because of the jury's recommendation of mercy, as well as because of representations made in the woman's behalf by persons interested in her.

ABUSES GIRL. Harry Sauner of Long Beach was yesterday sentenced by Judge Smith to ten years in Folsom for criminal abuse of his stepdaughter, Ethel Sauner.

TRIALS SET. C. B. Crawsby yesterday pleaded not guilty to a felony with a prior conviction, and his trial was set for April 1.

WITHOUT LICENSE. A hearing in the habeas corpus proceedings brought by I. Suzuki, to test the validity of the Long Beach ordinance imposing $20 daily tax on auctioneers, was set by Judge Smith for Thursday morning. Suzuki was released under $100 bail. He was arrested at Long Beach Thursday for conducting an itinerant sales business without a license.

INCORPORATION. Articles of incorporation were filed with the County Clerk yesterday by the Western Eucalyptus Company, capital stock $200,000. Certificates of removal of principal places of business were filed by the Prudential Investment Company, removing from Los Angeles to Santa Ana; the Union Hollywood Water Company, from Hollywood to Sherman, and the Jordan Oil Company, from Los Angeles to Vernon.

FOR SON'S DEATH. Asking $1999 damages for the death of his son, C. Pruitt, George M. Pruitt yesterday filed suit in the Superior Court against the San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake Railroad Company. He says that the young man died as the result of being scalded by steam in a railroad accident on March 3, 1907, when a passenger car in which he was riding was overturned at an open switch on Seventh street.

PAY FOR OPERATION. Judge Monroe yesterday handed down a decision adverse to J. G. Pfefferle in M. Robertson's suit to recover $500 for a successful operation performed on the defendant's wife last summer.

CLERK RETIRES. Deputy County Clerk Harley E. Riggins, court clerk for Judge Hutton, yesterday retired from office, after six years' service under County Clerk Keyes. He has formed a law partnership with Ruben S. Schmidt, formerly associated with Attorney J. L. Murphy. Mr. Riggins is a graduate of the law department of the University of Southern California, the Woodbury Business College and the Santa Monica High School. Deputy County Clerk Clare Enyeart has been appointed successor to Mr. Riggins as court clerk for Department Seven.

DAMAGES FOR FINGERS. A. Lovelace, who sued the Western Door and Sash Company for $10,000 damages for the loss of the thumb and three fingers of his left hand, was awarded $2000 by a jury in the Superior Court yesterday afternoon. The plaintiff charged that the saw which inflicted the wounds was out of repair through the negligence of the corporation.

IN THE POLICE COURTS.

Woman Given Hundred Days in Jail. Gang of Thieves Arraigned. Egg Story.

Marie Scott, the young woman who was arrested several days ago on suspicion that she was a member of a notorious gang of thieves, yesterday pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy in the Police Court, and was fined $100, with the alternative of spending 100 days in the City Jail. She was locked up.

The police state that the woman knew about the work of the gang, but did not participate in it. In rooms occupied by the crooks officers found several hundred dollars' worth of stolen property, much of which has been identified by owners. The thieves, it is alleged, hid beneath the bed of a prospective victim until the latter was asleep, and then looted the room.

Jack Maier, a member of the gang, was fined $100, but as the police had no direct evidence against him, Justice Austin suspended sentence on the prisoner's promise to leave the city immediately.

Three other members will be tried for robbery next week.

Slapped With Eggs.

Lew G. Hamilton, who lives just inside the city limits on the Temple road, yesterday appeared in the Police Court to prosecute his wife, Rebecca, who, he charged, slapped him in the face with two fried eggs.

The plaintiff exhibited a severely-burned face to the court. The grease had spattered from his forehead to his chin, taking off most of the skin. This was his story:

"This morning, when I arose, I asked my wife if she would get me some eggs. I wanted them soft boiled, and forgot to tell her about it. She fried them. When I walked into the kitchen and observed this, I remonstrated. My wife was not feeling well, and one word led to another. She picked up the skillet and threw the contents in my face. I do not want to see her punished, but since it is against the law for me to make an forcible impression upon the woman, I would like the court to administer a fine to prevent any repetition of egg slinging.

The justice fined the woman $5, but payment was not demanded.

HARD JOLT.

YEAR'S LABOR ALL FOR LOVE.

POLICE COURT PROSECUTORS LOSE LONG FIGHT.

Supreme Court Sustains City Auditor and Treasurer in Refusal to Pay Fleming and Assistant Appointed by District Attorney and Return to Old System Is in Sight.

City Prosecutor E. J. Fleming and his assistant at the Police Court apparently have been performing a labor of love for the city during the last year. Yesterday the State Supreme Court handed down a decision sustaining City Auditor Mushet and City Treasurer Hance in their refusal to pay the salaries of the prosecutor and his assistant. The case was carried to the Supreme Court by the city after it had been decided against the city by the Superior Court here.

The probable result of this decision is that the City Attorney will appoint two prosecutors to take the place of those appointed by the District Attorney. As there was some feeling evidenced between the City Attorney and the District Attorney at the time the present appointments were made it is possible that Mr. Hewitt will select two new men to take the place of Mr. Fleming and his assistant.

A year ago the Legislature passed a bill authorizing the District Attorney to appoint the prosecutors at the Police Station, to be paid by the city. At that time the City Attorney advised the Council that he considered the act of the Legislature invalid in that it required the city to pay the salaries of men appointed by a county official.

The Council declined to act, but the Auditor and Treasurer held back the salaries of the two appointees of the District Attorney. Fleming brought suit to compel payment, the real object being to test the validity of the statute. This suit has been decided in favor of the city.

Assistant City Attorney Wilson said yesterday that this decision is tantamount to knocking out the Broughton act under which the prosecutors are appointed by the District Attorney. He said it means a return to the former system, under which the City Attorney appoints his own assistants at the police courts.

When the law was passed a year ago Dist.-Atty. Fredericks declined to take full advantage of it. Four prosecutors were to be appointed. The District Attorney appointed two and asked the City Attorney to name the others.

DEAL IN SANTA MARIA.

Palmer Company Contracts for Delivery of Two Millions Barrels of Oil to Santa Cruz.

The Palmer Oil Company, whose property is located on the Blochman & Stendel ranches in the eachern extension of the Santa Maria oil field, has just closed a contract for the delivery, within the next three years, of 2,000,000 barrels of its product with the San Juan Portland Cement Company of Santa Cruz. The price, it is stated, is 50 cents per barrel, making the contract worth $1,000,000.

The same company has completed arrangements for the construction of an eight-inch pipe line from its wells to the pipe lines now in the Santa Maria field. The contract requires the completion of this pipe line within ninety days. By that time, it is estimated, the company will have stored between 30,000 and 40,000 barrels of oil with which to commence delivery on its 2,000,000-barrel contract. It is stated, also, that it is the intention of the Palmer company to sink other wells as soon as its pipe line is completed.

Distinctive Furniture

Adds to Bedroom Comfort—but distinctiveness adds nothing to co

Just apply some of your own experiences—how some of th bedrooms you have seen seemed so cosy and inviting, whil others were just the reverse. It's all in the way the roo is furnished. The bedroom that may seem the least invitin can be made cosy, restful and bright by exercising prope taste and judgment in the furnishing.

At the "California" you will find the most distinctive, the fine collection of good bedroom furniture in Los Angeles.

Every piece is selected with the most discriminate care—an because of its fitness for the requirements of the Southern Californ home.

The display occupies an entire floor. It comprises every essential piece of modern bedroom furniture and in every desirable wood and style.

The price range is so broad that every possible requirement can be met.

Every piece is marked in plain figures at the lowest possible price for which it can be sold. Fictitious pricing, which allows of misleading reductions, has no place in the policy of this establishment.

We want you to feel that whether you buy the most inexpensive or the most elaborate set on our floors you are getting value that cannot be excelled anywhere.

In one of our windows we are showing a magnificent Empire Colonial bedroom set—a masterpiece of American cabinet making. It comes from the celebrated shops of W. K. Cowan & Co., and is made of genuine Cuban mahogany.

We invite you to come and see this unusual collection of bedroom furniture.

BESKIRTED RULER.

WOMAN AGENT VERY PLUCKY.

Keeps Always on Trail of "Bootleggers."

Indians Learn Respect for the "Squaw Boss."

Connell's Friends Advise Him to Retire.

Determined to stamp out the liquor habit among her charges on the Morongo, Palm Springs and other reservations near Banning, Indian Agent Clara True, is bending every energy to secure convictions of the "bootleggers" who sell vile whisky to her Indians.

She was in consultation with United States Dist-Atty. Oscar Lawler, yesterday, regarding the Ramon Fera case. The halfbreed was acquitted of the charge of resisting an officer, but is still in jail awaiting trial for the alleged selling of liquor to Indians.

When Miss True arrived at the Palm Spring reservation, a few months ago, the bucks grunted disapproval at the sight of a "squaw boss," but since then they have come to respect the little woman who has proved that she is absolute ruler. She was promoted to the position of superintendent and special disbursing agent after sixteen years' experience in Indian work. She has full charge of five reservations.

Her last work was among the Pueblos of New Mexico and her home was in one of the valleys of that Territory. Her life has been spent in the open and her duties have taken her to remote places. She is reticent about her past, which has been filled with interesting episodes. When asked to tell something of her life among the Indians, Miss True replied:

"There is really little to interest an outsider. My mother and I were New Mexico ranchers. My work now is similar to that of several hundred other women who are in the government Indian service. I have always lived away from cities. That possibly explains my curtness of speech, of which some people complain. I believe there is much to do for the Indian. We are working under a splendid executive head, Commissioner Francis E. Leupp, whose policy is to make the red man self-supporting and abolish the parental care of the government as soon as possible. The outlook in this State is very encouraging."

Miss True asserts that the chief difficulty in absorbing the aborigines into the body politic, lies in their weakness for liquor. It is sold to them by Americans, cholos and Chinamen. She has caused the arrest of several suspected "boot-leggers."

The young woman witnessed the shooting of Ramon Fera, a few weeks ago, by Special Agent R. S. Connell. She zealously supports Connell and thinks his action was justified. She will be a witness for the government, when Fera is tried before United States Commissioner Van Dyke.

The night that he was shot, Fera was seen lurking about the Indians' houses and it is said he placed several bottles of liquor beneath trees, where they could be easily found by customers.

There has always been great difficulty in obtaining witnesses to such transactions. The law, of course, does not allow defendants to be convicted upon "suspicions" of agents and the Indians invariably give unsatisfactory testimony.

When in court last week, Connell explained his very apparent nervousness by stating that he was "cool as steel when in the open, but was timid when interrogated by lawyers." Upon his own evidence, the attorneys for Fera expect to prefer charges against the agent before the Department of the Interior, alleging that his mental condition makes him unfit for his position.

His friends say he is overworked and on the verge of a collapse. They advise him to apply for leave of absence.

He insists, however, that he is all right.

R. S. Connell,

special agent, who shot Ramon Fera, a suspected "boot-legger," and Miss Clara True, agent of five reservations near Banning.

ON THE ANXIOUS SEAT.

Candidates for Appointment to West Point Must Await Result of the Board's Investigations.

On Wednesday or Thursday next the board, appointed by Senator Flint to examine candidates for admission to the United States Military Academy at West Point, will announce the names of the winners. Gen. Wankowski received a telegram from Senator Flint authorizing him to make the announcement and as soon as the examiners have reached a decision they will do so.

The examinations have already been completed but before taking final action the examiners have thought best to make a careful investigation into the standing of the young men. Character is one of the points which must receive careful consideration and a full investigation will be made before the names of the appointee and two alternates are made public.

Of the thirteen who took the examination seven finished and Gen. Wankowski stated yesterday that the marks of all are very good, in spite of the fact that the test was a very stiff one.

As soon as the name of the successful candidate is announced he will be instructed when to appear before the army authorities to take the official examination. If he passes he will be admitted to the academy; if he fails one of the alternates will receive the coveted chance.

TOO MANY SOLICITORS.

Business Men Complain Their Offices Are "Worked" for Money for Unauthorized Charities.

Talk of hard times and men out of employment in the city caused a tide of charity to set in toward worthy institutions that are helping supply the wants of those who need help. Another result, less desirable, was to start out an army of unauthorized and fake solicitors, asking aid in behalf of any old thing that might appeal to the generosity of the people of the city. Small "missions" sprung up here and there, generally under the shadow of others long established, and they, too, began to canvass the city.

Complaint has reached The Times that women are "working" business blocks, soliciting money for a so-called mission at No. 308 East Third street, and a reporter visited the place yesterday.

The sign on the window reads: "Church of Humanity Industrial Store," and the little room is packed with all kinds of junk, from books to shoes. In the rear, above a board about six feet long across one corner, to serve as a counter, is a sign, "Mission, soup 2 cents."

"Where is your soup kitchen?" the woman in charge was asked.

"We have none; we closed it up, and the sign has not been taken down," was the response.

She was asked who is at the head of the institution, and she said, "Mr. Reed." Asked what they do with money they solicit, she said:

"We have no solicitors out now; the last was on Monday, but they didn't get any money, and we closed the soup kitchen up, as the men had no money to pay for it, and we couldn't keep it going."

A number of solicitors are working the city for old clothing or other second-hand stuff for the store. It is repaired until it is saleable, and then sold at trifling cost, but whatever the price at which it is sold, it is all clear profit, and the money presumably goes to the "Church of Humanity," whatever that is.

"People would far better keep their old clothing for some of the recognized charities," said an official, who was asked about the store in question, "than give it to any stranger who comes along, for usually it goes to give somebody an easy living in the latter case. I am always reminded of the success of that chief of fakirs, "Gen." Moore, who, under the name of the 'Union Rescue Army,' collected thousands of dollars in Los Angeles, supporting himself in ease and purchasing property in the northern part of the State with the money he got here. Though constantly warned that he was a fakir, the people went on giving him money as long as he asked it."

PRESIDENT BAER RETURNS.

President Baer of Occidental College returned yesterday from a trip to the northern part of the State, during which he spoke at both the great universities, addressed a number of other meetings and was entertained as guest of honor at a banquet in Berkeley. He delivered ten addresses in the six days, and comes back filled with enthusiasm for Occidental. "Occidental stock is rated high," he said, "and I am more of the opinion than ever that the average young man and young woman is better off in Occidental for the first two years of the college course." He believes that the "beer wave" at Stanford is at an end, and that President Jordan and the better element in the student-body will be able to entirely stamp out intoxication among the students.

Music 10c a Sheet

Central Department Store

Having a stock of over $300,000 worth of seasonable merchandise to readjust prices for the coming bankrupt sale and the limited time in which to accomplish it, the trustees have been compelled to postpone the sale until Thursday morning, March 5th, when the entire stock of the beautiful Central Department Store.

will be sold by the Referee in Bankruptcy to satisfy creditors' claims. Being unable to dispose of the business in its entirety, owing to the immense size of the stock, the court orders that a Bankrupt Sale be inaugurated Thursday morning, March 5th, and continued until every dollar's worth of merchndise is sold. Following is a copy of the Court's order:

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA, SOUTHERN DIVISION.

In the matter of Central Department Store, a corporation, Bankrupt. Order authorizing Trustees to conduct business and sell property at private sale.

A petition for the sale of the assets of said Central Department Store having been filed by the trustees herein, and an order for the sale of said assets having been heretofore made, and the sale having been set for the 20th day of February, 1908, at 2 o'clock p. m., and at that time adjourned to February 26th, 1908, at 10 o'clock a. m., and bids having been received for the stock and fixtures of the said bankrupt, and the trustees having considered the said bids inadequate, the same were rejected;

Now, therefore, on petition of W. E. Muse, H. B. Rossiter and W. R. Hervey, trustees herein, and on motion of W. T. Craig and Carroll Allen, their attorneys, IT IS ORDERED that all of the said bids be rejected; that the said store be closed at 6 o'clock p. m. this day, to be reopened at such time as said trustees may consider advisable, said trustees are authorized upon the reopening of said store to conduct a trustees' bankrupt sale of the merchandise in said store until the further order of this court, but for a period not exceeding 30 days. Said trustees are also authorized to sell all or any part of the said store, furniture, fixtures and merchandise at private sale in bulk for such sum or sums as they may deem advisable, subject to the confirmation of this court.

Dated February 26th, 1908. LYNN HELM, Referee.

Equal to any land in California at any price. Absolutely level. Richest sedimentary soil. Inexhaustible water. Far superior to any San Valley land now on the market. $25 is not a bait but the price of the best. No extra charges. No water stock to buy. No alkali to fight.

It's $25.00 Per Acre

Not $25 and Up. Not $25 With Extras. But $25 for the Best.

Every acre of this soil is worth today from two to four times the price.

Inferior land in the San Joaquin Valley has sold as high as $300 per acre.

This land will grow big harvests of everything except citrus fruits.

Over 5000 acres will be cultivated this spring.

When the present buyers have located the adjoining land at once will be worth much more.

A single crop will pay for the land.

A few hundred dollars down will buy 40 acres and start you going.

You will have no rent and no gas bills You will supply your own eggs, milk, vegetables. Your crop will build up a bank account. Your land will increase in value every year.

Property is located 30 miles northwest of Bakersfield and about 20 miles south of Corcoran, in the heart of activity in San Joaquin Valley.

It is a slightly elevated plane, composed of richest sediment, free from alkali and floods.

Water supply inexhaustible.

Land absolutely level.

Will yield maximum crops of grapes, sugar beets, onions, asparagus, barley, Egyptian corn, peaches, alfalfa.

ORIES ABOUT ADMIRAL EVANS.

ybody His Friend and Even e Children Are not Afraid of Him.

Admiral Evans probably has elatives in and near Washing- n any other officer in the navy, erefore the progress of the fleet his command is watched there eculiar interest. Many of these s have never forgiven him en- for remaining in the United navy when his only brother, his uncles and practically every male able to shoulder a gun in ghborhood of Fairfax, Va., his wn, went with the South. ry was his mother that when of the death of one of her caused by a Union bullet, she out a resignation for Robley lled it to President Lincoln. In he he received notice that it en accepted and he was immerelieved from duty. Evans asted fire" and Uncle Sam had e enthusiastic defender. So he d to Washington to see what neant. Here he was shown the tion. Recognizing the hands he choked up for a moment and then feelingly told how it happened.

One of his relatives told of the incident and said that when the war was over he returned a cripple to his home in Fairfax. Few of the relatives deigned to recognize him, but his mother met him with open arms and tears of joy. That evening she decreed that the brothers who had fought on opposite sides should sleep together.

On going to their room Bob took from his trunk a steel apparatus which a surgeon ordered should be worn at night, in order to prevent a shortening of the leg. For two hours they swapped experiences and occasionally sectional feeling came dangerously near to putting harmony on the run. Finally Sam slapped his brother on the back and said:

"Well, Bob, it's time for me to screw up that Yankee leg of yours and from now on we'll pass up the war."

"That's a go."

And they did.

Evans a Bridge Builder.

When Admiral Evans sailed with his fleet for the Pacific, Appleton, Wis. especially decorated itself with American flags. One of the chief reasons that the local interest was shown is on account of Evans being so well known there, he having been consulting engineer at the time the plant of a local paper company was constructed. It was during Cleveland's term and Evans was captain on leave of absence for a year.

One thing characteristic of the sailor was shown at that time. He had to put across the right of way of the Ashland division of the Chicago & Northwestern road a high bridge which connects the acid tower on a high hill with the mill in the valley. The road officials objected to the bridge and to stop the work had switch engines plying up and down the right of way, with the section crew on hand to offer resistance.

Evans gave a note to one of his men, who returned in half an hour with a dozen rifles and ammunition. Evans stepped up to the section foreman and in his bluff way remarked:

"The first man who offers resistance will get his —— carcass filled with lead."

The bridge went up and has been in use for years.

Hard to Satisfy Sailors.

Admiral Evans was discussing the navy before the advent of steam and armorclads.

"There was an altogether different atmosphere, a different feeling among the men in the old sailing days," the admiral said. "There was a greater feeling of affection between the men and their superiors, and whenever anything went wrong, every sailor felt that it was his right to take it straight to 'the old man,' as the captain was called.

"And a job it was to suit those fellows, too. I remember that in the Spanish War I had two or three of these old salts on my ship, and as we lay down in that southern climate we couldn't keep our water in a decent condition for drinking. Up comes Ben, one of my old sailors, to complain that the water wasn't fit to drink.

"Well, finally I thought out a brilliant scheme of passing pipes back and forth through one of the cool rooms, and soon we had water that was fresh and cold; only ship in the fleet that had it, too.

"I had scarcely settled back to take it easy, when word was brought to me that Ben insisted on seeing 'the old man.'

"I knew there was no stopping him, so I asked him to come up. He marched into my quarters, pulled his forelock just as if he felt some respect for me, and muttered:

" 'Complaint to make, sir.'

" 'Well, what is it?' I barked back at him.

" 'About the water. It's too cold. Hurts my teeth.'

' 'Huh! Hurts your teeth, does it? Well, go and have your teeth pulled.'

"Ben grinned and marched out, perfectly satisfied. He had had his say, and that was all he wanted."

HIGH THOUGHT WAVE.

Her people in Rialto were amazed at the sudden termination of the girl's career. Her father, a well-to-do rancher, came over to Pomona to investigate.

He called on Dr. Barry in the latter's office. He wasn't satisfied with the brand of philosophy manufactured in East Aurora.

SOME PUNCHES AND KICKS.

He punched Dr. Barry in the face; knocked him down and kicked him.

Then everybody else started in on Dr. Barry.

The medical society sternly withdrew the "special courtesies."

The hospital board discussed the propriety of passing some burning resolutions, setting forth their views of the case. But they finally deprived Dr. Barry of the rights of the hospital—and let it go at that. They all admit Dr. Barry's medical ability.

Dr. Forrester then demanded that Dr. Barry leave his office and abandon their partnership.

To his surprise, Dr. Barry flatly refused. He said he liked it very much where he was. Newspaper notoriety being suggested, he said he didn't mind that a bit—good advertising.

Los Angeles attorneys were finally called in by Dr. Forrester. Dr. Barry also called in a law firm of Los Angeles.

Like Fra Elbertus, he stood pat and let the world say what it might. In the end, Dr. Forrester is said to have paid a good stiff sum of money to get his own practice back. The final settlement was made yesterday.

Dr. Barry was packing up his array of surgical instruments preparatory to moving to Los Angeles when interviewed for The Times. He is young, with a smooth-shaven face and a friendly air—not to mention a meerschaum pipe.

"COUNTRY TOWN GOSSIP."

"Oh, say, you're not going to publish that," he said, breezily, as he pushed back the saws and surgeons' knives.

"On my word, there's not a thing in it—gossip in a little country town. Where I made a mistake was in not going to the city in the first place. Well, I'm going now. Me for the tall buildings.

"Yes, I admit being barred out of the hospital. These country doctors were all sore at me. Jealous, you know. I had cut in on their little circle. Made me victim of a game.

"Yes, it is true that this girl told them a lot of rot about me. What she says isn't true, and when I went to the hospital, to confront her, she had to eat everything she had said.

"Vindicate myself? O Lord, no. What do you suppose I care for the opinions of any damn fool who would believe a story like that!

"As to the dissolution of this partnership—Dr. Forrester and I didn' get along well from the first. We hav agreed to quit. That's all.

"I am going to Los Angeles, where have influential friends. I shouldn' have come here at all except that Dr Forrester had a big practice, and thought I would get a start.

"Good-by. Some day, I'll tell you some great stuff about East Aurora. I know Fra Elbertus better than I know my own father."

Chew Gum While at Prayer.

"Women and girls kneel in prayer, and, while their minds are occupied with their appeals to God, their jaws are busy with chewing gum and they don't know it."

This was the declaration of Rev. H. P. Smyth in his sermon at St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, Evanston, Ill., recently, in illustrating what he termed the excessive nervousness of Americans.

"The American people are so nervous they can't keep still either sitting down or standing up," he continued. "Men swear and women chew gum because of this nervousness."—[Chicago Record-Herald.

dozen took the row in front of and so on till the first tier of s was filled. Then the second was filled in the same systematic the rear row first, the front row I looked and wondered. In a moment I was to understand.

The soup kitchen was in the rear of hall, a small room with one long running down its length at which be seated twenty-five or thirty at a time. Those on the back row e first tier of chairs were nearer kitchen; they were first into the and would eat soup first.

From 12 o'clock to 12:30 is no great h of time to wait for your repast prepared when you are dining at Alexandria or the Angelus or 's. There one has the music and lights and the flowers; there is the of conversation, the pretty gowns faces to look at, the bustle of the waiters and the electrified atmosphere of an animated scene to keep one oled and patient. And then perhaps you are more than willing to half an hour or so for your dinner in the hope of "working up an appetite."

A man of perhaps 45 years sat beside His cheeks were hollow, his skin and anaemic looking, his eyes burnt holes in their sunken sockets. He pulled an old battered timepiece from his pocket and glanced at

"Twelve forty-five," he said to me without emphasis. "Looks like they might as well have the stuff ready when they let 'em in."

"I should say so," I replied. "When they begin to feed?"

"Oh, when they get ready," said my neighbor. "Lots of the poor devils who here are glad to sit still an hour but I think it'd be better to let sit and rest after they've had their It's no fun tramping all day looking for work on a soup diet."

"Well, most of them get a square a day, somewhere else, I guess," remarked tentatively.

He looked at me sharply for a second, but I was looking down and fussing with my fingers as most of the were doing and I presume he concluded I had no special interest in hing no more than the rest of

"ON THE HOG."

"No, just a week," said I. "I've broke just two days."

He nodded his head. "I thought so. ve got lots to learn. I've been on hog eight days myself. But this is second time I've been after a free I hate to come here, but, well, know a fellow'll steal something to f he gets hungry enough."

"Are you very hungry?" I asked.

"Oh, pretty hungry," he said, still without emphasis or apparent interest in the matter. "I'm tolerable hungry, right, but I could go a couple of more, if I had to."

I couldn't repress a start of surprise said:

"A couple of days more! Why, how has it been since you ate?"

"This is Tuesday, ain't it?" he said, reflectively. "Well, I had coffee and bread for breakfast Sunday."

I gasped. God in heaven, thought I, possible that many of these men been tramping the streets of this beautiful city since Sunday morning nothing but a cup of coffee and a of bread to keep the fires of life hope and courage burning!

The man glanced at me casually, and laughed a short, little laugh, which not bitter, and yet knew nothing mirth.

"Oh, you got lots to learn, pardner," counseled me. "Wait till you've up against it for eight days! let me tell you, it takes a good to starve to death. You can get pretty darned hungry, and then, when think you're about ready to pass your checks, you get a scrap of k and earn a dime and put a little into your stomach, or you get a of this stuff they give you here you can operate pretty well for a couple of days longer."

My companion then began to tell me about the girl who is fasting at Long Beach, and he went back into the history of similar fasts by Prof. Trigg and others, which have been narrated in newspapers in the last ten years. Then he nodded his head, sagely:

"It don't take much to keep a man And if you ain't working, you don't need much strength. But the of it is, if you live this way many days, you ain't got strength enough to work when you do get a I got one the other day, shovelin'. got fired in two hours, because I couldn't stand up under the work. I very well, anyhow, and seems I've lost what little strength I had."

I asked him if he ever tried one of Salvation Army 15-cent beds.

"Yes, I've tried 'em all, 10-cent, 15- and even the 25-cent rooms. And can't stand for any of them. There's noise and the lights and the smells the feeling that something's crawling on you all the time. First a feller coughs over on that side of you, and one coughs on this side, and then another feller begins to snore to beat band. I don't know. I guess a feller'd get used to it, but it'd take a long time."

I asked him if it wasn't better in the e rooms.

"Oh, they're just cells," he said. "Nothin' but cells. And they're all open the top, and the noises and smells come in just the same. Last time I had one of them, a feller next door me kept me awake for hours praying for salvation, till I hollered him if he didn't shut up I'd bust door in and give him some salva- he could still remember when hell froze over."

THE LUCKY ONES.

"First row," yelled a voice in the rear of the hall. Every neck was craned to watch the first fortunate s file into the little room where the steaming soup was set out on the ta-

"Another row," called the red-haired, good-natured youth, who was master of ceremonies in the soup kitchen, and another row filed in.

Conversation lagged in the chapel after that. A few stragglers dropped and took seats in the far part of hall, furthest from the kitchen. That is to say. They attracted only passing attention. All interest was centered in the fascinating watch which every eye fixed upon the disappearing files of men. Every once in while the red-haired youth would call out: "Another row" and the row front of that one which passed out would grip their hats a little harder and sit in tense expectancy of their turn.

Slowly the first tier of chairs were emptied of their occupants and the men who had filled them wrote their names on the blank book as they passed out, hats in hand to the sunlit street. Pretty soon, the row in which I sat moved into the little room. As we passed through the entrance way, each man took a hunk of bread from a tray. The hunks were big and heavy. I looked at mine and wondered if any man wanted to eat that much bread a sitting. And then I glanced at man to whom I had been talking, one who hadn't eaten since Sunday morning and yet was only "tolerable hungry." He had devoured nearly all of his bread already and he had not yet found his seat.

I sat down stunned and dazed. No Cicero nor Demosthenes, fortified by all the theories and arguments that ever were advanced to bolster up a syllogism in sociology could ever convince me that that man wasn't hungry to the verge of starvation.

I bit into my hunk of rye bread without appetite and found it stale. Later on I was to learn that the "hoboes," the real "bums" who frequent the soup kitchens, dub the bread which is given away as "punk." A "hunk of punk" they call it, and I don't blame them. But then, you know I had been on the hog for only a couple of days and wasn't really hungry. I noticed my friend of the emaciated countenance devoured his punk greedily enough. Some of those at the table crumbed their bread up into the soup; others pinched great wads out of it and filled their mouths as rapidly as possibly.

THIN SOUP.

I took another pinch of mine and then tasted the soup. It was hot. I could always say that honestly and conscientiously for free soup. It was hot. But that was about all the good I could say for it. There were a few pieces of cabbage floating about in it and down at the bottom of the bowl I found a couple of mites of carrot. Once I thought I discovered a small slab of beef, but investigation did not convince me. I never did decide what that substance was. I know it was not cabbage or carrot and I don't think it was meat. But I don't know. I made a bluff at sipping my soup and slipped my bread over toward my neighbor. Then I got up as soon as possible while he was still eating. Before I had pushed up my chair, I noticed his lean brown hand slide over the table cloth and grip my "hunk of punk." Oh, this one was a hungry man, all right.

Passing out, I registered "B. Sample" in a little book where each guest of the soup kitchen was supposed to write his name. Over the register was a sign: "Don't forget your 2 cents." Everyone who had 2 cents was supposed to pay that sum for his soup and bread. But I guess none of us had it. In the days I haunted the soup kitchen, I did not see a single man pay 2 cents or any sum for his feed and I think not one of them paid.

Out into the street, into the bright sunlight. One-thirty in the afternoon. Now what to do? How to pass the time till night and bed time. No more meals to look forward to today. Nothing to do, nothing to say. I stopped in front of the building to light my pipe and took out a sack of tobacco. Instantly two youthful hobos approached me:

"Can you spare some smokin'?" said one.

"Sure," said I. "Keep the whole sack. I know where I can get some more."

"The h—— you do," said he who had first addressed me. "Put us next, can't you?"

I laughed. "Can't do that, you know." And they grinned back and looked at me with an expression in their eyes which seemed to say: "We're wise."

AN EYE-OPENER.

They started to make them a cigarette apiece, but before they had a chance to get through and put the tobacco away, it had all disappeared. First one of the unfortunates who loafed around, then another had strolled up and "borrowed the makins'."

It was another eye-opener to me. These fellows were tobacco-broke as well as money-broke. And the former state is more convincing than the latter. Your genuine hobo will eat free soup when he has the price of a meal in his pocket. But he will not go without tobacco as long as he has 5 cents in his pocket. And, as for that matter, no more will you or I, or any other slave of the weed.

During the afternoon I loafed and smoked and chatted with the hobos who loitered around the corner of Wilmington and First streets. Along about 5 o'clock I "found" two dimes in my pocket and took a couple of my new-found friends over across the way to have a schooner of beer. This made me "ace high" with them, though I thought they were never quite able after that to settle in their own minds whether I lied about finding the 20 cents in my pocket or whether I had more that I didn't want to "flash."

GENUINE HELPLESSNESS.

Casually I got into conversation with several of these units in the great body of the unemployed and learned their stories. I was impressed by the sincerity of most of them, by the simple and unvarnished character of the tales they told. And I was impressed still more by the utter helplessness of the condition. Not a one of them had a penny in his pocket, a place to sleep or a job of work in sight. Some were so badly beaten in the game of life that they had given up entirely and had ceased to try. One young man admitted to me with a bitterness in his voice and in his blue eyes which told me he had been reading and listening to socialistic arguments:

"I'm sick of looking for work. I won't look any more. If the world wants me to work, it's got to come and find me, now."

"But wouldn't you rather work than go hungry? I would."

"Well, you're a d—— fool. Some of these rich slobs what ride around in automobiles and spend enough for one meal to keep me and you alive for a week, are goin' to find out some day they don't own the earth."

SULLEN RAGE.

He picked up his hat and walked away. Sullen rage against a world which had used him hardly expressed in every feature of his countenance. Among such as these are the ranks of the Socialists and anarchists recruited.

Others I talked to who were skilled workmen in various lines but had been thrown out of employment by the financial depression which resulted in the curtailment of many industries. Some of these were still hopeful of "picking up" something to do. Few of them belonged in this city. Of all the dozens of men I talked to in the three days I mingled with the unemployed, only one man had been here as long as one year. From far and near they had come, attracted by the balmy climate and the reports that Los Angeles had suffered less than most cities from industrial depression.

The majority of these poor fellows, I found to be honest working men, out of work. Most of them were rather patient in their attitude toward existing conditions, thankful to get a bowl of soup and a cup of coffee each day, grateful that "a feller can sleep out most any night here without gettin' very cold." A few of them were professional hobos who do not want to work and who take advantage of times like these to mix with the honest unemployed and share the charity which a busy but kind-hearted old world hands out in its thoughtful moments to the man who is "down on his luck."

The Salvation Army tries to discriminate between the professional and the accidental hobos, but finds it "hard picking." The former is, as a rule, shrewder and quicker than the latter and he manages to mix in with the throng and get a little bit the best of it all the time.

THE BED.

At 8 o'clock in the evening I sought a bed at the Workmen's Metropole, the Salvation Army's main barracks. I was told that the twenty-five-cent rooms were all gone, as well as the ten-cent beds, but that I could still have a fifteen-cent bed. I handed the man in the little office a dime and a nickle and was directed up a bare, flight of steps to the third floor. Here a watchman took me in charge and directed me to one of the hundred beds in the big sleeping-room.

These are narrow, single beds, with two sheets, a pillow and two blankets. They are very close together, but there is room to pass between them without disturbing the sleepers, and the room is well ventilated and kept at a comfortable temperature. Electric lights, placed at regular intervals in the ceiling, keep the room too light for sleeping purposes, but it is necessary that there be no darkness in a room where the flotsam and jetsam of humanity comes for a "fifteen-cent bed." I did not investigate the condition of my sheets and pillow case, because I meant to use them anyway and while knowledge sometimes brings power it seldom brings happiness.

So I deposited my outer clothing and hat on the floor under my cot and lay down. It seemed an age that I lay there awake, listening to the chorus of snoring all around me, the measured tread of the watchman and the occasional bustle of a late-comer. Two men came in about 11 o'clock, who were slightly intoxicated. Their turbulence was quickly quelled by the watchman, who told them if they said another word aloud he'd throw them both downstairs. In the three days I mixed with the hobos, I saw no other men under the influence of liquor. Many of them probably would not have sunk so low had it not been for rum, but the fact that none of them could get any was proof positive of the utter "brokeness" of their condition.

THAT AWFUL COUGH.

Eventually I dropped off to sleep, for my unaccustomed stunt had tired me terribly. At intervals I was awakened by the coughing of consumptives, of whom there seemed to be a score or more in the big room. It was a consolation to me as I listened to the wracking sounds to feel the soft breezes of night blowing in from the open windows and to know that the air was not vitiated by these unfortunate, diseased outcasts.

I was awakened at 5:30 o'clock by the big clock on the wall. A man of apparently 30 years, sleeping in a cot next to mine, seemed to spring all at once from a sound sleep to a sitting position as he shouted:

"Hey, there! Where you goin'? Bring me up my coffee and a big hunk of punk. I don't feel like goin' down to breakfast this mornin'."

Then he sank back on his cot and was sound asleep again in a moment. I looked at the man in some amazement. He had apparently addressed his remarkable orders to no one. I think he spoke without being fully awake.

I had no desire to sleep any longer, and soon began to drag my clothing from under the cot and dress for the street. In a moment my neighbor awakened again, and, rising on his elbow, addressed me:

"Say, sport, bring my coffee and punk up to me, will you?"

I looked at him sharply and said, "Sure," as I saw a quizzical, humorous expression in his eyes and about the corners of his mouth.

"Oh, I guess, on second thought, I might as well go down," he said. He looked around the room at the sleepers.

"Be a damn shame if these fellers was to miss their coffee and punk," he said. "Guess we'd better wake 'em all up."

Clad only in the half glow of the dawn which was stealing through the open windows, he arose, a splendid figure of a man, tall, straight-limbed, muscled front and back and stepped lightly over to the next cot.

"GIT YOUR PUNK."

"Wake up and git your punk," he said to the man he shook to wakefulness.

Then he passed on to an old fellow, full 65 years old, whose gentle snoring had distressed me all night. Him he shook gently, and as the faded, bleared old eyes peered up at him curiously from the mass of tangled gray hair and whiskers, which covered all the rest of his face, he said:

"Old man, ain't you goin' to git your coffee and punk?"

The old fellow grunted some unintelligible response. Then the facetious one said:

"Want a nice beefsteak with yours? or a couple of fried eggs? No? Well, it's up to you."

And he grinned as he walked back to his cot and pulled a faded shirt and a pair of worn corduroy trousers over his naked form.

They were getting up now all around us; old men, middle-aged men, young men and few who were mere boys. Most of them looked less tired and discouraged than they did when I saw them the night before. With most of them the fifteen-cent bed on which they had spent the night was a luxury which they could not enjoy every night, and they made the most of it, "pounding their pillows" hard for the ten or eleven hours they had lain there.

With a dozen others I passed into the toilet rooms where all performed vigorous ablutions at the washstands. There was soap a plenty and half a dozen towels; also there were several shower baths with plenty of cold water available. But I was shivering in my hobo garments and I couldn't quite reconcile mysef to the towels which a score had used before I arrived.

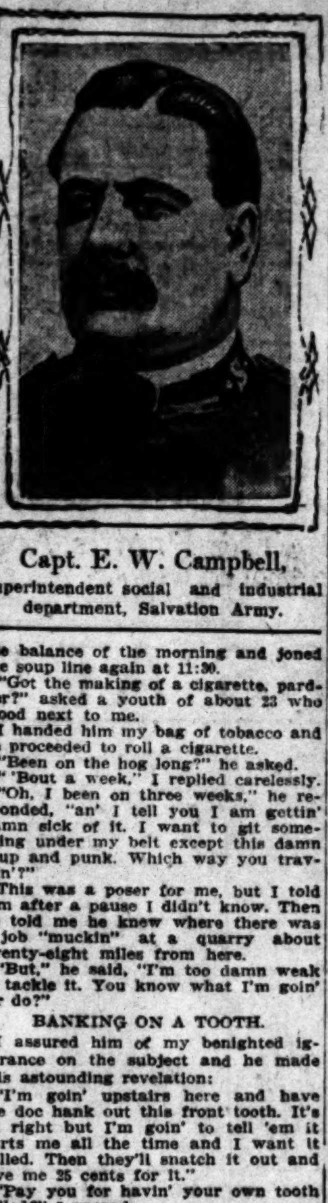
So I hurried downstairs and was one of the first to get in the coffee line. At 7 o'clock we were admitted to the chapel, where I had waited for soup the day before. There were 150 of us for breakfast. I did not have to wait long till my turn came to pass into the little kitchen, grabbing my "hunk of punk" as I entered.

GOOD COFFEE.

I had expected to see the coffe in cups with a teaspoon and some sugar available. But the coffee was in the big soup bowls from which we had drunk the day noon before and there was no sugar. We crumbled our bread into the coffee or munched it silently between gulps of the steaming liquor. The coffee was not bad and I drank most of mine.

The fat, round-faced cook, who presided at the kitchen range, was kept busy ladeling out the coffee and the red-faced youth sliced up the bread into great hunks as fast as the men filed in.

I finished mine and registered. Then I slipped away and climbed the First-street hill to my home to visit my wife for a few minutes. She had expected me, although I had told her I might not get home for several days, and she had an appetizing breakfast ready. I consumed ham and eggs and more coffee, with cream and sugar in it this time, and, greatly refreshed and strengthened, started out again. But I wondered to myself: I had as much at the soup kitchen as those poor devils and yet I could go and eat a hearty breakfast on top of it. Wonder how they feel.



Capt. E. W. Campbell,
superintendent social and industrial department, Salvation Army.

I loafed around with the unemployed the balance of the morning and joned the soup line again at 11:30.

"Got the making of a cigarette, pardner?" asked a youth of about 23 who stood next to me.

I handed him my bag of tobacco and he proceeded to roll a cigarette.

"Been on the hog long?" he asked.

"'Bout a week," I replied carelessly.

"Oh, I been on three weeks," he responded, "an' I tell you I am gettin' damn sick of it. I want to git something under my belt except this damn soup and punk. Which way you travelin'?"

This was a poser for me, but I told him after a pause I didn't know. Then he told me he knew where there was a job "muckin" at a quarry about twenty-eight miles from here.

"But," he said, "I'm too damn weak to tackle it. You know what I'm goin' ter do?"

BANKING ON A TOOTH.

I assured him of my benighted ignorance on the subject and he made this astounding revelation:

"I'm goin' upstairs here and have the doc hank out this front tooth. It's all right but I'm goin' to tell 'em it hurts me all the time and I want it pulled. Then they'll snatch it out and give me 25 cents for it."

"Pay you for havin' your own tooth pulled?" I gasped.

"Sure Mike," he grinned. "Ain't you next ter that? Cost you 50 cents anywheres else to git em pulled. Here they give you two bits for the tooth and pull it fer nawthin'."

"But what are you going to do with the two bits?" I asked, my bewilderment growing.

"I tell you," he said, lowering his voice and speaking with a show of sincerity which I cannot doubt. "I'm goin' ter git a sack of terbaccer an' a 10-cent beeksteaf an' a flop. I ain't had a beefsteak ner a bed in over a week an' I got ter git somethin' under my belt an' a good night's sleep afore I kin start over agin."

"Then what will you do?" I asked.

"Wy, then, I'm goin' to start out and walk five or six mile into the country an' bone some rancher fer a supper and a night's lodgin' and breakfas' in the mornin'. Then I'll move on, makin' about five mile a day and gittin' two squares a day and a bed ever' night till I git my strength back. Any of these ranchers'll put a feller up fer a night an' give him two meals. I'll work my way out to that quarry an' soon's I git there I'll be able to pick up a shovel."

I was too bewildered to say anything more to this poor devil who was willing to sell part of his body to get 25 cents to start in anew. But I found an opportunity to slip into his hand a 25-cent piece with a warning to keep his mouth shut and keep his tooth.

The soup line formed slowly but surely. In front of me stood a man past 50 years, who watched everything about him with dulled but observant eyes. Finally he turned to me and said over his shoulder:

"Purty tuff, ain't it, purty tuff. All these fellers ain't got nawth' to eat and nawthin' to buy annything with. Purty tuff!"

Yes, that's it, I said to myself. "Pretty tough." That's the burden of their cry, the crux of their complaint. Pretty tough!

ONCE MORE.

Into the chapel, seating ourselves row by row, we went and then followed the long, dismal wait for the fat cook and the red-headed bread cutter to call out "First row."

We studied the intertwined American, French, German, English and Siamese flags on the walls and read and reread for the -th time the mottos: "You've come to the right place;" "Victory or Defeat, Which Shall It Be" and another great yellow, flaring poster "Proclamation" about the "Campaign of 1908" in which "30,000 precious souls are to be saved in the United States," typical Salvation Army posters.

I looked at the altar and the soundless organ and wondered to myself why the army, with its zeal for souls and its never-wearying in well-doing, did not take advantage of this hour of opportunity when 200 outcasts were assembled waiting for a bowl of soup and a piece of dry bread to teach them something of the religion which is so practical in most of its ramifications. It occurred to me that a simple religious service at this time, some songs, a few talks would serve quite as useful purpose as the street services given nightly by each of the three corps in the city. And then I wondered. Could it be possible that no services were held here for these poor devils because they had no money? But I banished the thought as unjust and I am glad I did. Because after I had talked to the earnest, simple-minded, devoted men who are at the head of the Salvation Army work in Los Angeles and had become familiar with the details of their organization and labors I knew that, whatever their mistakes, they are serving God in their own way, according to the best of their ability and they are in the "work" for the love of the "work."

Before they had begun to serve the soup this day—it was Wednesday—the red-haired fellow put up the sign in the hall: "You are too late. It is all gone." Half a dozen stragglers insisted on coming after the sign was displayed and these the red-haired one "bawled out" very promptly: "Can't you read the sign?" he would demand. "It's all gone. You're too late."

What he meant was that there was enough soup to feed only those assembled. Earlier in the day it had been announced that no more free coffee would be served in the morning and this announcement had made some come for free soup who otherwise would not have done so.

As we waited the old fellow who had remarked "pretty tuff" in the line, spoke me again:

"I think if I wuz some of these young fellers, I'd enlist," he said. "They're get $15 a month and good grub and beds an' be lots better off than beggin' free soup and sleepin' in box cars."

"I guess you're right," said I.

ON "TOTHER SIDE."

"I served four year in the army," he said to me, nodding his head gravely. "An' I struck fer a year an' a half when ever' feller I knew wuz quittin' and us that wuz left was starvin' over half the time. I ain't never been able to hear good sence."

"Why don't you apply for a pension?" I asked.

His grim old face lighted up with a comical smile.

"Guest it wouldn't be no use," he replied. "I wuz on the tother side."

The soup was much better today than it was on Tuesday, when it was mostly hot water. It was bean soup now, and the fat cook, who stirred it with a barrel stave, was liberal in dishing out the beans which were in the bottom of his big pot.

I ate most of mine, and slipped my "punk" over to the fellow on my right, who took it without a word and ate it in no time. Then I registered again and got out.

In the evening I attended the services of Corps No. 1 at Fourth and Hill streets, where ten men and women sang and prayed and talked to the fleeting audiences which stopped a minute to listen and passed on. The woman who led the meeting was young and inspired. She had a clear, strong, soprano voice, with which she led most of the songs, and she worked with an intensity and zeal which I thought uncommon even among these people, noted for the conviction of sincerity which they carry to every one who watches them without prejudice. Later, I learned the woman was Adjt. May Thomas, that she was assistant to Capt. Hattie Bruce, the first leader of Corps No. 1, but who is now seriously ill, and that Adjt. Thomas, fresh from training school, was undertaking her first responsible work as leader.

RELIEVED.

It is by ones and twos that the Salvation Army recruits its rank and file, just as it is by nickels and dimes that it secures the bulk of its funds for carrying on the work.

I went to the Central Hotel, operated by the Salvation Army at No. 461½ Central avenue, where beds for 10 cents may be obtained. But they were all taken. The place was full, they told me. So I tramped to the Poor Man's Hotel, at No. 725-727 East First street, where beds for 5 cents may be found. But here, again, I found everything taken for the night. It was after 11 o'clock, and the unemployed who have "the price of a flop" take no chances, as I had done.

I confess I was relieved that I could not find a bed at either place. Conditions I knew were not so acceptable as they were at the Hotel Metropole, where I had slept the night before, and I did not care for anything worse, and I felt that I knew enough already to satisfy the most exacting employers.

THE CLOTHES QUESTION.

Thursday I gave a worn suit of black clothes to a friend to take to the Army's Central Industrial Store, at No. 127 Wilmington street, with the information that it was for some deserving poor person. I instructed my emissary to ask the man in charge of th eindustrial store what disposition would be made of the suit, and the manager told him quite frankly it would be cleaned and repaired and placed on sale. The manager stated that it was necessary to charge something for the clothing and articles given to the army in order to pay the expenses of collecting and disitributing them, and to keep away the professional beggars, who otherwise would carry off the bulk of the things donated by charity.

Later in the day, I went to the Industrial Store with the purpose of buying back my own suit. I wished to find out whether it was sold at a nominal figure or whether the army was asking too much for a really needy person to pay. The manager of the store told me he had no black sack suits in stock; that, in fact, he had no black clothing at all, except a split-tail coat. So I went away. I have no idea why he lied to me.

NOT WILLING TO WORK.

I sent another friend to the soup kitchen to get a man to go to his home and work about his place for an hour or so a day for his bed and board. This friend, whom fe will nominate Jones, asked the fat cook at the soup kitchen to recommend a good trustworthy man, who would be glad to get a good home for a couple of weeks while waiting for a steady job, on the terms Jones had to offer. The cook told him he couldn't recommend any of the men in the soup line.

"But," he said, "you may stand outside there and pick one out yourself as they come in, and talk to him, and if you think you want him, make a deal with him."

Jones acted on this advice and picked out a man of 50 years, to whom he stated his proposition. The old fellow, with some asperity, told him:

"Wait till I've had my dinner and I'll talk to you." Then calmly seated himself and took a newspaper from his pocket and read till ushered into the soup kitchen. There he ate his soup deliberately, reading his paper between bites, and finally, having finished his meal, came back to where Jones was waiting, and said with an air of great condescension:

"Now, sir, I am ready to talk to you."

Astonished beyond measure but game to the core, Jones stated his proposition.

"Any money?" inquired the old fellow.

"No, I've no job for you, you must understand," said Jones with some warmth. "I am offering you a home, with a good bed and three meals a day of the kind I eat. And you will be free to look for a job all day long if you care to. But I can't afford to pay you money for the privilege of boarding you."

The old fellow drew himself up.

"Sir, I'll have you to understand I am no pauper."

Jones was dumfounded.

"Well, what in blazes are you doing around here, then, eating free soup?" he blurted out.

And the old man explained with much dignity that he was an expert mechanic, had just gotten out of the hospital, would go back to work in a few days, and in the meantime, till he

Capt. Campbell says no deserving person who is not able to pay a small sum for needed clothin or furniture is ever turned way. Application to headquarters for clothing, food or furniture is immediately followed by investigation, and the deserving applicant receives promptly an order on the nearest industrial store for the goods he or she needs. Only the other day a wagonload of clothing and furniture was taken to one poor family which had become absolutely destitute because the father of nine children had been for two months out of work.

Capt. Campbell showed me slips for over 100 beds which had been given free in the Metropole Hotel during the last week. These orders were on the clerk at the hotel, were signed by the captain and turned in as "cash."

"INDUSTRIAL STORES."

The army has recently established a fourth lodging-house, known as the Grace Hotel, at No. 235 Hewett street, where there are accommodations for 100 men, at 10 cents for beds.

There are nine industrial stores, located as follows:

No. 1—No. 127 Wilmington.
No. 2—No. 613 New High.
No. 3—No. 130 North Main.
No. 4—No. 453½ Central avenue.
No. 5—No. 835 Maple avenue.
No. 6—No. 1221 East Ninth street.
No. 7—No. 725 East First.
No. 8—No. 1510 South San Pedro.
No. 9—No. 235 Hewett.

The Salvation Army's income is derived:

(1.) From the nine industrial stores, at which many poor families do all their trading.

(2.) From silent contributions, received from charitably-minded people of the city.

(3.) From collections in streets and churches.

(4.) From rent of beds and rooms in four hotels.

In the Industrial Home in the main building on Wilmington street, scores of deserving men who are out of work are given temporary asylum while awaiting employment. They are assigned work about headquarters, for which they receive a few dollars, and they are boarded and lodged till the army finds work for them to do.

Last week, the army secured employment for nearly 100 men who were living in the Industrial Home. None but those known to be deserving are received here.

SOUP COSTS LITTLE.

Maj. Waite, who has charge of the free soup kitchen, showed me receipts for payment for bread averaging $30 a week for the last three weeks. Some bread is given to the kitchen by merchants and bakers, but such an enormous quantity is consumed it is necessary to pay for much of it. The soup which is served costs very little, as most of the ingredients are contributed. The city makes an allowance for the free soup kitchen, also, so all in all, the kitchen may be said to cost the army very little.

Maj. Waite and Capt. Campbell are of the opinion that many of the men now frequenting the kitchen will not go to work so long as they can eat without working. It is the intention to abandon this part of the work just as soon as there is a reasonable assurance that no deserving man who wants to work is unable to find work or the price of a meal.

VOLUNTEERS OF AMERICA.

A visit to the headquarters of the Volunteers of America taught me little that I did not know before. The system is the same as prevails at the Salvation Army. The free soup is served to about the same number only at a different hour, which enables the free food fiends to go from one place to another and get all there is to be had at both places.

There is no doubt in the world that many of the hobos—the professional hobos—take advantage of the soup kitchens and eat every place where free food is served as often it is served. But this is no argument against the fact that there are hungry men in Los Angeles, dozens and scores of them, men who are willing to work and who would rather work than beg soup.

The headquarters of the Volunteers of America is at 128 East First street. Here it is that the free coffee and soup are served. More than 400 men are fed daily. The coffee and bread and the soup and bread are supposed to cost 2 cents each. In the last week, the Volunteers have received in cash 14 cents. No one is asked to pay cash and next to no one does pay for his soup or his coffee.

The Volunteers' headquarters at 128 East First street has fifty-six beds at 15 cents apiece and seventy-eight rooms at 25 cents apiece. These are all taken by 8 o'clock at night. At 321½ East First street, the Volunteers have accommodations for about 200 more, at 10 and 15 cents per night for a bed.

Wednesday night, Mrs. Gish, who is one of the Volunteers' most earnest workers, took over 100 homeless wanderers to various rooming-houses and paid for their beds. Most of the money for the same she solicited from the sidewalks.

Maj. W. M. Hughes is in charge of the Volunteers' work. Capt. E. C. Tilsley is his chief assistant. They have three industrial stores and conduct one spiritual meeting a night.

SOCIALISTIC BETHLEHEM.

I visited also the Bethlehem Institution at Vignes and Ducommun streets, the institution started and maintained through the efforts of Rev. Dana Bartlett. Him I found a very busy man, too busy to talk and seemingly indifferent to whether the world likes hisstyle of work or not.

The Rev. Bartlett has free beds at his place but, some of my hobo friends told me, the beds are so "crumby" that, if the Salvation Army or the Volunteers learn that you have occupied one of the Bethlehem free beds, they will not allow you to sleep in one of their beds till you have been disinfected and deodorized. The free beds at the Bethlehem Institution are on the floor. They consist of the floor and a thin mattress without covers of any kind.

"During the stress," said Dr. Bartlett, "we took care of 200 or 300 a night. We have fifty or more every night now."

But I remembered the warning given me by my hobo friends and wondered how much better it would be to sleep in a box car or indeed under the open vault of heaven and have no vermin than to enjoy one of Dr. Bartlett's free mattresses on the floor.

Some of the hobos who frequent the Bethlehem Institution told me that the establishment favored men who belonged to unions, that the men who came there for charity received it on condition that they should become members of labor unions. I was not able to verify this accusation. One old fellow who has lived at the Bethlehem Institution for many months, told me he had never heard the question of labor unionism raised while he was there.

"And," said he, "I don't believe it ever has been raised. "Now for socialism," he added, "that is a different matter. I dasn't say nothin' about it but you'll find it's a hotbed of socialism.

And so I did. The clerk of the hotel, of whom I inquired where I could find Dr. Bartlett, facetiously handed me a copy of the "Appeal to Reason," and told me "The Times does not print as much truth in a week as 'The Appeal to Reason' prints in a single issue." I told him I was surprised to find socialistic literature in a non-sectarian, charitable institution.

He said: "Well, if you'd been up against what I have and had studied the subject as I have, you would be a Socialist, too."

"I think not," I replied. "There is another way out."

"Well, if you know it," he retorted, "there are several hundred men who come around here who would like to be put next."

I would have liked to have asked Dr. Bartlett about these things, but he didn't have time to sit down and talk to me. He is a very busy man. He told me that he had another place, No. 618 New High street, where Italians and Slavonians congregate. He didn't say whether they are Socialists or Anarchists or unionites perforce. But an old fellow who has been around the Bethlehem institution a long time told me he "dasn't say" what he had seen and heard.

I heard from several sources that Dr. Bartlett is very kind to his unfortunates, that his place is the most homelike in the city and his free meals the best. But always there seemed to be a mental reservation and, try as I might, I could not find out what it was.

Dr. Bartlett told me he had no beds for sale by the night, that his rooms were always taken by regular boarders at $1, $1.50 and $2 a week, but that he never turned away a man who wanted a free bed on a mattress on the floor. I did not ask him about the "crumbs."

Dr. Bartlett told me he was finding lots of work for unemployed men. He stated that he had jobs for 100 men within the next few days. I did not learn till several hours after I interviewed him that all the organized charities of the city had formed a central employment bureau and that Dr. Bartlett was in charge of this central bureau. I thought he might have told me, himself.

Dr. Bartlett serves a free meal at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. This meal, the hobos say, is the best in the city. It is not free soup. It is a real meal with potatoes and coffee and other things.

Among the other organized charities of the city—at least the Salvation Army and the Volunteers of America—the Bethlehem institution is regarded as a joke. Personally, I think Rev. Mr. Bartlett is a very busy man, a very busy man, almost too busy to attend to the manifold and multiform duties of his work.

The Telephone Discussion.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 29.—[To the Editor of The Times.] Some years ago the Home Telephone Company came into the field and offered better service than the Sunset, which they claim they have given, and the solicitors held out to prospective subscribers the prospect of running the Sunset out of business. The Home Telephone Company was never able to accommodate the number of subscribers desiring service and the result has been that we have been compelled to have two phone systems. The Home Telephone Company sold bonds and generously gave stock away to bondholders without money being received in return for the stock. It now claims as a right, to have rates of telephones raised so as to pay dividends on what might properly be termed watered stock. The original business Home phone rate was $4 a month and later it was raised to $5. At first it charged 30 cents a month for extra subscribers' names in the book, later 50 cents, and at the first of the year raised it to $1.

Both telephone companies, in order to have rates raised alleged valuations about eight or ten times the amount which they swore to the Assessor. Let them first pay to the city and county the taxes on this amount of their valuation and then they are in a position to demand raising of rates. Both companies assert they are losing money at the present rates.

Telephones in Stockholm, Sweden, cost 60 Kronor, about $16.20 a year. Stockholm is about 300,000 in population, and nearly every house has a telephone. If the cost of maintenance is greater, the greater the number of phones, how does Stockholm pay expenses? Likewise, if such is the case, why do the companies have solicitors, when increase in business looses money for them?

Must people in Los Angeles, compelled to have both telephones, pay $120 a year for both office phones (in addition to double residence system,) while people in Stockholm obtain the same for $16.20? Very sincerely, Cured His Consumption.

After undergoing medical treatmen for four years for consumption, an after spending every cent he had i the world for medical treatment, an then forced to the State sanatoriu for tuberculosis at Rutland, wher he spent two years, supposedly in hopeless condition, with death onl a question of time, Elton M. Brown of Taunton, Mass., in a fit of coughing, brought up a tooth.

Browne hurried with the tooth t a doctor's office and submitted to thorough examination. All traces o consumption had disappeared. Browne left Rutland and went home at once.

Manufacturers Complain of Too Many Laws.

Different Food Labels for Each State Required.

Grocery Stores of City Are Now Inspected.

Every large grocery dealer in the ity is in favor of the national pure ood law, but there are many objectors o State laws. One man says that a eparate law for each State is ridicuous, as it makes the manufacturer rint different labels for different tates. He exhibited a jar of preerves which was so plastered with abels that it was impossible to see the ontents.

One State demands publication of the ontents of an entire bottle, can or jar, hile another requires merely the atement of the amount of preservave used. When the United States thorities accept an article as fit for nsumption and containing no inrious chemicals, further regulation ould be unnecessary, it is claimed. e dealer least affected by the pure od laws is he who handles only the st goods. There has never been ch adulteration of the best goods, e manufacturers maintaining a high andard for their reputations' sake.

In inferior articles, however, chemils have been used excessively. The yer has been chiefly to blame for is through insistence upon obtaing a given product at a certain cost. e grocer, to meet the demand of his stomer, wrote the manufacturer that would be absolutely necessary to oduce a grade of goods that could sold at a reasonable profit and still cheap. This led to adulteration.

The same thing will continue but w the man who buys a can of peas r 10 cents, in preference to one costg 15 cents, will be apprised of the ct that the cheaper peas contain a eater percentage of copper sulphate hold their color. If one buys a bote of wine, or whisky which he alays considered good and reads the bel, he may find that it has been ade from prune juice, or deoderized cohol, but he gets what he pays for d is not deceived.

According to the reports of the State spector of foods in Los Angeles, ere are very few cases of wilful negence in disposing of goods of doubtl character. The grocerymen have therto taken it for granted that an ticle was exactly what it purported be, but now they make certain that is made of honest ingredients and mplies with the regulations.

Of the sixty or seventy stores visited the inspector very few have been und perfect in all details. Not only eir contents but the buildings themlves are inspected to see if they are nitary and clean. No arrests are ing made on the initial investigation the law is being enforced as mildly possible, but defects are pointed out d warnings given. If these are disgarded, drastic measures will folw.

Cereals have been found to be the ost seriously damaged goods, when pt for a long time. The weevil, or me insect, or worm gets into them d destroys their commercial value, ve for chicken food. Old cans of at and vegetables and fruit, which ve been found "working," have been nsigned to the dump heap, as have rious flavoring extracts which conin other coal tar dye than that peritted by law.

As to coloring matter, a grocer said: ne drop of a solution is used in tintg a ten-pound batch of bonbons and is has no effect at all upon the ndy." There are many other prodts which must have color to be made tractive and in which nothing but al tar can be used. The coloring ade from vegetable matter is not rong enough to produce desired relts and is made stronger by the use mineral dye.

There is no doubt that the pure food w is proving beneficial to the comunity. Mixed goods, such as coffee, ll be sold for what they really are. viled ham will be described as conining a preponderance of ham, not wholly ham. This will be the case along the line and when a conmer asks for an article of certain ality, he will get it.

The animal recently while ting his dinner also bit his tail, gangene set in, and it became necessary amputate a portion of the tail to ve his life. The leopard was lased, thrown on its back, a piece of ft wood was given it to gnaw, and hile held by ten men, the veterin y proceeded with the ablation of a rtion of the tail and cauterized the ound. cents per ton mile. The aqueduct engineers have figured that the city can build the line and operate it at a cost of 8 cents per ton mile.

CENT MEANS MUCH.

The volume of freight carried on the road will be about equal to 20,000,000 ton miles; one cent on the rate means a difference of $200,000.

As a special inducement to the railroad companies to make a low bid for carrying aqueduct freight, the Board of Public Works has included in the specifications a condition that the successful bidder shall have the monopoly of routing all the freight brought here from the East for use on the aqueduct at any point between Los Angeles and Independence. This privilege alone has been estimated to be worth $100,000 to the railroad.

Gen. Chaffee, W. B. Mathews and Assistant Engineer Lippincott spent two days in San Francisco last week conferring with the Southern Pacific officials over the question of freight rates. No agreement was reached, but the Southern Pacific has since sent an extra force of men and teams to Mojave to work on the new line to Keeler.

Aqueduct officials say that a railroad line will be built to Jawbone Cañon within ninety days, but they decline to discuss details.

SOUTH DAKOTANS' DAY.

More Than Thousand Enjoy Annual Picnic of State Association at Eastlake Park.

Bright sunshine and the little chilly twang in the air yesterday stimulated more than a thousand persons to attend the annual picnic of the South Dakota Association in Eastlake Park. A business session, preceding the speech-making, resulted in the election of the following officers foir the ensuing year: President, Jonah Jones, Long Beach; vice-president, Theodore D. Kanouse, Los Angeles; secretary and treasurer, George R. Peterson. The Executive Committee includes Col. J. M. Green, Los Angeles; T. M. Way, Altadena; E. O. Hanson, Hollywood; F. A. Howe, Long Beach; D. P. Warren, Pasadena.

Many happy reunions took place and happy reminiscences of the past were exchanged. All the speeches were informal, and the utmost good humor prevailed.

W. A. Wilkes acted as chairman. Former Atty.-Gen. Robert Dollard related experiences of pioneer days in South Dakota and California.

Theodore D. Kanouse, formerly warden of the South Dakota penitentiary, told of the organization of South Dakota political bodies, and the admission of the State into the Union in 1889. National Committeeman J. M. Green, colonel of the South Dakota National Guard, who is staying at Hotel Hayward, spoke of the political situation, past and present, in his native State. D. P. Ward led in singing "America," and also sang several other songs.

E. B. Korns explained the difference in the handshake of the South Dakota man, and that of another citizen. A. M. Parkins, Capt. W. E. Dixon, Rev. G. Vanderliss of Monrovia, and several others assisted in making the affair enjoyable.

The official register, filled with the names of the visitors, will be open for future signatures at the office of E. O. Hanson, No. 357 South Spring street, where former residents of South Dakota are expected to gather.

INSPECTORS HAPPY.

Dist.-Atty. Fredericks has endeared himself to the employés of the health department by sending a communication to the Health Officer, warning him that the uniforms worn by the inspectors must be discarded, because they resemble the uniforms of the National Guard of California.

The health inspectors have fought for years against wearing uniforms; the present health board is the first that has insisted on this regulation. Friday the board went to the extent of suspending one inspector because he did not report for duty in uniform. Saturday morning the Health Officer received the note of warning from the District Attorney. Naturally the inspectors will not appear in uniform again until the objection is officially withdrawn.

The communication from the District Attorney was occasioned by a protest from Brig.-Gen. Wankowski that the health inspectors and the marching clubs of certain fraternal societies are wearing uniforms similar to those of the National Guard of California.

Health Officer Powers said last night that it is the caps worn by the inspectors that roused the ire of the District Atorney's office. He says that he discussed the question with Gen. Wankowswi and with the District Attorney, and that the objections will be removed by discarding the caps.

The inspectors themselves are very likely to insist on discarding their entire uniforms.

Bessie was dressing her doll, while Master Frank, who was out of humor, spoke to her in a very teasing way. She was quick-tempered, but in this instance did not retort.

"Mamma," replied Bessie, "I wanted to, but couldn't. I had my mouth full

SOMETHING NEW.

FOR POOR BOY MAKES PLEA.

Jordan Urges College Work in High School.

Some Prominent Educators Approve Innovation.

Bovard Fears a Yielding to Commercial Spirit.

"It is bound to come in time," said a member of the Board of Education, yesterday, in referring to the proposed adding of two years of college work to the High School curriculum.

If Los Angeles makes this change, she will establish a precedent for the whole United States. The suggestion was made in a letter to the local high schools from Dr. David Starr Jordan, who has repeatedly urged the innovation in his speeches. The matter has been referred to the Board of Education and is under advisement.

The members of the board seem to be a unit in giving the plan their hearty approval. "It is a far-reaching undertaking," said Joseph Scott, "and we shall give it mature consideration before taking action."

Roger Page, chairman of the High School Committee, declared himself in favor of the movement for broader education in the public schools, but added: "We must have some better way devised for raising money before we can undertake it."

Principal Housh of the Los Angeles High School thinks that the cost to the community in general would be no greater than the present custom of sending students away to college. His school already furnishes post graduate work in several lines, and he is sure that the proposed plan is both desirable and feasible. A canvass of the several grades of the Los Angeles High showed that more than one-half of the pupils would enroll if the addition to the course was made.

HOUSH'S VIEWS.

Principal Housh's reasons for advocating the plan are: "The demand is great and general. Enough pupils from Los Angeles High School alone would take advantage of the instruction to make a small college. I have received many letters of inquiry from other schools. Every community, especially every city of the size of Los Angeles, should afford two years' free instruction, in addition to what is now afforded in the High School. This is done in the more advanced European countries. Such a course need not cover the instruction given in all courses of a university, but only such subjects as lead directly to technical training. Such a course would make the students better citizens.

"The demand of the time is for greater proficiency in preparation for life work. Not only the professions, but commerce and manufactures call for more expert knowledge and skill. It is not only the right of every capable and ambitious student to have the opportunity, but it is to the interest of the State to furnish the facilities.

"The expense of the proposed course in connection with the work of a large high school would not be great. In Southern California there should be several high schools equipped for advanced work, and in this city there should be at least one."

"POLY'S" HEAD PLEASED.

Principal J. H. Francis of the Polytechnic High School, is enthusiastic in his support of President Jordan's suggestion, He says:

"The movement to have two years added to the High School course is the next great step in secondary education. It will make the High School in reality what it has long been in name—the poor boy's college—and will offer opportunity and encouragement to thousands of our best young men and women to go on to a point in their educational career where they can turn their knowledge into legitimate and useful fields. If at the end of these two years, they choose to go to college, as many of them will, they can do so without any loss of time. There are a great many young people today who have better natural qualifications for education, scholarship, and efficiency than the college graduate, but who have never had these qualities developed because they could not see their way to attain what they really desire.

"We are told that the public cannot afford to add two years to its High School course. If we accept this as true, it means that we say to ambitious young people: 'You may be capable, and you are ambitious, but the public cannot afford you the opportunity.' It is a cry that comes up out of the past and is heard against every progressive movement. Personally, I believe strongly that the American public is not only willing but anxious to support any movement that has in it real educational merit.

"The difficulty does not lie in the cost. Show to the public that the High Schools are giving back to the public good value for the money expended upon them and the question of expense will disappear.

State cost millions to build and equip and are accommodating approximately 3000 pupils, while some High Schools of the State, that only cost hundreds of thousands, are accommodating an equal number of boys and girls, and not many educators would have the temerity to claim that they are not doing as great a work as the universities."

DR. BAER'S SENTIMENTS.

Dr. Baer of Occidental College, who has just returned from Stanford and Berkeley, expressed himself as follows:

"There is certainly good in the idea. More and more the line between the university and the college will be drawn by both colleges and universities that appreciate their proper place and part in education.

"If our boards of public education can equip themselves to do first-class work (and I mean first-class, college work,) I shall certainly applaud the move. Many young men and women will be able to secure in that way a collegiate education at home.

"Very naturally, some would say that this move would cut into Occidental College and others of its type. I have no fear of this whatever. I am more concerned that every young person entitled to a collegiate education, but who cannot afford to pay for it, shall have it. Occidental and other similar institutions doing first-class college work will always have an increasing number of students."

DR. BOVARD IN DOUBT.

Dr. Bovard of the University of Southern California said:

"To be able to give a pronouncement upon the question of converting the high schools into colleges by adding two more years to their curricula and giving them authority to confer degrees would require a more careful consideration of the question in all of its bearings than I have been able to give up to the present time. I am frank to say, however, that it does not appeal to me as a wise course to pursue. May we not discover in the pressing of this question the influence of that spirit of commercialism, which is so prevalent in these days? The over-anxiety to shorten the time of preparation for life's duties and responsibilities? It suggests the extreme swing of the pendulum from the purely culture element in education to the purely practical or materialistic.

"Economy of time in education is not always true economy to the man who desires to realize the full purpose of his being. Quality, rather than quantity, is the supreme need of today. This result cannot be obtained if we lower the value of the baccalaureate degree. For the average student four years in addition to the four years of high-school training are not too many to spend in preparation for his higher work in university specialization. I, therefore, feel that the proposed radical change should have very careful consideration before it should be

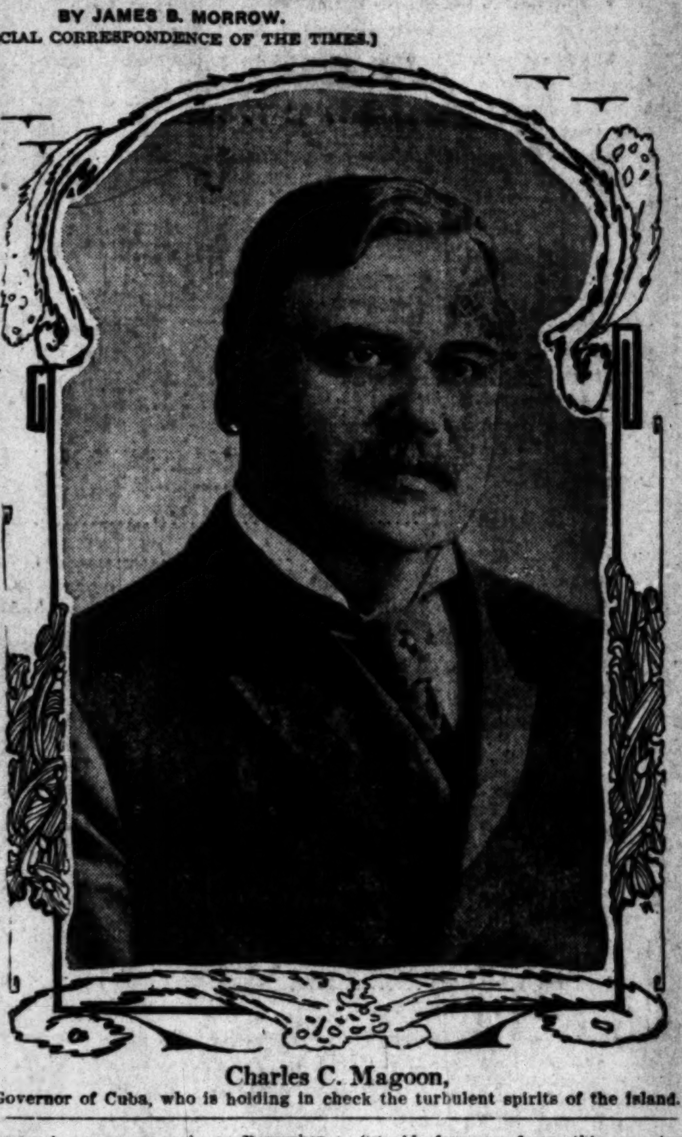
GOV. MAGOON PUTTING BAG OF CRACKED ICE ON HEAD OF CUBA.

BY JAMES B. MORROW.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]



Charles C. Magoon,

Governor of Cuba, who is holding in check the turbulent spirits of the island.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—If a bag of cracked ice and an opiate are needed in Cuba or Porto Rico or Panama or the Philippines, the President sends either William Howard Taft or Charles E. Magoon, physicians to islands and small countries suffering from a glorified ego, a diet of red peppers, and an equatorial thermometer.

On the rocks, fences and outbuildings of nations might be painted some such advertisement as this: "When your colonies or insular possessions are stricken with insurrectionitis and the delirium that they are ready for self-government, cable to Taft and Magoon, care of Theodore Roosevelt, Washington, D. C., and get full directions for a course of home treatment. Emergency calls answered in person."

Occasionally the President assigns Elihu Root to make a secret and expert diagnosis while ostensibly the guest of a neighboring power whose symptoms are more or less suggestive of an increased temperature, accompanied by a desire to walk and argufy in its sleep. Generally, however, Root practices altogether in his own office. He is no bluff and cheerful country doctor to ride muddy roads in all kinds of bad weather. Taft is. He has encompassed the whole world several times by land and by water, but upon Magoon, trained by him and Root, has now been put the principal burden of travel and bedside treatment.

Temperamentally, Taft and Magoon resemble each other; but Taft is more human, buoyant and imaginative than Magoon, whose mind is technical and judicial, and whose discourse is a lawyer's brief adjusted to the accident of a private conversation. Physically, they are a pair of peas in the same green pod, if a pea can weigh 250 pounds and considerably over.

The favorite counselors and agents of the President are disciplined men whose energies and impulses are kept within limits by wisdom and prudence. Root is skillfully serene and even elegantly melancholy although the sunbeam of a peculiar little smile sometimes lights up his somber gravity. Taft is cool, robust, adroit and companionable. Magoon is placid, analytic, and constructive. A Latin, noisy with emotion, would wear out his eloquence and wrath against Magoon's ox-eyed tranquillity. Besides, to make matters worse, he would require an interpreter. Magoon doesn't speak Spanish. Scorn or frenzy halting to be translated is not impressive, and pantomime is neither dignified nor convincing.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CAREER.

The career of Magoon is said to be extraordinary. So it is. Ten years ago he was practicing law at Lincoln, in Nebraska, but Mr. Roosevelt was then an assistant secretary in the Navy Department at a salary of $375 a month, Root was an attorney for multi-millionaires in New York, and Taft was a Federal judge in Cincinnati with no ambition for anything in politics.

When Magoon came to Washington to be law officer in the Bureau of Insular Affairs at $90 a week he had been a lawyer for seventeen years. From the spring of 1899 until the summer of 1904 he was an inconspicuous drudge, locked away from the world while he studied the law of civil government under military occupation in its application to Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Next he was general counsel to the Isthmian Canal Commission, then a member of the commission, then Governor of the Canal Zone, and then United States Minister to Panama. Now he is provisional governor of Cuba.

On his return to Washington I interviewed Gov. Magoon at his hotel, where he had a large suite of rooms, a military aid, a stenographer, and a black body servant. He is a modest and low-voiced man of giant stature and generous girth; Grover Cleveland is no larger, nor is Taft. Although his trousers were creased and his gray clothing and cravat, matching the color of his eyes, were up to date, the prairies were in his gait and the winds of the West were in his face. The aristocracy of nature, of herds in the hills, of growing corn and wheat in the fields, is as distinctly characteristic as the aristocracy of business or of fashion. Gov. Magoon is a farmer and villager, developed into a great lawyer, an able Governor, and a man of the world; also a type of the adaptable American who is prepared for any duty and is ready for any contingency. He looked at me steadily, smoked leisurely, and talked slowly as he answered my questions about Cuba and himself.

"What civil and military functions are being performed in Havana and elsewhere in the island by the United States?" I asked.

WHAT WE ARE DOING IN CUBA.

"Before telling you what we are doing in Cuba, let me explain why we are there. I find some misunderstanding in regard to the matter. When the government of Cuba finally realized that it could not suppress the insurrection of 1906, it appealed for help to the United States, as it had a right to do under our treaty with that country. President Palma and his ministers having resigned and Vice-President Capote having given up his office, President Roosevelt designated Secretary Taft to be provisional governor. I succeeded Mr. Taft. The constitution of Cuba provides for the appointment of a Governor under certain circumstances. Mr. Taft and myself, therefore, have been constitutional Governors—an election by the people could not have strengthened our position in office.

"There being no government by the Cubans themselves the United States established a government and American soldiers maintained order at the centers of population. The native chief clerks in the seven executive departments were made acting secretaries, with seven of our own military officers as advisers. They have served since that time. Practically, the government is Cuban, but over it all is the watchful care and direction of the United States. We slightly decreased our military force and now have 5300 officers and men at twenty-seven stations. They have made a topographical survey of the island, have mingled freely with the people, whom they have helped in many ways and with whom they are on the very best of terms, and in all respects have been most exemplary in their conduct. The insurrectionists have given us no trouble. Indeed, I might say that we have not fired a gun since our arrival on the island."

"The United States will withdraw from Cuba before long, in the meantime what will the natives do to prepare themselves for self-government?"

"President Roosevelt has announced away, however, as early as December, this year. The Cubans will elect a President and a Congress during that month, and when the President is inaugurated our services will come to an end. A census of the island is now being taken; it is really an enforced registration, to ascertain how many Cubans are entitled to vote. When it is completed in the spring, elections will be held at once to choose officers for the towns and cities and Governors for the provinces.

ORGANIZING A WORKABLE GOVERNMENT.

"Meanwhile we are going on with the task of organizing a workable and modern government. This country is a republic of States; Cuba is an impracticable republic of municipalities and the form must be changed. The Constitution of Cuba defies the powers of the President, but the law has been confused and sometimes ignored. We are writing other laws clearly prescribing what the President may do and what he may not do. We are also separating the executive departments, finances from agriculture, justice from public works, and so on, that there may be neither jealousy nor friction in the future. When a matter arises the law will plainly indicate who is to consider it. The courts, too, are in process of reformation and a simplified and accurate system of accounting is being introduced. In short, when we say farewell to Cuba, that little republic will have all the machinery of a sound logical, and representative government."

"Will the new President have any military support after the American soldiers come home?"

"Enough, I think. There are six companies of artillery and infantry in Havana, and the Rural Guard, composed of 5243 men, is stationed at 415 posts in different parts of the island."

"But will this country be safe from yellow fever?"

"I believe so. We have combined the agencies of sanitation and have put a national board in charge of all matters bearing on health and cleanliness. One-tenth of the revenues of each municipality goes into the treasury of the republic for sanitary purposes, and is spent by the national board itself. The people welcomed the change of administration because they know that the prosperity of Cuba and themselves largely depends upon their freedom from preventable diseases."

"You have also begun to build roads?"

"Many parts of the island are entirely shut in by mud during the wet season, and farmers, of course, suffer considerable loss and inconvenience. I have seen ten oxen hitched to a wagon that could easily have been drawn by a team of horses on a good road. Moreover, I had a problem which concerned the unemployed men of the island. Cane, and it is the principal crop of the country, is cut in December and January and is then hauled to the mills and ground. By May the work is over, the 'dead season' begins, and three-fourths of the men who work on farms and plantations are idle for a period of six months. The most important economic question in Cuba is the finding of continuous employment for its agricultural labor. So I planned a great central road through the island, with branches north and south in each of the six provinces, to harbors on the coasts. The work is now under way. Idle labor will find employment in the future and farmers will be enabled to get their crops to market without delay or unreasonable cost."

PROFIT IN SUGAR GROWING.

"Is there a large profit in sugar growing?"

"When prices are normal the crop pays well enough. Prices have been low, however, for some time. Cane matures in eighteen months after planting and may not require replanting for fifteen years. It is cultivated about once in a season, whereas growing corn in this country needs close attention to keep it free from weeds. The sugar trust, as it is called, and other American interests have invested in sugar lands. During the time of harvest electric lights are hung in some of the fields so that cane may be cut at night, or twenty-four hours a day. I suppose Cuba will produce 1,150,000 tons of sugar this year. That quantity of sugar would fill 23,000 of our largest American freight cars which would

"Could farmers from this country make money in Cuba?"

"A good many Americans have bought small tracts of land and are growing bananas, pineapples, oranges and vegetables, which they ship to New York for the eastern trade and to Mobile and New Orleans for the trade in the Central West. Tomatoes, green beans, eggplant, cucumbers, peas and potatoes are sent to the United States during the midwinter and bring good prices. Coffee is also grown in certain parts of the island, and is a profitable crop. The cost of the land depends, of course, on its location and quality, and I shouldn't attemp tto give figures. Tobacco lands, for example, range in value from several dollars to several thousands of dollars an acre."

"What wages are paid to labor?"

"Mechanics receive from $3 to $3.50 a day and unskilled labor $1.30 a day."

"In gold?"

CUBA'S CURRENCY PROBLEM.

"Yes. We have three kinds of currency in Cuba—American, Spanish and French, the last two being in gold coin. American money, however, is really the currency of the Cuban people and circulates everywhere. Santiago, for instance, will take nothing else. Last year many of the cigarmakers in and around Havana asked that their wages be paid in United States money instead of Spanish gold. When their demand was denied they struck. After being idle from February to July they went back to work on their own terms. They are now receiving American currency in its various forms, paper and coin, and all of it is as good as gold to them. By and by no other money will be used on the island. The United States, you must remember, annually sells $48,000,000 of products to Cuba, while it buys $98,000,000 of products from Cuba. The balance of $50,000,000, paid in our money, is even now the real, active currency of the Cuban people."

"Do banks pay interest on deposits?"

"Very little money is ever deposited. Formerly, a bank account was an invitation to the government to walk up to the counter and help itself at the cost of the depositor. Reachable money was confiscated in a lump or taxed until it vanished. The Cubans, therefore, hoarded the money they received, locking it in their own safes or hiding it in their houses. They haven't quit the practice. Business men themselves follow the custom of the country, and only a few of them take their surplus money to the banks. Many millions of dollars having been withdrawn from general use and secreted in desks, beds and closets, there is a great scarcity of currency when the crops are being harvested and interest rates sometimes go to 14 per cent. But 14 per cent. doesn't lure much native money out into the open. Borrowers get funds, of course, but they go to foreign countries. All banks in Cuba are owned by private firms or individuals, and there are no laws for their control or security. When the republic has a sound banking system hidden money, I think, will get into the channels of legitimate trade where it belongs."

"Charles M. Schwab owns iron ore lands in the island?"

"A number of Americans, and, also, the United States Steel Corporation, have similar interests in Eastern Cuba. The ore is shipped to this country. New deposits have been found by the Spanish-American company, and $5,000,000 will be spent for railways, piers, machinery, etc. Mr. Schwab told me in Havana that he would invest $2,000,000 in purchase and development if the reports made to him were found to be accurate. The manufacture of iron and steel in Cuba would not be profitable, he said, because of the limited needs of the home market."

"What public utilities are owned by citizens of this country?"

AMERICANS OWN CAR LINES.

"The electric street car line and the gas and electric light plant in Havana are in control of Americans, who, with the Cubans, hold two-thirds of the shares in each company. Germans and English are also stockholders. The railways of the islands are owned by Englishmen and Canadians. The receipts of the Havana street car company last year were $2,140,000."

"What opportunities are there in Cuba for young Americans without

"Is there an American colony in Havana?"

"Social and racial divisions are maintained by clubs. Here foreigners soon lose their former identity in the common citizenship of the republic. It is not so in Havana. Each nationality is distinct and cohesive. The Germans, the French, the English and the Americans are separated by social organizations of their own, and stand somewhat apart from one another, except, of course, in matters of business. Havana is a city of clubs. The finest clubhouse I have ever seen was built by the 25,000 Cubans who are members of the Association of Clerks. They have a beautiful building, with a gre library, a well-equipped gymnasiu and a fine banquet hall. Two hospit are supported by the association, a the foremost physicians in Havana to the club at certain hours each d where members may see them profe sionally. And how much do you su pose the members pay? A dollar a a half a month in silver! One club Spaniards has 20,000 members, and a other has 18,000 members. Balls a dinners are frequently given by all t clubs, to which women are invited. T clubs, however, are for men. In t Spanish countries to our south wom are not seen much in public. They a home-keepers and mothers."

CONGRESSMAN'S WIFE.

Mrs. John A. T. Hull of Iowa Talks About the Wives of Farmers in the Richest Agricultural District in the World.

BY MARGARET B. DOWNING.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25.—"Next to the patriotic deeds of our forefathers and the exalted position held by our country among the nations, I think Americans derive most satisfaction in contemplating the proud position of the American farmer," said Mrs. John A. T. Hull, wife of the well-known representative in Congress from Iowa. "The produce of the American farmer finds a place on the economic tables of every land. His flour feeds the Orient, his corn goes to every corner of the globe, and at home he provides the bone and sinew of 82,000,000 fellow-countrymen—in a word, he feeds the universe. This is sufficient excuse to cause any American to swell with glory, but it appeals particularly to the Iowans, for my State ranks first among the agricultural commonwealths of the Union. Secretary Wilson roughly rated the crop value of the past year at something over $4,000,000,000, and this does not include the farm produce fed to live stock. In this magnificent total Iowa contributed more than $400,000,000. It is our boast that the corn crop of Iowa equals almost the entire mineral produce, gold, silver, copper and lead, of the republic of Mexico.

"But how many Americans take thought of the farmer and that efficient co-laborer in agricultural fields, the farmer's wife. Viewed as a whole, the position held by the farmer in the world today seems one to be envied, but after all it is a life of endless toil, of constant endeavor and oftentimes of pathetic loneliness. Of course, the farmer's wife of generations past no longer exists in progressive countries, and certainly not in Iowa. The log cabin, the family laundry hanging on the wood pile or stretched on the bushes, dirty children, slatternly-looking women, starved poultry and stock and broken-down fences belong to an era passed away. The farmer today lives like a lord. His house has every modern improvement. His wife has appliances to make her housework and dairy labors easy. Cream and milk are now separated by mechanical process, and the modern dairy maid, instead of long hours of churning, sends her cream to a near-by plant and receives butter in its place. Every detail of house work is simplified by modern contrivances. The wealthier class have autos and every luxury, the humbler have stout horses and comfortable conveyances. One-twelfth of the farm implements owned in the United States are the property of Iowa farmers, and Des Moines, although the fifty-seventh city in the point of population, is third for the sale and distribution of farm implements and vehicles.

"Iowa suffers, as almost every section of the country is suffering, from the lack of adequate help. Farms are getting smaller, because the farmer can rely on no aid but his own and his sons, if he has any. The Swedes, once so popular as farm hands, are not now in such demand, because it invariably happens that the Swede, after a few years, saves his wages and gets a little farm of his own. It was merely breaking in new hands year after year for their own benefit and not for the owner of the soil. The farmer relies on his machinery, and with its aid he can accomplish the work of two or three hands. The same is true in the home. Few domestic servants are obtainable on the farms, so the wife learns to rely on herself, with the aid of modern innovations which mean so much to the servantless household. This may result in material prosperity and a contented lot, but it also means a mental starvation. It would mean an intellectual deterioration had not Iowa been mindful of the needs of the faithful consorts of her wealth-producers.

"From Chautauquan courses introduced into the State by progressive and broad-minded women may be reckoned the intellectual renaissance of Iowa. It must be remembered that the State has little more than a half-century's existence in the family of States. Those who know what it means to do the pioneer work in a wilderness must marvel that in so short a time the material prosperity has been accomplished and the leisure for culture and the development of higher things attained. Chautauquan courses were followed with avidity from one end of the State to the other. Then came a society known as the 'Daughters of Ceres,' for the social, intellectual and general good of farmers' wives. It has admirably fulfilled its mission. But the greatest benefit has been derived from libraries. Iowa was the third State in the Union to establish traveling libraries by act of the Legislature. New York was the pioneer and Michigan the second to follow the good example. These itinerant dispensers of knowledge are intended for communities which have not a circulating library or university extension center or other means of keeping in touch with the world of books. Then they may also be an adjunct supplied to existing libraries or for the benefit of clubs or reading circuits. A charge of $5 is made for 100 books (the State paying for transportation) and a smaller fee for fewer books.

"The arrival of the library in isolated communities is an event second to none, be it a religious revival, a circus or a political rally. Sometimes clubs are formed with meetings at the various houses of subscribers. The evening is thus made social as well as literary and may furnish a wholesome occasion for the exchange of ideas on domestic and farm topics. The books are generally chosen to furnish material for a neglected course of reading. Frequently the subscribers ride ten to twelve miles to attend the meetings. No stress of [illegible] creature wants, happy and contente but they are more keenly alive to civ development than any women of the class perhaps in the world, certain in this country. Far from being en grossed in domestic concerns, thoug they give these the most careful an productive mothering, they follow na tional and municipal affairs with en thusiastic zeal. The compulsory edu cation act, the child labor act, all thos measures of Legislature which, nat urally appeal to a woman's heart, hav found untiring champions among th wives of farmers. They will stan hours in cold and snow and rain an wind, as well as burning heat, to ge signers for petitions relating to suc matters. During the time that th compulsory education law was an issu in Iowa politics, every market tow was crowded with farmers' wives, an they held their ground for signers un til they sent reams of names to th capital. Compulsory anything ca never be a popular measure in Iow for so many foreigners have the taken refuge from the compulsory la of the Old World.

"Many of the older farmers, par ticularly those of European origi objected even to rural free deliver and dubbed that a compulsory meas ure. They complained that they wer compelled to receive their letters fro the postman, when they would muc prefer going to town every Saturda afternoon, incidentally to get the ma and to enjoy a holiday. But with th diffusion of knowledge the growin love of books and of the higher pursuits of life, these old prejudices ar melting away. The farm telephone and the loneliness of past years is re ceding with other discomforts of th early days."

Representative and Mrs. Hull hav resided in Washington for almos twenty years, and they are identified with its life almost as completely and pleasantly as they are in their home in Des Moines. Mrs. Hull, who comes from illustrious revolutionary ancestors, served on the national board of the Daughters of the American Revolution as vice-president-general from Iowa. She is the descendant of a sturdy Warwickshire man, Adley Gregory, who came over with the Massachusetts settlers in 1630, and whose descendants were fervent patriots when the colonists decided to defy the mother country. As Iowa was principally settled from Ohio, Representative and Mrs. Hull are both natives of the neighboring States. Mrs. Hull, who was Miss Emma Gregory, was born just south of Columbus, but with her parents she removed to Van Buren county, Iowa, at a tender age, and all her allegiance is claimed by the younger State.

She may be considered an excellent type of the refined, intellectual home-loving woman of the Middle West, and especially typical of that community which stands unique in the family of nations. While home is the first and most sacred of her obligations, she has always extended her sympathy to those less favored in their home environment. She has achieved no inconsiderable success in the propaganda which have been undertaken to extend the horizon of the women on farms and to spread the good creed of patriotism among the children of foreign citizens and awaken national pride in those who had become engrossed in sordid matters. Her philanthropy is of the broad-minded kind which embraces every community in which she resides. In Washington her home in Sixteenth street is the rallying point for Iowans who are interested in promoting the welfare of the State through higher means as well as political ones. Representative Hull recently purchased a farm in Virginia, and is now conducting a model dairy after the most approved Iowa mehods. Mrs. Hull finds much diversion in noting how the older States are now taught by their younger sisters.

Representative and Mrs. Hull have three children. The oldest, Dr. Albert Gregory Hull, who is practicing medicine in Des Moines, and Lieut.-Col. John T. Hull, U.S.A., who is judge advocate of the eastern division of the army and stationed at Governor's Island, New York City. Miss Annette Hull, the only daughter, is of a studious turn and spends her time more among books than among the votaries of Vanity Fair. She has scores of friends in Washington and with her mother dispenses a gracious hospitality among Iowans

CHAPTER XIV.

THE next morning at breakfast, Rose announced her intention of seeing if Lucy Ayres would not go to drive ith her. "There's one very nice little orse at the livery stable," said she, nd I can drive. It is a beautiful orning, and poor Lucy did not look ry well yesterday, and I think it ill do her good."

Horace turned white. Henry noticed . Sylvia, who was serving something, id not. Henry had thought he had rrived at a knowledge of Horace's sus- icions, which in themselves seemed be perfectly groundless, and now at he had, as he supposed, proved em to be so, he was profoundly puz- led. He had gone to Horace's assist- nce before. Now he did not see his ay clear to doing so, and saw no ecessity for it. He ate his breakfast editatively. Horace pushed away his late and rose. "Why, what's the mat- er?" asked Sylvia. "Don't you feel ell, Mr. Allen?"

"Perfectly well; never felt better."

"You haven't eaten enough to keep a parrow alive."

"I have eaten fast," said Horace. I have to make an early start this orning. I have some work to do be- ore school."

Rose apparently paid no attention. he went on with her plans for her rive.

"Are you sure you know how to man- ge a horse?" Sylvia said anxiously. I used to drive, but I can't go with ou because the washerwoman is com- ng."

"Of course I can drive," said Rose. I love to drive. And I don't believe here's a horse in the stable that would et out of a walk anyway."

"You won't try to pass by any steam ollers, and you'll look out for auto- nobiles, won't you?" said Sylvia.

Horace left them talking and set out hurriedly. When he reached the Ayres house he entered the gate, passed between the flowering shrubs which bordered the gravel walk and rang the bell with vigor. He was desperate. Lucy herself opened the door. When she saw Horace she turned red, then white. She was dressed neatly in a little blue cotton wrapper, and her pretty hair was arranged as usual with the exception of one tiny curl paper on her forehead. Lucy's hand went up nervously to this curl paper. "Oh, good morning," she said breathlessly, as if she had been running.

Horace returned her greeting gravely. "Can I see you a few moments, Miss Lucy?" he said.

A wild light came into the girl's eyes. Her cheeks flushed again. Again she spoke in her nervous, panting voice and asked him in. She led the way into the parlor and excused herself flutteringly. She was back in a few moments. Instead of the curl paper there was a little soft dark curly lock on her forehead. She had also fastened the neck of her wrapper with a gold brooch. The wrapper sloped well from her shoulders and displayed a lovely V of white neck. She sat down opposite Horace, and the simple garment adjusted itself to her slim figure, revealing its tender outlines. Lucy looked at Horace and her expression was tragic, foolish and of almost revolting wistfulness. She was youth and womanhood in its most helpless and pathetic revelation. Poor Lucy could not help herself. She was as a thing always devoured and never consumed by a flame of nature.

Horace felt all this perfectly in an analytical way. He sympathized in an analytical way, but in other respects he felt that curious resentment and outrage of which a man is capable, and which is fiercer than outraged maidenliness. For a man to be beloved when his own heart does not respond is not pleasant. He cannot defend himself, nor even recognize the fact without being lowered in his own self-esteem. Horace had done, as far as he could judge, absolutely nothing whatever to cause this state of mind in Lucy. He was self-exonerated as to that, but the miserable reason for it all, in his mere existence as a male of his species, filled him with shame for himself and her, and also with anger.

He strove to hold to pity, but anger got the better of him. Anger coupled with shame make a balking team. Now the man was really at a loss what to say. Lucy sat before him, draped in her little blue cotton robe, and looked at him with her expression of pitiable self-revelation, and waited, and Horace sat speechless. Now he was there he wondered what he had been such an ass as to come for. He wondered what he had ever thought he could say—would say.

Then Rose's face shone out before his eyes, and his impulse of protection made him firm. He spoke abruptly. "Miss Lucy," he began. Lucy cast her eyes down and waited. Her whole attitude was that of utter passiveness and yielding.

"Good Lord! She thinks I have come here at 8 o'clock in the morning to propose." Horace thought with a sort of fury. He did not speak again. He actually did not know how to begin, what to say. He did not finally say anything. He arose. It seemed to him that he must prevent Rose from going to drive with Lucy, but he saw no way of doing so.

When he got up it was as if Lucy's face of foolish anticipation was overclouded. "You are not going so soon," had risen. She now looked altogether tragic. The foolish wistfulness had gone. Instead claws seemed to bristle all over her tender surface. Suddenly Horace realized that her slender wiry body was pressed against his own. He felt her soft cheek against his. He felt at once in the grip of a tiger and a woman, and horribly helpless, more helpless than he had ever been in his whole life. What could he say or do? Then suddenly the parlor door opened and Mrs. Ayres, Lucy's mother, stood there. She saw with her stern, melancholy gaze the whole situation.

"Lucy!" she said.

Lucy started away from Horace and gazed in a sort of fear and wrath at her mother.

"Lucy," said Mrs. Ayres, "go up to your own room."

Lucy obeyed. She slunk out of the door, and crept weakly upstairs.

Horace and Mrs. Ayres looked at each other. There was an expression of doubt in the woman's face. For the first time she was not altogether sure. Perhaps Lucy had been right after all in her surmises. Why had Horace called?

She finally went straight to the point.

"What did you come for, Mr. Allen?" said she.

Suddenly Horace thought of the obvious thing to say, the explanation to give. "Miss Fletcher is thinking of coming later to take Miss Lucy for a drive," said he.

"And you called to tell her?" said Mrs. Ayres.

Horace looked at her. Mrs. Ayres understood.

"Miss Fletcher must come with a double-seated carriage, so that I can go," said she. "My daughter is very nervous about horses. I never allow her to drive without me."

She observed with a sort of bitter sympathy the look of relief overspread Horace's face.

"I will send a telephone message from Mrs. Simms's, next door, to the livery stable, so there will be no mistake," she said.

"Thank you," replied Horace. His was was burning.

Mrs. Ayres went on with a melancholy and tragic calm. "I saw what I saw when I came in," said she. "I have only to inform you that—any doubts which you may have entertained, any fears, are altogether groundless. Everything has been as harmless as—the candy you ate last night."

Horace started and stared at her. In truth, he had lain awake until a late hour wondering what might be going to happen to him.

"I made it," said Mrs. Ayres, "I attend to everything. I have attended to everything." She gazed at him with a strange, pathetic dignity. "I have no apologies nor excuses to make to you," she said. "I have only this to say, and you can reflect upon it at your leisure. Sometimes, quite often, it may happen that too heavy a burden, a burden which has been gathering weight since the first of creation, is heaped upon too slender shoulders. The burden may bend innocence into guilt and modesty into shamelessness, but there is no more reason for condemnation than in a case of typhoid fever. Any man of good sense and common Christianity should take that view of it."

"I do," cried Horace hurriedly. He looked longingly at the door. He had never felt so shamed in his life and never so angrily sympathetic.

"I will go over to Mrs. Simms's and telephone immediately," said Mrs. Ayres calmly. "Good morning, Mr. Allen."

"Good morning," said Horace. There was something terrible about the face of patient defiance which the woman lifted to his.

"You will not ——" she began.

Horace caught her hand and pressed it heartily. "Good God, Mrs. Ayres," he stammemred.

She nodded. "Yes, I understand; I can trust you," she said. "I am very glad it happened with you."

Horace was relieved to be out in the open air. He felt as if he had escaped from an atmosphere of some terrible emotional miasma. He reflected that he had heard of such cases as poor Lucy Ayres, but he had been rather incredulous. He walked along, wondering whether it was a psychological or physical phenomenon. Pity began to get the better of his shame for himself and the girl. The mother's tragic face came before his eyes. "What that woman must have to put up with," he thought.

When he had commenced the morning session of school he found himself regarding covertly the young girls. He wondered if such cases were common. If they were, he thought to himself that the man who threw the first stone was the first criminal in the world. He realized the helplessness of the tender young things before forces of nature, of which they were brought up in so much ignorance, and his soul rebelled. He thought to himself that they should be armed from the beginning with wisdom. He was relieved that he saw at first in none of the girl faces before him anything which resembled in the slightest degree the expression which he had seen in Lucy Ayres. These girls, most of them belonging to the village (there were a few from outside, for this was an endowed school, ranking rather higher than an ordinary public institution,) revealed in their faces one of three interpretations of character. Some were full of young mischief, chafing impatiently at the fetters of school routine. They were bubbling over with innocent animal life; they were longing to be afield at golf or tennis. They hated their books. Some were frankly coquettish and self-conscious, but in a most healthy and normal fashion. These frequently adjusted stray locks of hair, felt of their belts at their backs to be sure that the fastenings were intact, then straightened themselves with charming little feminine motions. Their flower-like faces frequently turned toward the teacher, and there was in them a perfect consciousness of the facts of sex and charm, but it was a most innocent, even child-like consciousness. The last type belonged to those intent upon their books, soberly adjusted to the duties of life already, with little imagination or emotion. This last was in the minority.

"Thank the Lord," Horace thought, as his eyes met one and another of the girl faces. "She is not, cannot be, a common type." And then he felt something like a chill of horror as his eyes met those of a new pupil, a girl from Alford, who had only entered the school the day before. She was not pretty. She was not well dressed. There was nothing coquettish about her, but in her eyes shone the awful, unreasoning hunger which he had seen before. Upon her shoulders, young as they were, was the same burden; the burden, as old as creation, which she [illegible] to bear by a hard des-

Horace. She was younger and shyer than Lucy, and, although not so pretty, immeasurably more pathetic. "Another," thought Horace.

It was a great relief to him when only a week later this girl found an admirer among the schoolboys, who, led by some strange fascination, followed her, instead of one of the prettier, more attractive girls. Then the girl began to look more normal. She dressed more carefully and spent more time in arranging her hair. After all, she was very young, and abnormal instincts may be quieted with a mere sop at the first.

When Horace reached home that day of the drive he found that Rose had returned. Sylvia said that she had been at home half an hour. "She went to Alford," she said, "and I am afraid she is all tired out. She came home looking as white as a sheet. She said she didn't want any dinner, but finally she said she would come down."

At the dinner table Rose was very silent. She did not look at Horace at all. She ate almost nothing. After dinner she persisted in assisting Sylvia to clear away the table and wash the dishes. Rose took a childish delight in polishing the china with her dish towel. New England traits seemed to have awakened within her in this New England home. Sylvia was using the willow ware now; Rose was so pleased with it. The Calkins soap ware was packed away on the top shelf of the pantry. "It is perfectly impossible, Aunt Sylvia," Rose had declared, and Sylvia had listened. She listened with much more docility than at first to the decrees of sophistication. "The painting ain't nearly as natural," she had said, feebly, regarding the moss rosebuds on a Calkins soap plate with a fluctuating admiration which caused her pain.

"Oh, but Aunt Sylvia, to think of comparing for one minute ware like that with this perfectly wonderful old willow ware," Rose had said.

"Well, have your way," said Sylvia, with a sigh. "Maybe I can get used to everything all blue when it ain't blue after a while. I know you have been around more than I have, and you ought to know."

So the gold and white ware which had belonged to Sylvia's mother decked the breakfast table and the willow ware did duty for the rest of the time. "I think it is very much better that you have no maid," Rose said. "I simply would not trust a maid to care for china like this."

Rose took care of her room now, and very daintily. 'She'll be real capable after a while,' Sylvia told Henry.

"I didn't know that she'd be contented to stay at all. We live so different from the way she's been used to," said Henry.

"It's the way her mother was brought up, and the way she lived, and what's in the blood will work out," said Sylvia. "Then, too, I guess she didn't care any too much about those folks she stayed with. For my part, I think it's the queerest thing I ever heard of, that Miss Farrel, if she took such a notion to the child, enough to do so much for her, didn't keep her herself."

"Miss Farrel was a queer woman," said Henry.

"I guess she wasn't any too well balanced," agreed Sylvia.

"What do you suppose tired Rose so much this morning?" asked Henry. "It isn't such a very long ride to Alford."

"I don't know. She looked like a ghost when she got home. I'm glad she's lying down. I hope she'll get a little nap."

That was after dinner, when the house had been set in order, and Sylvia was at one front window in the cool sitting-room with a basket of mending, and Henry at another with a library book. Henry was very restless in these days. He pottered about the place and was planning to get in a good hay crop, but this desultory sort of work was not the same as his regular routine of toil. He missed it horribly, almost as a man is said to miss a pain of long standing. He knew that he was better off without it, that he ought to be happier, but he knew that he was not. For years he had said bitterly that he had no opportunity for reading and improving his mind. Now he had the opportunity, but it was too late. He could not become interested in a book as he had been during the few moments he had been able to snatch from his old routine of toil. Some days it seemed to Henry that he must go back to the shop, that he could not live in this on Abrahama White's celebrated land. He felt that he knew nothing about such work, that agriculture was not for him. If only he could stand again at his bench in the shop and cut out leather into regular shapes! He felt that while his hands toiled involuntarily his mind could work. Some days he fairly longed so for the old familiar odor of tanned hides—that odor which he had once thought sickened him—that he would go to the shop and stand by the open door and inhale the warm rush of leather-scented air with keen relish. But he never told this to Sylvia.

Henry was not happy. At times it seemed to him he really wished that he and Sylvia had never met with this good fortune. He wondered if it were good fortune. Once he turned on Sydney Meeks with a fierce rejoinder when Sydney had repeated the sarcasm, which he loved to roll beneath his tongue like a honeyed morsel, that if Henry did not want his good fortune it was the easiest thing in the world to reliquish it.

"It ain't," said Henry, "and, what's more, you know it ain't. Sylvia don't want to give it up, and I ain't going to ask her. You know I can't get rid of it; but it's true what I say—when good things are so long coming they get sour like most things that are kept. What's the use of a present your hands are too cramped to hold?"

Sydney looked gravely at Henry, who had aged considerably during the last few weeks. "Well, I am ready to admit," he said, "that sometimes the mills of the gods grind so slow and small that the relish is out of things when you get them. I'm willing to admit that if I had today what I thought I couldn't live without once I'd give up beat. Once I thought I'd like to have the biggest law practice of any lawyer in the State. If I had it now I'd be ready to throw it all up. It would come too late. Now I'd think it was more bother than it was worth. How'd I make my wines and get any comfort out of life? Yes, I guess it's true, Henry, when Providence is overlong in giving a man what he wants he contrives somehow to suck sweetness out of what he gets, though he may not know it, and when what he thought he wanted does come to him it is like a bee trying to make honey out of a flower that don't hold any. Why don't you go back to the shop, Henry, and have done with it?"

"Sylvia," began Henry, but Sydney cut in. "If you haven't found out," said he, "that in the long run doing what's best for yourself is doing what's best for the people who love you you haven't found out much."

"I don't know," Henry said in a puzzled, weary way. "Sometimes it seems to me I can't keep on living the way I am living and live at all, and then I don't know."

"I know," said Sydney, "get back to your tracks."

"Sylvia would feel all cut up over it. She wouldn't understand."

"Of course she wouldn't understand, but women always end in settling down to things they don't understand, when they get it through their heads it's got to be, and being just as contented, unless they're the kind who fetch up in lunatic asylums, and Sylvia isn't that kind. The inevitable may be a hard pill for her to swallow, but it will never stick in her throat."

Henry shook his head doubtfully. He had been thinking it over ever since. He had thought of it a good deal after dinner that day as he sat with the unread book in his lap. Sylvia's remarks about Rose diverted his attention, then he began thinking again. Sylvia watched him furtively as she sewed. "You ain't reading that book at all," she said. "I have been watching you, and you ain't turned a single page since I spoke last."

"I don't see why I should," returned Henry. "I don't see why anybody but a fool should ever open the book to begin with."

"What is the book?"

Henry looked at the title page. "It is 'Whatever,' by Mrs. Fane Raymond," he said absently.

"I've heard it was a beautiful book."

"Maybe women would like it," said Henry. "It seems to be a lot written about a fool woman that it would have been Christian charity to keep quiet about, especially for another woman."

"Why, Henry Whitman, it ain't true."

"I suppose it ain't."

"No book is true; that is, no story."

"If it ain't true, so much the less reason to tell a lie about such things," said Henry. He closed the book with a snap.

"Why, Henry, ain't you going to finish it?"

THE TIMES AND NEW YORK HERALD ANGLO-AMERICAN COMPETITION.

Max Pemberton, England, vs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, America.

Referee—The Public.

The Los Angeles Times and the New York Herald have purchased the exclusive rights to two novels, simultaneous publication of which is now proceeding and which will continue, in weekly installments, for a total of about eighteen weeks, announcement of the closing date to be made hereafter. One novel is by a distinguished Englishman, Max Pemberton; the other by an equally distinguished American woman, Mrs. Mary E. Wilkins Freeman. In order to supplement the purely artistic incentive to high endeavor The Times and the Herald will award a large prize to the author of the better novel of the two. In event of a tie the prize money will be divided equally.

Believing that the public is a more competent judge than a self-styled "critic," The Times invites its readers to express their individual opinions of the weekly installments by filling out the subjoined ballot and sending it to the Anglo-American Competition Committee, The Times, Los Angeles.

I consider this week's installment of (name of novel)..............

better than that of (name of novel)................

Sir Richard Escombe.

A ROMANCE.

By Max Pemberton.

[Copyright 1908, by the New York Herald. All Rights Reserved.]

SYNOPSIS.

In a short foreword we are told that the story is to deal largely with the revels of the notorious Society of St. Francis, founded during the reign of George II, at Medmenham Abbey, on the Thames, by John Wilkes and Sir Francis Dashwood. Among its members were William Whitehead, poet laureate, and Frederick Lord Harbourne, a rascally voluptuary. One of the rules of these burlesque Franciscans was that a man must die or marry any woman whose good name he defended. Inasmuch as only women of notorious character were ever named here the marriage demanded was merely a mock ritual, celebrated with a burlesque of religious ceremonial.

Then the hero is introduced, Sir Richard Escombe, a brave, brilliant, daredevil Irish baronet, on whose head a price has been set for alleged participation in the raising of the Pretender's banner at Glenfinnan, in December, 1745. He had boldly returned from France to England in the following March to win a race at Chester on his horse, Wild Rose. Falling in with his old friend, Barry Michigan, as wild a spirit as himself, he caps the climax of audacity by galloping to Sherbourn Manor, where dwells his sweetheart, Kitty Ducimore.

From the courtyard Escombe catches a glimpse of Kitty, singing for the diversion of five English officers, part of a troop commanded by Lord Harbourne, which is stationed temporarily at Warwick. In the midst of the revels word comes of Escombe's arrival in England and of his victorious race. Lord Harbourne, his shoulders still tingling from a thrashing publicly administered to him by Dick in the London Mall, greets the news with joy, as offering him a chance for revenge. He rides away to Warwick. The five officers left behind gradually reach a reckless stage of intoxication and propose that Kitty's name shall be put in a lottery. Whoever draws the right number must pledge himself to marry her. At this juncture Dick Escombe, tired of his long vigil outside, breaks into the room. The rioters conspire to force the winning number into his unwitting hands and the next moment, Kitty enters.

Kitty reproaches Sir Richard because of his long absence and his equally long silence. Dick explains everything and produces a command from the King. Capt. Beddoe upsets Sir Richard's triumph with the tale of the lottery and congratulates Kitty upon her engagement to Dick. Kitty demands a denial from Dick. He cannot tell her the story of the lottery and will make no denial, so Kitty sends him away and he swears that he will never return. He meets with Honor Marwood, a protege of Lord Harbourne, who has ruined her. She informs him that Kitty has promised herself in marriage to the titled rake, and Dick, forgetting his vow and his duty to his King, turns back to rescue Kitty. On his way he meets with two spies, Larry Cockraine and Harry Musgrove, who are in the employ of Harbourne, to whom they report their meeting.

CHAPTER XIII.

WE GO TO DINE AT ST. JAMES.

An Old Man has remarked in the diverting tragedy of "Macbeth" that a falcon, towering in her pride of place, was by a mousing owl hawked at and killed. Which considerable misfortune, we take it, is put before us in lieu of many an old woman's saying, but chiefly that which reminds us that pride goeth before a fall.

Now, there are many remarkable coincidences in the story of Sir Richard Escombe, but none more remarkable than that of the circumstance to which he owed his social salvation upon the day he set out from Windsor—and the consequent fall which attended the pride of a very notable personage.

Consider the case in all its bearings. Here is the Senior Captain of a regiment who had reminded a junior how impossible it is to leave the castle, and upon that immediately has left it himself, despite the King's order and the fulminations of a discipline loving Governor. This captain goes to London, is met by rascals on the way; is drugged by them and my lord—and even then it is not the poor owl that is grassed, but the proud falcon whom all had considered to be invincible, and so high in the heavens as to be beyond the gaze of mere mortal folk. A wonder of coincidence—and yet no great wonder at all when the whole truth is told.

Of course, the King had sent for him. German George was too much of a soldier to have acted as he did had his own summons been a fiction. He had sent for Richard Escombe, who was the finest judge of a horse in the three kingdoms, that he might come to London and there settle a wager between His Majesty and the Duke of Sefton concerning the history of a famous thoroughbred and that which it had or had not done upon Newmarket Heath.

A King's messenger riding headlong arrived at Windsor ten minutes after Sir Dick had quitted the castle. He, worthy man, believing that His Majesty's intentions had been made known by some other means and satisfied that Escombe had indeed gone to London, merely turned his horse about and went as he had come. His task was accomplished, and making doubly sure by inquiries at the inns, he arrived at length at St. James and there put the story abroad. So, it appears, that worthy George never had a doubt about the matter. Sir Richard had come to London because he had been sent for. And lucky for him that he came—for this was not a King to be trifled with.

From such a beginning the sequence of our story follows naturally enough. At Northumberland House His Majesty heard Harborne very patiently, but with a certain contempt nevertheless. He liked zeal, but from tittle-tattle he had an aversion which was not to be disguised. So he let my lord babble as he would; and, not deigning to inform him of the truth, went himself to meet Escombe. In what condition he found him—a man recovered, it is true, from the madness of the drug, but weak and faint and ailing—you have already heard. Indeed, we find that the King sent a message presently excusing Sir Richard until the morning, and that, a great revulsion of feeling attending the discovery of the royal favor, stanch friends carried the dazed man to a lodging in the Haymarket and there left him, with strict instructions to a garrulous landlady that her guest must repair to the palace very early upon the following day and by no means neglect to report himself to His Majesty.

Here in this lodging at 10 o'clock of the following morning, Sir Dick opened his eyes after a heavy night of sleep; and hence he went to the palace in answer to the royal command. Used to the regal mood, he was somewhat astonished to find the King surly beyond ordinary and overmuch given to the German tongue, which Sir Richard understood but ill. The interview, we read, was of the briefest—George asked many questions concerning the horse, made some blunt observations upon the lax discipline among his Guards, and finally dismissed the affronted captain almost as though he had been a place hunter who had obtained admission to the palace by a ruse. Escombe knew the King well, and this curt treatment did not overmuch depress him. A believer in the old proverb concerning a prince's favor, he had hoped little from the Guelphs, perhaps desired little; and even when His Majesty, as a parting shot, commanded him not to leave London until he was ordered so to do, the words were no surprise.

"'Tis to belabor the Guards," he said to himself, "perhaps to speak of the great review. Well, London is as good as any other place and better while Kitty is in it. This day will I go to her and tell her the truth. She may have heard what happened a madman did I not go to her at once."

Here was a proper resolution, beyond all question—but it is one which makes much clear to us. No shadow of a doubt can now remain concerning Sir Dick's knowledge or want of knowledge of the supreme misfortune which happened to him yesterday. Why, he was ignorant even that Kitty had been at the assembly—and although some dim recollection of a dark hour hovered in his mind, what the nature of it had been he knew no more than the dead. In this ignorance, however, he was not long to dwell. Little Ensign Willoughby met him on the very threshold of the palace—for that fine boy had now become a gentleman to one of the princes; and, taking the captain aside to his own room, he begged for a brief hearing.

"You know that she has left London, Sir Richard," he began—for never could Ensign Willoughby hold his tongue.

Dick stared at him in wonder.

"Would you be speaking of Mrs. Marwood, Willoughby?"

"Indeed, no; I would tell you of Miss Dulcimore."

"'Tis a surprise altogether. What road has she taken?"

"I have done my best to find out, but I cannot discover the truth. It is Harborne's doing. He visited their house in St. James this morning, and I hear that they all went away in one of his carriages during the forenoon."

"In one of his carriages?—then old Dulcimore is becoming the fine figure of a man entirely. Would ye have me to believe that Harborne went with him?"

"He rode as far as Tyburn Gate—I wish he had been engaged there, Sir Richard."

"Ay," said Dick, with a sudden inspiration, "he's a house in Buckinghamshire, I remember—not far from the Quaker people at Jordan's. What would the Dulcimores be wanting there now?"

Willoughby was somewhat at a loss.

"Kitty would be very angry," he said, with hesitation—"perhaps she wished to leave London. There is a lampoon already sold on the streets, Sir Richard——"

Escombe looked at him shrewdly.

"I remember little of last night," he remarked, a strange chill of apprehension seizing him. "Be plainer with me, Willoughby."

Ensign Willoughby stuttered and stammered, hummed and hawed—talked a good deal about this person's actions and the other's—and finally permitted every word of the sorry business to be dragged from him. When he had done, he was in no way surprised at the sudden gust of anger which overtook the amazed Sir Richard.

"What!" cried he. "I am sent to her like a drunken lout from an alehouse—I reel about the gardens before people, you say—God in heaven, send me to those who did it. Ye hear me, Willoughby, I will not sleep in my bed until Kitty knows and these men are punished. Oh, think of it, man—to play me such a scurvy trick, and my head so gone that I remember no more of it than the King's favor and the water you carried to me in the pavilion. But, Willoughby, I have a good sword to my hand—my pride is not other men's, and as sure as there is a sun above us, I will make them answer to me."

Willoughby thought it wise to say nothing. He had the sheet of the lampoon in his pocket—half the town already had laughed at it—but he would not have shown it to his friends for a hundred pounds.

"I very well understand your displeasure, Sir Richard," said he; "It is but natural and proper. And, as you will readily imagine, there are many to say why Harborne has gone into the country."

"Think you 'tis to keep out of the way?"

"It will be said, whether or no."

"But I will follow him, Willoughby—I will follow him to the Indies; see, now."

"The King is determined that you shall not. That's why he gave the order which keeps you in London."

"Then I'll resign my place—is it no justice I am to find, even from the King? Oh, I'll go to him—I'll go to him this minute."

"I shouldn't do that, Sir Richard. He pretty well guesses how things are—better wait until you have his word."

It was common sense, though spoken by a boy to a man—and it prevailed, as common sense often will when anger permits it a hearing. Reflection taught Escombe that nothing would be easier than to tell Kitty the true story of the affair—and more than this, his consuming anger against the author of his misfortunes made explanation a lesser consideration. When he returned to his own rooms he was a calmer man, but his purpose was clear. He would follow Harborne wherever the journey might carry him. Nothing must intervene—he would accept no reason whatever, hear no counsel, be bribed neither by promises nor flattery. Twice in his life had this fine villain put shame upon him. Richard Escombe swore by all that he held dear that there should never be a third occasion.

The resolution comforted him—and, much to his satisfaction, he welcomed his servant, Barry, about 3 in the afternoon, and learned that the good fellow had followed him into London with a change of linen directly he learned that his master would not return to Windsor. Barry rarely asked a question, but he was a little curious this afternoon, and broke in upon his customary silence.

"Do we bide long, sir?"

"The King will tell us, Barry."

"And after that, sir?"

"We are going on a journey, Barry."

Barry raised his eyebrows.

"Into the wild man's country?"

"No, not to Scotland, Barry—unless the man goes there."

"'Tis glad I am to hear ye speak of a man—there are few in these parts, sir."

"No lover of town—you're not that, Barry."

"Whist! A man who comes out of Ireland leaves his heart behind him."

"But not his flute. Go and see who is asking after me. I hear voices below."

Barry went at once, and barely a minute had passed before he ushered in those two old friends of ours, Lord Churchill, the supercilious, and the fat fop, Mr. Cunninghame. These men had come direct to Sir Richard from the King—diplomatists both upon a delicate errand—but they would not have admitted as much if you had offered them a thousand for the news.

"Sir Richard Escombe, your most devoted——"

"Sir Richard Escombe, upon my life we are in luck——"

Dick bowed to them both and told Barry to send up wine. He knew perfectly well why these men had come

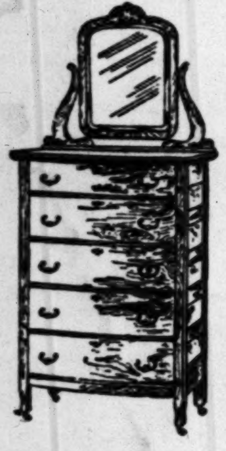
CLEAN-UP WEEK

We have just concluded one of the greatest sales in our history---our "Banner Red Tag Sale." For a solid month we have been selling furniture at practically cost prices---we have done a tremendous business. Our stock has been disorganized. The only thing to do to bring order out of chaos is to close out all odd lines at next to nothing prices. This is "Clean-up" week at our store. In order to rearrange stock and get down to a normal basis again we offer you choice from hundreds of articles---remarkably low prices. In some instances we have only one of a kind---in others there are more. But it is a sure thing that if you need any article advertised it is well to come early--because these goods will be snapped up eagerly. These are not damaged goods at all---but new furniture that must be moved out in order to provide room for incoming stock.



$15.75

Solid oak chiffonier with full quarter sawed oak, serpentine front. Regularly $19.50. Clean-up price $15.75. This is not the chiffonier other houses sell at this price—it is not one of the cramped, "stingy" kind—but a chiffonier in which you have all the drawer room you need. Made with French plate oval or pattern shape mirror. A great big bargain in this Clean-up Sale.

Solid oak dresser with pattern shaped French plate mirror, regularly $16.50. Sale price $11.50.

EASTERN OUTFITTING CO.

620 to 626 SOUTH MAIN STREET—Adjoining Huntington Bldg.

They turned from the path and threaded a narrow wood leading to a clearing of the thicket and a camp of the Egyptians. Here were four or five vans drawn up about a reddening fire of brushwood. A dog barked loudly, and horses, wakened from sleep, trotted a little way when Sir Richard passed by. Twenty yards from the open place the horse unearthed a pretty couple of the gypsies lying snug in each other's arms. The girl ran off to the vans, laughing—but the man started up and drew a savage knife from its sheath.

"What do you do here?" he asked them.

"Keep thy pistols in thy pocket, friend. Come, the night is young and the girl will return. Put me upon the road to Jordan's and I will give you a crown piece for a trinket."

The fellow muttered savagely—a mangy hound snarled about the nag's heels and received a fine cut from Barry's whip. Anon a very old woman, so old that she seemed coeval with the bent oaks of her encampment, came from one of the vans and spoke sharply to her son in the Zingari tongue. Then she turned to Sir Richard.

"Seek you my lord at St. Peter's?"

"How came you with my business?"

"Not with yours, my bonnie man—not with yours. Seek ye him or his young wife? Ho, ho!—I read the tale aright. You seek the wife, but you ride too late. Go with the gentleman, Jasper. Say that he comes to dispute with my lord. And mind ye, lad, be not afeard 'o return alone—I say alone, for this merry gentleman will not pass by again. See that ye take him to my lord's door. Point out the window to him—ha, ha! and he will give thee silver for thy pains—silver for thy pains, this fine gentleman."

It was horrible to hear her cackling there in the moonlight, and for all his courage Dick's heart sank a little. How did such a hag come to the possession of my lord's story? Reflection would have told him that she came by it because her camp was not three miles from the hall as the crow flies, and all the village had the news that a young girl had been carried out from London and would reside awhile at Chalfont sign of the cross in the air and said an ave.

"Drink down thy fears, mother," he cried, tossing her a crown; "there's more than one road to London town. I'll ride in upon another, lest they deride thee."

"Ay," she rejoined, sheltering her bleared eyes with a palsied hand—"a bonnie man. Pity that she did not come to your arms, good master. They'll tell thee so at Chalfont Hall—and ye'll reward my son, ye'll reward him well."

She went as she came, muttering, to her vain; but Dick and Barry pressed on, the lad between them, the black path of the wood giving them but little prospect of any easy journey. True, they did not leave the camp wholly unregretted, for the eyes of the awakened gypsy girl followed her lover pathetically and seemed to say, "Why do you linger?" He, however, remained insensible to her appeal. A cunning thought was in his head. Had he not heard his mother speak of my lord's wishes in this matter? No stranger must come through the woods to Chalfont Hall—none upon the road if it could be forbidden. And would there not be a fine reward for those who helped so great a man in this matter? Jasper saw a prospect not only of carrying a piece of silver to the old woman, but of putting something better in his own pocket. He feigned that there was but room for one upon the path and counseled Barry to ride behind him. Then he drew the great knife from its sheath and hid it beneath his rags.

If men were but philosophers they would not take account of any declared peril. Destiny is no lover of a common way. We fear the giant, tilting at him and counting his forces, but the dwarf creeps upon the road and his is the barb which undoes us.

Dick Escombe would have taken a hundred oaths that night that the road to Chalfont was as safe for him as the Mall itself. He did not care a button of his coat for footpads; admitted no dangers of the way nor imagined that any difficulty could be encountered until he stood face to face with my lord and the great hour of head and all a Zingari's contempt of law and life bidding him venture.

Twice in a hundred paces he made the beginning of a movement which the sudden tripping of the horse, or the rider's change of posture alone diverted. And still he clung to the stirrup leather, still gave clear his directions—"to the right, master—a little to the left—yonder there, by the water—now it would be best to ford across, master—oh, but a little way yet—the half of a mile and then I'll show you where my lord's house lies." Dick gave no thought to him at all. You can imagine his loud cry when the report of a pistol rang in his ears and Jasper, the guide, fell headlong at his feet. This was the truth, none the less. And Barry had shot him, as he never was at the pains to deny.

"Good God, Barry—and what now?"

Barry came up at a canter. The dawn had broken over the woods by this time and a shimmer of gray light rippled through the glades. All was ashen gray as the face of death itself. The lad lay upon his back, the nerves of his mouth twitching, the fingers of his hand so closed about the handle of the knife that a strong man could not have set them free. And upon him Sir Richard looked almost as though he had been his executioner.

"In God's name, Barry, answer me—why did you fire?"

Barry dismounted from his horse and put the tatters aside.

"'Tis here the reason lies," he cried, pointing to the knife. Oh, Sir Richard, but for the mercy of Almighty God, 'twould be upon your face I looked down this minute. Sir, he made to kill you when the horse blundered and again when you turned about to speak to me. I could have uttered no warning which would not have undone us both—and so I shot him."

"A sorry affair, Barry—we must go to the justices."

"Is Your Honor daft—what have the justices to do with us? The rogue's dead, I'll wager, and there are more to follow him. Ride on for your life, Sir Richard. Ye have not a minute to lose."

He mounted his horse again and bade his master listen. Back in the woods they could hear the thud of speak and with reason, and Sir Richard would argue with him no more. He touched his horse with the whip and rode on at a gallop. Let the Zingari pay their own debts, he said. Which resolution hardly had been taken, when a fearful cry from the thicket behind him confirmed Barry's wisdom, and both understood the nature of the peril they had escaped.

"Think you that my lord had a hand in this, Barry?"

"'Twould be little likely, master—the Egyptians are hard taskmasters."

"And rarely servants. I shall not forget this night, Barry. Heaven send that the day may end as well. We should be near the house if yon rogue did not lie to us."

"'Tis not unlikely, master—and yet, I see that which should be a highroad yonder. We shall do better there than in the woods, Sir Richard—and better in London than anywhere else."

"Ye have a heart for the cities, Barry?"

"No, sir; for the men—and the women—who are in the cities."

He sighed deeply while they came out upon the highway, side by side. A mile and a half farther on a lodge at the roadside marked the presence of a house; and this disclosed itself presently, a red brick building of Elizabeth's time—but so much fallen to decay, the grounds so ill kept and the windows so broken, shuttered and dirty that any thought of my lord being here was not to be entertained. None the less Sir Richard waked the people at the lodge, and a saucy girl poked her head out of a lattice and seemed not unwilling to answer their question.

"Is this Lord Harborne's house, my wench?"

"Oh, la, sir; by the way you beat upon my father's door I thought it would be your own."

"Had I known you were within, my pretty, I had thrown roses at your window."

"Thorns, sir, thorns surely—for that is all that a pretty wench gets hereabouts. Did his lordship expect you, or shall I run up to say that the King and his gentlemen have arrived? Here's a shock for a poor gentleman now. It could have been but little more than 5 o'clock—an odd hour even to wake his lordship. Besides, he himself cut no such brave figure that he would not do well to draw rein awhile. Not an hour had he slept since young Willoughby told him the news yesterday; he had tasted but little food, drank heavily of wine, and had sleep in his very bones.

"Will you give us a posset if we draw rein awhile?" he asked the saucy wench.

She was all for that, and told him so.

"La, sir! 'tis but the poorest of china, yet if your nobility will but venture to put your lips to it"——

"Have done with it, my girl—there's one here who would put his lips to something softer."

"He'd never kiss your lordship on the forehead"——

"A hit! a hit!—come down and open to us, or we come up, I swear."

She shut the window with a slam, and keeping them waiting but a little bon in her hair—but the near advent of the enemy put a curb upon her tongue.

"This," said Sir Richard, turning over the leaves of the great book, "this, I'll venture, is the book your good father most often uses."

"Indeed, and it is, sir."

"On Sunday mornings?"

"Yes, sir—to strop his razors on."

Even the melancholy Barry must laugh at this—but the girl herself went tripping away and returned presently with as pretty a breakfast as ever was set before hungry men. Fine white bread, a steaming cup of posset dashed with something from her father's cupboard, some rashers of fine fat bacon, butter of the purest—even fruit from her little orchard. Upon these the hungry men fell with a gratitude to which their energy was the best tribute. And when they had eaten and heard the girl's story—as much of it as she would tell them—then they went Wisdom and Kindliness.

SOMEHOW GOOD. By William de Morgan. Henry Holt & Co., New York. (Price $1.75. For sale by C. C. Parker.)

As a blessed relief from the staccato novels of the time, there already have come from Mr. De Morgan two books worthy of high place—"Joseph Vance" and "Alice-for-Short." Whoever has read and enjoyed these two books—and their friends are many—will turn with expectancy to a third from Mr. De Morgan. They will not be disappointed. A statement from the publishers reads "That this third volume by Mr. De Morgan appears within less than a year and a half of his first, may arouse anxiety on the part of his admirers lest he be overproducing. But before he published his first novel he had several completely written, and several others carefully worked out." Such an anxiety is promptly dispelled by the first taste of "Somehow Good." It is not hasty or diluted work.

It has been somewhat the fashion to hail Mr. De Morgan as a present-day composite of Dickens and Thackeray. In one sense this is true. But it is unjust to imply by this that he is an imitator of either. His novels are of the same type of which Dickens's and Thackeray's are examples. "Somehow Good" proves this thoroughly. But "Somehow Good" also proves Mr. De Morgan's individuality. He is a writer whose books will charm for many years yet, whose work will stand the test of time.

"Somehow Good" is a book to be read leisurely. Its mere bulk would compel this, but beyond the length of the story, its quality makes necessary slow mastication. It cannot be bolted. The plot, if one may speak of a plot in a book whose action is almost negligible in comparison with the flood of gossip and side lights on human nature—the plot is sustained, interesting and novel. The hero arrives in London in the first chapter, gets himself electrocuted to the point of losing his memory while fishing for a coin in the twopenny tube, and is brought to the home of a girl with whom he had been in desultory conversation. The girl's mother recognizes him as the husband who had left her twenty years before, when she had committed a sin the visible evidence of which was the daughter Sally.

Bereft of his memory, but otherwise in possession of his faculties, the hero makes for himself a new position in life, and then falls in love with and marries the woman who is already his wife. She is in constant dread of his memory returning, and this phase of the book is one of its strongest parts.

Mixed with the love story of the mother, the woman who is "somehow good," there are the love stories of Sally and her girl friend. These minor themes are themselves worthy of a book.

But this plot is not the book. The value of "Somehow Good," as was the case with the two previous novels, lies in the wisdom, the kindliness of Mr. De Morgan's thousand bits of gossip, the sly humor, the shrewd insight with which he deluges every page. He has substituted for the photographic snapshot manner of character drawing, a warmer, more intimate and lovable manner. One feels that Mr. De Morgan loves his characters, whereas too many an author of the times sets up a figure only to get as far away as possible and make vindictive remarks.

In the quality of humor, Mr. De Morgan is delightful. He is whimsical and sly, constantly popping out a delicious turn from the middle of a bit of leisurely observation.

Mr. De Morgan has certain eccentricities of style that are more marked in "Somehow Good" perhaps than in his other books. He seems to have a perfect abhorrence of the relative clause, and will go to almost any length to avoid one. He has a fondness for the historical present. He has also the trick of bringing into his own flowing stream of colloquial English the still more colloquial talk of the last illiterate person who has appeared on the scene—and this without quotation marks.

But these things are minor, whether they are blemishes or not. The wisdom, kindness of heart, sympathy, insight, whimsical humor and general charm of "Somehow Good" make it a very notable novel. It will be one of the few books of the present remembered a quarter-century from now.

A Story of Emotions.

THE ARTISTIC TEMPERAMENT. By Jane Wardle. McClure, Phillips & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

This engaging and well-written novel is a study in various temperaments—and more especially the temperament of one Stephen Cartmel, a young artist of London, who paints portraits. Stephen is engaged to Claire Stanmore, daughter of Sir James Stanmore, and is honestly in love with her, too—but this attachment does not prevent his falling in love with the wife of his former schoolmate, John Blaicklock, and planning to elope with her. For such is the artistic temperament.

Neither Stephen nor Delia Blaicklock descends to an intrigue. Both are too fastidious for that. They simply plan the elopement, and give no thought to the future. It is John Blaicklock, heart-broken at the discovery of their perfidy, who enlightens them. He does not seek to detain them; he only holds up the unwritten scroll before their eyes. In the interview John is shot and severely wounded by a madman, who aims at Stephen to save Delia from dishonor, and, through a trick of fate, Stephen is hailed by all London as a hero of unusual valor. John takes Delia to the Continent, and to Australia, and on the return voyage she dies of a decline, and is buried at sea—but Stephen is forgiven and marries Claire.

He becomes, in later years, "a born leader, at once of the aristocracies of nature, of art and of intellect," to quote the rhapsody of an enthusiastic reporter on the occasion of Sir Stephen Cartmel's driving to Buckingham Palace in his official uniform, to kiss hands at the King's birthday levee. Even so does nature protect and fortify those of her children who are born with that strange anomaly, the artistic temperament.

CONFLICT. By Constance Smedley. Moffat, Yard & Co., New York. (Price $1.50.)

Miss Smedley's novel, like Miss

William Frend De Morgan, author of "Joseph Vance" and "Alice-for-Short," whose new book, "Somehow Good," is one of the important spring novels.

and a few who have the business instinct to a marked degree, and who are honest, straightforward and likable. Among the last is the heroine, Mary van Heyten, a girl who begins to earn her living as a typist in Manchester at the age of 15, and who inherits the large manufacturing business of her last employer, to whom she was secretary at the time of his death.

Mary van Heyten is thrown into contact with a semi-Bohemian set, with whom she has no affiliations whatsoever. She sees and hears things that shock and startle her, and is almost led into loving a man of the dilettante-artistic type. Fortunately, she discovers how shallow he is before it is too late, and she gives her heart and hand at last into the keeping of one more fit to be the mate of such a true woman as she is—even though he is her opponent in business.

Mary saves her friend, Susan Ellestree, from moral suicide—she upholds the honor of the business she has inherited—and these efforts (they are by no means light ones for a young and inexperienced girl) make the "conflict" of the story, which is of absorbing interest from beginning to end.

Good Work Well Done.

FLOWER O' THE ORANGE. By Agnes and Egerton Castle. The Macmillan Company, New York. (Price $1.50.)

The Castles some time ago staked out their claim to a particular field of story writing. They have not run out all the pay ore in it yet—in fact, the deeper they go the better the yield seems to be. The time of rapier and ruffles, from the Elizabethans to the days of the Prince Regent, is the field of these charming narrators.

In "Flower o' the Orange," there have been collected the best short stories produced by the Castles since 1900. There is some connection between two of them—"The Secret Thrust" and "My Rapier and My Daughter"—which are of the latter sixteenth century. Others are of the Jacobite time, one of the Restoration time, and one of the Gainsborough epoch.

Of course, there never was a real Castle story without sword play in it. It must be said that whenever Mr. Castle can get a rapier unsheathed, he is on ground he knows and loves. For this reason, perhaps, "The Secret Thrust" is the best story in the book. But they are all good, clean stories, of sword and lace and courtly word and quick flaming love.

They are, by the way, distinctly better than the "My Merry Rockhurst" stories.

NEWS AND NOTES OF FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

The third and final volume of Thomas Hardy's "The Dynasts" is nearly ready for publication. It is concerned with the decline and fall of Napoleon and the reëthronement of the old dynasties.

Gen. Charles King, the "Captain King" of veteran fiction fame, has written a new story with a young cadet hero, called "To the Front," which has just been published by Harper & Brothers. Gen. King, at the present time, is residing in Milwaukee.

"The Father," by August Strinberg, is a realistic play to be published this month. It deals with the destruction wrought to a man of generous impulse when brought in contact with the heartless selfishness of a woman to whom he is bound and against whom the chivalry in his attitude toward all women makes it impossible for him to protect himself.

W. D. Howell's new novel, now in press, will be called "Fennel and Rue." It deals with a young novelist who has been drawn into sympathy for an anonymous woman correspondent, only to find himself deceived. Each ignorant of the other is identity, they meet at a winter house party under perplexing conditions and the situation brings about unexpected results.

The latest work of Percy Mackaye is to be brought out in a few weeks under the title of "The Scarecrow." It is the first prose drama by Mr. Mackaye to be published and is described as an imaginative study of New England temperament. The scene is laid in a town of Massachusetts during the early witchcraft days of the seventeenth century. The play was suggested by Hawthorne's story of "Feathertop."

Prof. Paul Vinogradoff has nearly ready his new book on "English Society in the Eleventh Century." The author points out that the eleventh century may be called the watershed in the development of English society. He traces the influence of public law, of husbandry and private law in the regulation of husbandry, and finally examines the classes and groups produced by the combined working of political and economic causes.

A new edition of Prof. Bernard Moses's "The Establishment of Spanish Rule in America" will be published by the Putnams this month. This work is a standard and authoritative book on the subject with which it is concerned. The Putnams have now in press a new book by the same author, which will bear the title "South America on the Eve of Emancipation." It will appear in the near future.

The Duke Litta, author of several successful novels in Italian, and a man of many activities, will issue the first of the month, through Doubleday, Page & Company, the first novel he has written in English. It is called "The Soul of a Priest," and deals with one of the greatest problems that confronts modern Italy—the sway of the priesthood over the people. Four editions of this book have already appeared in England, where it is the subject of much discussion.

The second volume of the Cambridge "History of English Literature" will be published in March. "The End of the Middle Ages" is to be the title of this second volume, which will deal with "Piers' Plowman," Richard Rolle, Wycliff, and the minor poetry and prose of their period not already dealt with in volume I; Gower, Chaucer, and the Chaucerian school; the beginnings of English prose and those of Scots literature (Huchoun, Barbour, James I, Henryson, Dunbar, Douglas;) the work of the Westminster Press; the early days of school, college, and university life, etc. Volume III, "Renascence and Reformation," will deal with the poetry and prose of the Tudor reigns.

SOME POINTS ABOUT THE MARCH MAGAZINES.

In the March number of Smith's Magazine Rupert Hughes tells of the present condition of American music and the deep-rooted objection to it which was part of the old Puritan cult. In the same number there is an essay by Anne O'Hagan on "Feminine Martyrdoms," and a talk by Charles Battell Loomis, entitled "Pass It Along."

The March Garden Magazine-Farming has two timely articles covering the subject of making gardens for specific purposes. Various kinds of flower gardens are described and illustrated, and "How to Have a Perfect Vegetable Garden" lives up to its title. It gives the working plan by which one can foretell the results from a vegetable garden.

Putnam's Monthly and The Reader will this spring begin the publication of a serial by Alice MacGowan and Grace MacGowan Cooke. As usual with the writings of these sisters, the scene is laid among the homes of the Tennessee highlanders. It deals especially with the fortunes of a young man who has known city life, but goes back to his mountain home to do what he can for his neighbors. Here he falls in love with a beautiful, earth-born creature, who is something of a vixen.

Springtime has its blossoming beneath the ocean as well as on the land. This wonderful transformation is described by Howard J. Shannon in "The Spring Awakening of the Sea," which appears in Harper's Magazine for March. Photographs and drawings picture a fairyland of marvels that unfold themselves in the depths of the sea. This strange, half-animal, half-vegetable, myriad-sided life is described in its picturesque and ever-changing phases, opening up a new field to lovers of nature study.

Ainslee's for March contains a new story by Joseph C. Lincoln, "An Inherited Eden," a tale of Cape Cod people. The complete novel is "The Madonna of the Tea Table," by Anna A. Rogers, and is a dramatic tale of the American army and navy people, the scene of which is laid mostly in Japan. It is a thoroughly American story, in spite of its setting, because the characters are all of them the sort of people we meet at home. Marie Van Vorst has a story called "The Road to Tomorrow."

The most striking of the illustrated articles in the World's Work for March, 1908, is "An American Artist in the Sahara," by Charles Wellington Furlong; the article is as remarkable as are the photographs. Other articles are: "Money-making Model Tenements," by Louis E. Dew; "A Great American Museum," by Hermon Carey Bumpus; "Hunting Indians with a Camera," by Edmond S. Meany, with illustrations by Edward S. Curtis (who has spent several years in the Indian camps;) "Foreign Invasion of the Northwest," by F. G. Moorehead, and "Japanese Immigration," a presentation from the Japanese point of view, by Viscount S. Aoki.

The principal contribution to the March number of Everybody's is an appreciation of Gov. Hughes by Erman J. Ridgway. It is a sketch of the personal side of the Governor. No less timely is an article by Lieut. Hugh Johnson, U.S.A., entitled "The Lamb Rampant," pointing out the stagnation of the American army system. Owen Wister writes "The Freezing of Washington," showing how completely the true personality of the great Virginian is "congealed" in modern text-books, and Charles Edward Russell finishes his series exposing the corruption in railway and street-car operation. "The Pursuit of the American Heiress," by an Expatriate; the final number of Herbert N. Casson's "Romance of the Reaper," and "The Actor and the Manager," by Hartley Davis, conclude the collection of articles.

In the March number of Appleton's Magazine, John T. McCutcheon, in his own quaint way, writes of "The Rise, Fall and Rehabilitation of Grover Cleveland," with nine of his cartoons to illustrate. "Have Women a Sense of Honor?" asks Mary Heaton Vorse, and answers her own question in a way to rouse discussion. Gen. Charles H. Taylor, editor of the Boston Globe, writes of "The Newspaper as It Is," with facts that throw a new light on modern journalism. Edward S. Martin contributes one of his good-natured essays, under the quizzical title, "The Impossibility of Living on Anything a Year."

The March McClure's leads off with an article on Gov. Hughes by Burton J. Hendrick. Ellen Terry's monthly contribution is a chapter called "Memories of Booth and Sarah Bernhardt," in which many other famous ones figure besides the great American actor and the ethereal "Miss Sarah." Gen. Pickett's widow, in an intimate article, "My Soldier," recalls the part played by the gallant Confederate general in the Civil War. Georgine Milmine, in Chapter XI of Mrs. Eddy's Life, tells of the founding of the Mother Church and the adoption of a son. "The Cost of Living," by George Kennan, is the history of an institution which seems to have solved one of the most important problems which confront the average man.

The March number of Scribner's Magazine opens with a paper of adventure by Arthur Ruhl, who crossed the Andes in winter, from the Chilean side to the Argentine foothills, about 150 miles. The Andes here rise to an appalling height, and Mr. Ruhl was assured that to make the trip in winter was one of extreme hazard. Charles M. Pepper, in his third article, "The Transformation of Transportation," takes the reader to the opposite side of the world and shows how modern invention is making over the Orient; the motor car is used by British engineers in Soudan, although it has not yet supplanted the camel caravan; even the Ottoman Empire has railroad projects. Another romantic project is the Bagdad railroad. Madame Waddington describes various amusing "Ceremonies and Festivals" in the neighborhood of her chateau. It is one of the pleasantest glimpses of French country life that she has given in her admirable papers. By way of contrast, the simple life of the French Canadian habitant is described by the artist, Birge Harrison, who has lived among them. It is illustrated with his pictures.

PEOPLE AND THINGS OF LITERARY NOTE.

Rudyard Kipling will preside at the dinner in celebration of the one hundred and eighteenth anniversary of the Royal Literary Fund to be held in London next May.

Miss Mary Johnston, author of "To Have and to Hold," is spending the midwinter months at Nassau, in the Bahamas. The new novel on which she is working deals with the period of Thomas Jefferson, and will be published some time this year.

Clayton Hamilton, the author of a new book to be published soon on "Materials and Methods in Fiction," is a contributor to magazines, an associate editor of the Forum and is connected with the English department at Columbia.

The best selling novel of the past month, according to the Bookman's list, is "The Weavers." "The Shuttle," "The Lady of the Decoration," "Days Off," "The Old Peabody Pew," and "The Daughter of Anderson Crow" complete the list. It is an interesting fact that "The Lady of the Decoration" stands in the list of twenty-four of the cities given and takes her place at the head in Cleveland and Memphis, in Philadelphia and Toronto.

One of the books which continues to be a best seller after the holiday season, is Henry Van Dyke's new book, "Day's Off." A new edition—the fifth—has just been put on the press. The translation into French of his "The Ruling Passion" has had a great success in France, and M. Emile Faguet, a member of the academy and author of "The History of English Literature," called it "a pure chef-d'oeuvre."

Dr. W. J. Rolfe, the Shakesperean scholar, recently celebrated his eightieth birthday by the completion of a new volume entitled "Shakespeare's Proverbs." Dr. Rolfe is to provide an introduction and notes. The selection of proverbs, maxims, etc., to be included in the forthcoming volume were originally made by Mrs. Cowden-Clarke and selected from the plays only. Additional selections from the sonnets and other poems of Shakespeare have been made by Dr. Rolfe himself.

Gertrude Atherton recently was guest of honor at a London banquet at the Lyceum Club, at which May Sinclair was in the chair. The latter is said to possess, under a retiring personality, a marked degree of executive strength, while the former, whose administrative capacity is well known, has never identified herself with club organizations. "Ancestors," Mrs. Atherton's latest novel, contains a chapter which sets forth the woman's club in a manner that invites strong discussion from all sides.

Mme. Marcell Tinayre, the writer of "La Maison du Peche," has received the decoration of the Legion d'Honneur and startled all France by refusing to wear it, as it was the emblem of an order instituetd by the first Napoleon and designed for military men. It is now awarded without distinction of occupation, and within the last few years women as well as men have been honored with it. The book which brought Mme. Tinayre her fame has become almost a classic, yet she has never written anything to equal it since.

George Meredith has just celebrated his eightieth birthday in his home at Boxhill, Surrey, where he has lived for more than half a century. Reading is his chief recreation, and he rises early every morning to read the morning papers. In every question of the day he is eagerly interested and well informed. He reads all the new books of importance and writes letters to his friends. An occasional preface in which the keen appreciation of the critic is still apparent or a little verse is all the literary work he attempts. In the wealth of consciousness of work well done, he enjoys the leisure of his old age and the memories of his long life.

The authorship of the journal of a Russian prisoner's wife in Japan—"As The Hague Ordains"—is causing much perplexity and surmise among both readers and critics. In Japan it is believed that Mrs. Mary Crawford Fraser has written this romance of modern war in collaboration with a European diplomat who was brought in close contact with Rusian prisoners. Other readers believe the book to have been written by the author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress," while still others attribute it, in part, to one of Dr. Anita Newcomb Magree's American nurses working in collaboration with a Russian officer detained at Nagoya.

BITS OF VERSE.

The River of Youth.

From all the golden hills of Dream,
Dew-cool and rainbow-kissed,
It twines and curls, a silver stream,
Through valleys hung with mist.

Down past enchanted woods to where Romance walks ever young,
Where kings ride forth to take the air
On steeds with velvet hung—

Where secret stairways tempt the bold,
Where pirate caves abound,
And many a chest of Spanish gold
May solemnly be found!

Through magic years it twines and creeps
Past towers of peacock blue,
Where still some captured princess sleeps
And dreams come always true.

Then gleam by gleam the light goes out,
Then darkened, grief by grief,
It sighs into our Sea of Doubt
And Manhood's Unbelief!

When the Boat Comes in.

Ouptreaching forms, stranned eyes and eager faces
On fast-advancing deck and waiting shore;
Nearer and nearer grow the parting spaces,
The two will meet in just a moment more.

A wondrous scene—this seeking recognition!
It flashes on me what the look must be,
The voice, the gesture, at the great transition,
When we are moored beyond the Unknown Sea!

Love, joy and pathos in the salutation
Of all these hundreds, as they find their own;
But of whatever class, whatever nation,
The joyous "Come at last!" was in the tone.

What goodly companies are daily landing,
From mortal shores, and at the heavenly pier,
Celestial hosts all eager must be standing
To welcome home the souls they hold so dear.

SHOULDERS OF ATLAS.

"No, I ain't. I'm going back to the shop to work."

"Henry Whitman! you ain't."

"Yes, I am. As for pottering round here and trying to get up an interest in things I ought to have begun, instead of ended in, and setting round reading books, that I can't keep my mind on, and, if I do, jest make me madder and madder, I won't. I'm going back to work with my hands the way I've been working the last forty years, and then I guess I'll get my mind out of leading strings."

"Henry Whitman, are you crazy?"

"No, but I shall be if I set round this way much longer."

"You don't need to do a mite of work."

"You don't suppose it's the money I'm thinking about. It's the work."

"What will folks say?"

"I don't care what they say."

"Henry Whitman, I thought I knew you, but I declare, it seems as if I had never known you at all," Sylvia said. She looked at him with her puzzled, troubled eyes, in which tears were gathering. She was still very pale. A sudden pity for her came over Henry. After all he ought to try to make his position clear to her. "Sylvia," he said, "what do you think you would do after all these years of housekeeping, if you had to stand in a shoe shop from morning till night at a bench cutting leather?"

Sylvia stared at him. "Me?"

"Yes, you."

"Why, you know I couldn't do it, Henry Whitman."

"Well, no more can I stand such a change in my life. I can't go to farming and setting round after forty years in a shoe shop any more than you can work in a shoe shop after forty years of housekeeping."

"It ain't the same thing at all," said Sylvia.

"Why not?"

"Because it ain't." Sylvia closed her thin lips conclusively. This to her mind was reasoning which completely blocked all argument.

Henry looked at her hopelessly. "I didn't suppose you would understand," he said.

"I don't see why you thought so," said Sylvia. "I guess I have a mind capable of understanding as much as a man. There is no earthly sense in your going to work in the shop again, with all our money. What would folks say, and why do you want to do it?"

"I have told you why."

"You haven't told me why, at all."

Henry said no more. He looked out of the window with a miserable expression. The beautiful front yard, with its box-bordered flower beds, did not cheer him with the sense of possession. He heard a bird singing with a flute-like note; he heard bees humming over the flowers, and he longed to hear, instead, the buzz and whir of machines which had become the accompaniment of his song of life. A terrible isolation and homesickness came over him. He thought of the humble little house in which he and Sylvia had lived so many years, and a sort of passion of longing for it seized him. He felt that for the moment he fairly loathed all this comparative splendor with which he was surrounded.

"What do you think she would say if you went back to the shop?" asked Sylvia. She jerked her head with an upward sidewise movement toward Rose's room.

"She may not be contented to live here very long anyway. It's likely that when the summer's over she'll begin to think of her fine friends in New York and want to lead the life she's been used to again," said Henry. "It ain't likely it would make much difference to her."

Sylvia looked at Henry as he had never seen her look before. She spoke with a passion of utterance of which he had never thought her capable. "She is going to stay right here in her Aunt Abrahama's house, and have all she would have had if there hadn't been any will," said she fiercely.

"You wouldn't make her stay if she didn't want to," said Henry, gazing at her wonderingly.

"She's got to want to stay," rejoined Sylvia, still with the same strange passion. "There'll be enough going on; you needn't worry. I'm going to give parties for her, if she wants them. She says she's been used to playing cards, and you know how we were brought up about cards, to think they were wicked. Well, I don't care if they are wicked. If she wants them she's going to have card parties, and prizes, too, though I most know it's as bad as gambling. And if she wants to have dancing parties—she knows how to dance—and she's going to have them, too. I don't think there's six girls in East Westland know how to dance, but there must be a lot in Alford, and the parlor is big enough for most everything. She shall have every mite as much going on as she would have in New York. She shan't miss anything. I'm willing to have some dinners, with courses, too, if she wants them and hire Hannah Simmond's little sister to wait on the table, with a white cap on her head and a white apron with a bib. I mean Rose shall have everything she wants, and then, you know, Henry, there's the church sociables and suppers all winter, and she'll like to go to them, and they will most likely get up a lecture and concert course. If she can't be every mite as lively here in East Westland as in New York, if I set out to have her, I'll miss my guess. There's lots of beautiful dresses upstairs that belonged to her aunt, and I'm going to have the dressmaker come here and make some over for her. It's no use talking, Henry, she's going to stay."

"Well, I am sure I hope she will," said Henry, still regarding his wife with wonder.

"She is going to, and if she does stay, you know you can't go back to work in the shop, Henry Whitman. I'd like to know how you think you would sit down to the table with her, smelling of leather the way you used to."

"There might be worse smells."

"That's just because you are used to it."

"That's just it," cried Henry, emphatically. "Can't you get it through your head, Sylvia? It is because I am used to it. Can't you see it's kind of dangerous to turn a man out of his tracks, after he's been in them so long?"

"There ain't any need for you to work in the shop. We've got plenty of money without," said Sylvia, settling back immovably in her chosen place in the circle, and Henry gave it up.

Sylvia considered that she had won the victory. She began sewing again. Henry continued to look out of the window. "She is a delicate little thing, and I guess it's a mighty lucky thing for her that she came to live in the country just as she did," Sylvia observed.

"I suppose you know what is bound to happen if she and Mr. Allen stay on in the same house," said Henry. "As far as I am concerned, I think it would be a good arrangement. Mr. Allen has a good salary, and she has enough to make up for what he can't do, and I would like to keep the child here myself, but I somehow thought you didn't like the idea."

Again Sylvia turned white and stared at her husband, almost with horror. "I don't see why you think it is bound to happen," said she.

Henry laughed. "It doesn't take a very long head to think so."

"It shan't happen. That child ain't [illegible] anybody!"

if she only thought so, to be an old maid," said Sylvia.

Henry laughed a little. "That's a compliment to me."

"I ain't saying anything against you. I've been happy enough, and I suppose I've been better off than if I'd stayed single, but Rose has got enough to live on, and what any girl that's got enough to live on wants to get married for beats me."

Henry laughed again, a little bitterly this time. "Then you wouldn't have married me if you had had enough to live on?" he said.

Sylvia looked at him and an odd, shamed tenderness came into her elderly face. "There's no use talking about what wasn't, anyway," said she, and Henry understood.

After a little while Sylvia brought up the subject of Horace and Rose again. She was evidently very uneasy about it. "I don't see why you think just because a young man and a girl are in the same house anything like that is bound to happen," said she.

"Well, perhaps not; maybe it won't," said Henry, soothingly. He saw that it troubled Sylvia and it had always been an unwritten maxim with him that Sylvia should not be troubled if it could be helped. He knew that he himself was about to trouble her, and why should she be vexed in addition about an uncertainty, as possibly this incipient love affair might be. After all, why should it follow that because a young man and a girl lived in the same house they should immediately fall in love, and why should it not be entirely possible that they might have a little love making without any serious consequences? Horace had presumably paid a little attention to girls before, and it was very probable that Rose had received attention. Why bother about such a thing as this when poor Sylvia would really be worried over his return to his old, humble vocation.

For that it must happen Henry, as he sat beside the window, that pleasant afternoon, was becoming more and more convinced. It seemed to him that his longing was gradually strengthening into a purpose which he could not overcome. It seemed to him that every flute-like note of a bird in the spring pleasance outside served to make this purpose more unassailable, as if every sweet flower breath and every bee hum, every drawing of his wife's shining needle through the white garment which she was mending, all served to render his purpose so settled a thing that any change in it was as impossible as growth in a granite ledge. That very day Henry had been approached by the superintendent of Lee & Fisher's, where he had worked, and told that his place, which had been temporarily filled, was vacant and ready for him. He had said that he must consider the matter, but he had known in his heart that the matter admitted of no consideration. He looked gloomy as he sat there with his unread book in his hand, yet gradually an eager, happy light crept into his eyes.

After supper he told Sylvia he was going down to the store. He did so, but on his way he stopped at the superintendent's house, and told him that he would report for work in the morning.

Rose had not come down to supper. Henry had wondered why, and sympathized in part with Sylvia's anxiety; still, he had a vague feeling that a young girl's not coming down to supper need not be taken very seriously, that young girls had whims and fancies which signified nothing, and that it was better to let them alone until they got over them. He knew that Sylvia, however, would take the greatest comfort in coddling the girl, and he welcomed the fact as conducing to his making arrangements for the next day. He thought that Sylvia would not have the matter in mind at all since she had the girl to fuss over, and that she would not ask him any questions.

On his way home he stopped at Sydney Meeks'. He found the lawyer in a demoralized dining-room which had nevertheless had an air of homely comfort with its chairs worn into hollows to fit human anatomies, and its sideboard set out with dusty dishes and a noble ham. Meeks was a very good cook, although one could not confidently assert that dust and dirt did not form a part of his ingredients. One of his triumphs was ham cooked in a manner which he claimed to have invented. After having been boiled it was baked and frequently basted in a manner which Meeks kept as secret as the bouquet of his grape wine. Sydney sat at the table, eating bread and ham spread with mustard, and there was also a mysterious pie in reserve and a bottle of wine. "Draw up, Henry," said Sydney.

"I've had supper."

"What?"

"Sylvia had chicken salad, and flapjacks, and hot biscuits."

Sydney sniffed. "Cut a slice off that ham," he ordered, "and draw a chair up; not that one; you'll go through. Yes, that's right. Bring over another wine glass while you're about it. This is daisy wine, ten years old. I've got a pie here that I'll be willing to stake you a fortune you can't analyze. I made it. It's after the pattern of the cold pastries you read about in old English novels. You shall guess what's in it. Draw up."

Henry obeyed. He found himself sitting opposite Sydney, eating and drinking with intense enjoyment. Sydney chuckled. "Good?" said he.

"I don't know when my victuals have tasted right before," said Henry. He received a large wedge of the pie on his plate, and his whole face beamed with the first taste. Sydney leaned across the table and whispered. "Squabs," said he, "and robins; big fat ones, I shot 'em night before last. It's all nonsense, the fuss folks make about robins and a lot of other birds; as far as that goes—damned sentiment. Year before last I hadn't a bushel of grapes on my vines because the robins stole them, and not a peck of pears on that big Seckel pear tree. If they'd eaten them up clean I wouldn't have felt so bad; but there the ground would be covered with pears rotted on account of one little peck. They are enough sight better on women's bonnets than eating up folks' substance, though I don't promulgate that doctrine abroad. And one thing I ain't ashamed to say, big, fat robins ought to be made use of. This pie is enough sight more wholesome for the bodies of men who have immortal souls dependent a little on what is eaten, in spite of the preaching than western tainted beef. I made up my mind that pie was the natural destiny of the robin, and I make squab and robin pies every week of my life. The robins are out of mischief in that pie, and they are doing us good. What makes you look so, though, Henry? There's something besides my pie and ham and wine gives that look to your face."

"I'm going back to the shop tomorrow," said Henry. Sydney looked at him. "Most folks would say you were an uncommon fool," said he. "I suppose you know that."

"I can't help it," said Henry, happily. Along with the savory pie in his mouth came a subtler relish to his very soul. The hunger of the honest worker who returns to his work was being appeased.

CHAPTER XV.

While Henry was at Sydney Meeks' Horace sat alone in the south room smoking and reading the evening paper. He kept looking up from the paper and listening. He was hoping that Rose, in spite of the fact that she had not been able to come down to supper, might yet make her appearance. He speculated on her altered looks and manner at dinner. He could not help being a little anxious, in spite of all suspicion. Given the premises of an abnormal girl with a passion for himself which humiliated him, an abnormal woman like Miss Farrel, with a similar passion, although under better control, the melodramatic phases of the candy, and sudden death and traces of arsenical poison, what should be the conclusion?

He himself had eaten some of presumably the same candy with no ill-effects. Mrs. Ayres had assured him of her constant watchfulness over her daughter, who was no doubt in an alarmingly nervous state, but was she necessarily dangerous? He doubted if Mrs. Ayres had left the two girls a moment to themselves during the drive. What possible reason, after all, had he for alarm?

When he heard Sylvia mounting the stairs and caught a glimpse of a little tray borne carefully he gave up all hope of Rose's coming down. Presently he went out and walked down the village street, smoking. As he passed out of the yard he glanced up at Rose's window and saw the light behind the curtains. He thought how glad he was that the girl had a woman like Sylvia to care for her. As he looked Sylvia's shadow passed between the window and the light. It had in its shadowy enlargement a benignant aspect. There was an angelic, motherly bend to the vague shoulders. Sylvia was really in her element. She petted and scolded the girl, whom she found flung upon her bed like a castaway flower, sobbing pitifully.

"What on earth is the matter!" demanded Sylvia in a honey tone, which at once stung and sweetened. "Here you are in the dark crying and going without your victuals. You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

Rose buried her face deeper in the bed. "I don't want any lamp," she gasped.

"Don't want any lamp! Ain't you ashamed of yourself? I should think you were a baby. You are going to have a lamp, and you are going to sit up and eat your supper." Sylvia drew down the white shades carefully, then she bent over the girl. She did not touch her, but she was quivering with maternal passion, which seemed to embrace without any physical contact. "Now, what is the matter?" she said.

"Nothing."

"What is the matter?" repeated Sylvia insistently.

As she spoke Sylvia struck a match and lit the lamp.

Suddenly Rose sat up. "Nothing is the matter," she said, "I af just nervous." She made an effort to control her face. She smiled at Sylvia, with the wet eyes and swollen mouth. She resolutely dabbed at her flushed face with a damp little ball of handkerchief. Sylvia turned to the bureau and took a fresh handkerchief from the drawer. She sprinkled it with some toilet water that was on the dressing table and gave it to Rose. "Here is a clean handkerchief," she said, "and I've put some of your perfumery on it. Give me the other."

Rose took the sweet-smelling square of linen and tried to smile again. "I just got nervous," she said.

"Set down here in this chair," said Sylvia, "and I'll draw up the little table, and I want you to eat your supper. I've brought up something real nice for you."

"Thank you, Aunt Sylvia, you're dear," said Rose pitifully, "but I don't think I can eat anything." In spite of herself the girl's face quivered again and fresh tears welled into her eyes. She passed her scented handkerchief over them. "I am not a bit hungry," she said brokenly.

Sylvia drew a large chintz-covered chair forward. "Set right down in this chair," she said firmly, and Rose slid weakly from the bed and sank into the chair. She watched with a sort of dull gratitude while Sylvia spread a little table with a towel and set out the tray. "There," said Sylvia. "Here is some cream toast and some of those new peas and a little lamb chop, spring lamb, and a cup of tea. Now you just eat every mite of it, and then I've got a saucer of strawberries and cream for you to top off with."

Rose looked hopelessly at the dainty fare. Then she looked at Sylvia. The impulse to tell another woman her trouble got the better of her. If women had not other women in whom to confide there are times when their natures would be too much for them. "I heard some news this morning," said she. She attempted to make her voice exceedingly light and casual.

"What?"

"I heard about Mr. Allen's engagement."

"To—Lucy."

Rose's voice trembled with sad hypocrisy.

"Who told you?" demanded Sylvia.

"She told me herself."

"Did her mother hear it?"

"She heard, but I think she did not understand. Lucy spoke in French. She talks French very well. She studied with Miss Farrel, you know. I think Lucy has done all in her power to fit herself to become a good wife for an educated man."

"What did she tell you in French for? Why didn't she speak in English?"

"I don't know."

"Well, I know. She did it so her mother wouldn't hear, and say in English that she was telling an awful whopper. Mr. Allen is no more engaged to Lucy Ayres than I am."

Rose gazed at Sylvia with sudden eagerness. "What makes you think so, Aunt Sylvia?"

"Nothing makes me think what I know. Mr. Allen has never paid any attention to Lucy Ayres, beyond what he couldn't help, and she's made a mountain out of a mole hill. Lucy Ayres is man crazy, that's all. You needn't tell me."

"Then you don't think"——

"I know better. I'll ask Mr. Allen."

"If you asked him it would make it very hard for him if it wasn't so," said Rose.

"I don't see why."

"Mr. Allen is a gentleman, and he could not practically accuse a woman of making an unauthorized claim of that sort," said Rose. She looked at the tray and took up a fork.

"Well, I won't say anything about it to him if you think I had better not," said Sylvia, "but I must say I think it's pretty hard on a man to have a girl going round telling folks he's engaged to her when he ain't. Eat that lamb chop and them peas while they're hot."

"I'm going to. They are delicious. I didn't think I was hungry at all, but to have things brought up this way"——

"You've got to eat a saucer of strawberries afterward," said Sylvia happily. She watched the girl eat and she was in a sort of ecstacy, which was nevertheless troubled. After a while, when Rose had nearly finished the strawberries, she ventured a remark:

"Lucy Ayres is a queer girl," said she. "I've known all about her for some time. She has been thinking young men were in love with her when they never had an idea of such a thing ever since she was so high (Sylvia indicated by her outstretched hand a point about a foot and a half from the floor.)

"It seems as if she must have had some reason sometimes," said Rose, wiht an impulse of loyalty toward the other girl. "She is very pretty."

"As far as I know no young man in East Westland has ever thought of marrying her," said Sylvia. "I think myself they are rather afraid of her. It doesn't do for a girl to act too anxious to get married. She just cuts her own nose off."

"I have never seen her do anything unbecoming," began Rose, then she stopped, for Lucy's expression which had caused a revolt in her was directly within her mental vision. It seemed as if Sylvia interpreted her thought. "I have seen her making eyes," said she.

Rose was silent. She realized that she also had seen poor Lucy making eyes.

"What a girl is so crazy to get married for anyway when she has a good mother and a good home I can't see," said Sylvia, leading directly up to the subject in the secret place of her mind.

Rose blushed, with apparently no reason. "But she can't have her mother always, you know, Aunt Sylvia," said she.

"Her mother's folks are awful long lived. But Lucy is younger; in the course of nature she will outlive her mother, and then she will be all alone."

"What if she is? Ain't she got her good home and money enough to live on if she's careful?"

"I always thought it would be very dreadful to live alone," Rose said with another blush.

"Well, she needn't be alone. There's plenty of women always in want of a home. No woman need live alone if she don't want to."

"But it isn't quite like——" Rose hesitated.

"Like what?"

"It wouldn't seem quite so much like your own home, would it, as if——" Rose hesitated again.

Sylvia interrupted her. "A girl is a fool to get married if she's got money enough to live on," said she.

"Why, Aunt Sylvia, wouldn't you have married Uncle Henry if you had had plenty of money?" asked the girl, "exactly as Henry had done?"

ing up one of her impregnable ramparts against argument. But the girl persisted. "I don't see why," she said.

Sylvia colored again. "Well, for one thing, your Uncle Henry is one man in a thousand," said she. "I know every silly girl thinks she has found just that man, but it's only once in a thousand times she does, and she's mighty lucky if she don't find out that the man in a thousand is another woman's husband when she gets her eyes open. Then there's another thing—nothing has ever come betwixt us."

"I don't know what you mean."

"I mean we've had no family," said Sylvia, firmly, although her color deepened. "I know you think it's awful for me to say such a thing, but look right up and down this street at the folks that got married about the same time Henry and I did. How many of them that's had families ain't had reason to regret it? I tell you what it is, child, girls don't know everything. It's awful, having children and straining every nerve to bring them up right and then to have them go off in six months in consumption, the way the Masons lost their three children—two boys and a girl—or to worry and fuss until you are worn to a shadow, the way Mrs. George Emerson has over her son, and then have him take to drink. There wasn't any consumption in the Mason family on either side in a straight line, but the three children all went with it, and there ain't any drink in the Emerson family, on her side or his, all as straight as a string, but Mrs. Emerson was a weaver, and she had a great uncle who drank himself to death. I don't believe there's a family anywhere around that hasn't got some dreadful thing in it to leak out, when you don't expect it, in children. Sometimes it only leaks in a straight line, and sometimes it leaks sidewise. You never know. Now, there's my family. I was a White, you know, like your Aunt Abrahama. There's consumption in our family, the worst kind. I never had any doubt but what Henry and I would have lost our children if we'd had any."

"But you didn't have any!" said Rose, in a curiously naive and hopeful tone.

"We are the only ones that got married about the time we did who didn't have any," said Sylvia, in her conclusive tone.

"But, Aunt Sylvia," said Rose, "you wouldn't stop everybody's getting married? Why, there wouldn't be any people in the world in a short time."

"There's some people in the world now that would be a good sight better off out of it, for themselves and other folks," said Sylvia.

"Then you don't think anybody ought to be married?"

"If folks want to be fools, let them. Nothing I can say is going to stop them, but I'll miss my guess if some of the girls that get married had the faintest idea what they were going into they would stop short, if it sent them over a rail fence. Folks can't tell girls everything, but marriage is an awful risk, an awful risk. And I say, as I said before, any girl who has got enough to live on is a fool to get married."

"But I don't see why, after all."

"Because she is," replied Sylvia. This time Rose did not attempt to bruise herself against the elder woman's imperturbability. She did not look convinced, but again the troubled expression came over her face. "I am glad you relished your supper," said Sylvia.

"It was very nice," said Rose, absently. Suddenly the look of white horror which had come over her face on the night of her arrival possessed it again. "What on earth is the matter?" cried Sylvia.

"I almost remembered then," gasped the girl. "You know what I told you the night I came. Don't let me remember, Aunt Sylvia. I think I shall die if I ever do."

Sylvia was as white as the girl, but she rose briskly. "There's nothing to remember," she said. "You're nervous and I'm going to make some of that root beer of mine tomorrow. It has hops in it, and it's real quieting. Now you stop worrying and wait a minute. I've got something to show you. Here, you look at the book you've been reading and stop thinking. I'll be back in a minute. I've just got to step into the other chamber."

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

"I am blessed with an abundance of long hair, and I use the utmost care in the preservation of it. I have never found anything that pleases me as much as Newbro's Herpicide. It keeps the scalp clean and sanitary and adds a luxurious appearance to my hair that no other preparation will give. I consider it most delightful to use, and I can truly say that I prefer it above all other preparations for the hair. I like your soap, also, and can recommend both highly to any lady who wishes a good head of hair."

Cleveland, Ohio.

While it is not natural for every one to have extremely long hair, it is possible for every lady to have beautiful hair, for when the scalp is not diseased, the hair will grow naturally and abundantly.

The chief disease of the scalp is dandruff—which is highly contagious—and dandruff is now known to be caused by an invisible vegetable growth called the dandruff germ. Ordinarily, the first signs of scalp infection are dryness, dullness and brittleness of the hair, although the disease sometimes causes excessive oiliness. Following this, the hair loses its luster, the scalp itches more or less and dandruff appears. Falling hair and baldness represent the last stages of hair destruction.

Newbro's Herpicide—the original remedy that kills the dandruff germ—will cure any stage of this disease, except chronic baldness, which is incurable. Herpicide not only destroys the dandruff germ and stops falling hair, but it is a most exquisite hair dressing, making the hair light and fluffy and giving it a silken gloss. Almost marvelous results sometimes follow the continued use of Herpicide. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly. Guaranteed under the Food and Drugs Act June 30, 1906. Serial No. 915.

"JUST A SUGGESTION about false hair. When it gets stringy and unsightly, moisten it with Newbro's Herpicide and brush it out well. The result will surprise and please you."

Vanadium and Tests.

ERNAL (Utah) Feb. 15.—[To the tor of The Times:] I am send- you a sample of vanadium ore, ch occurs sparingly between here the Union Pacific Railroad. Please ne the ore and give me some facts ting to the element; as very great rest is now taken in prospecting such ores. Oblige, D. B. S.

NSWER. The sample is Roscoelite a greenish color. Owing to the ny letters received by this depart- nt of The Times, an endeavor will be made to give some facts of rest and relating to vanadium ores, s in commercial ways, occurrence, tests for the element.

Crescent, Nev. (now being exploited,) turns out to be the exception.

Probably 22 per cent. of the concentrates from carnotite (a double vanadate of uranium and potassium,) a canary-colored crystalline powder, mixed with quartzose sand, massive and friable when pure, and occurring in the sandstone measures of the Unaweep country, Colorado—seventy miles from Dolores and thirty-five miles from Placerville, as also, at many points along and near the line of the Denver and Rio Grande Railway, between Grand Junction, Colo., and Soldiers' Summit, Utah. In all of this territory it is hardly possible to get one ton of pure carnotite, or, a like quantity of high-grade vanadinite.

"At Newmire (Colo.) Roscoelite, occurring in a sandstone to which it gives a dull-green color, is roasted with salt, converting the vanadium to a chloride, which is soluble in water. The roasted material is then leached and a ferric salt added, which precipitates the vanadium in the form of an iron vanadium compound. This is shipped to Niagara Falls and smelted by electricity, to a ferrovanadium running about 25 to 27 per cent. vanadium and guaranteed to contain not over 2 per cent. impurities. It sells for $5 per pound for the contained vanadium. . . . No production of vanadinite or allied minerals is known to have been made during the year" (1906.) Correspondents will now note, particularly, the following quoted lines: "These [vanadium] minerals generally occur as thin coatings along joint planes in rocks."

A great number of such minerals are submitted for test to this department. None of them, excepting the vanadates from Arizona, are worthy of further noting. Great expectations, however, are "expected" from the Crescent, Nev., vanadate, of which, it is hoped, more will be known later.

Roscoelite is also known as "vanadium mica." It is of a brown-green color, and occurs with quartz in Boulder county, Colo. It possesses a somewhat pearly luster, and in habit appears as small scales. Some Roscoelite shows an earthy, micaceous incrustation on massive rocks. Its specific gravity is nearly 3, and acids have but little effect on the mineral.

If nitric acid is dropped on vanadinite it turns to a deep red color, caused by the separation of vanadic acid. In solution (with nitric acid) it appears as a bright yellow.

Halotrichite.

CORONA, Feb. 12.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I send you a sample of ore that tastes like ink. It is from a deposit eleven miles from Twenty-nine Palms. Please name it for me in your "In the Earth" and state its uses and values.

Yours truly, D. B. A.

ANSWER. The sample is an iron—alum—and named at subheading; yellow-white in color. Taste sweetish, astringent at first, and followed immediately with an inky taste. It is a double sulphate of iron and alumina, with approximately 45 per cent. of water in which menstruum it is soluble.

From the locality where you obtained the sample: "The alum rock itself probably still contains . . . a supply of soluble sulphates, and upon this fact depends the value of the deposit. . . . In view of the rapidly-growing demand for alum and aluminum sulphate in the arts, in sanitary engineering, and as a source of the metal, there is reason to believe that such deposits as this will in time be utilized, the essentials being transportation facilities and skill in chemical engineering." (Mineral Resources of the United States.)

Above all considerations for the manufacture of the metal aluminum is the fact that the deposit of mineral must be a big one. There are many caves and crevices from which small quantities of such material can be obtained, but a big deposit—such as those of Nevada and New Mexico—is required.

"Alumina, aluminum hydrate or refined Bauxite, alum, alum cake, aluminum sulphate, aluminous cake, and alum in crystals or ground . . . averagel $28.83 per short ton in 1906."

Titaniferous Iron Ore.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] I found in ledge formation a black ore on the east side of Fremont Peak, San Bernardino county, eighteen miles east of Randsburg. Will you give probable value?

Yours truly, H. C. R.

ANSWER. The sample is encrusted with ilmerite, and oxydized from center outward, like eagle stone. If the entire deposit is represented by sample submitted it is of no value.

Probably a better grade of this titaniferous ore would appear at slight depth.

There are many deposits of such ore that should, in the near future, be of considerable commercial value, notably so, the deposit at Twin Buttes, fifteen miles west of Black Rock, Utah. This Utah deposit is capped with ore similar to your sample, but on development high-grade ilmenite was obtained, with magnetite, pyroxene and hematite. Some pyroxene crystals appear in your specimen, also.

Calcite.

PARKER (Ariz.) Feb. 10.—[To the Editor of The Times:] Specimen from Whipple Mountains in Southeast San Bernardino county, Cal., forty miles south of Needles and seventeen miles northwest of Parker. What is this mineral?

Yours truly, J. L. B.

ANSWER. The sample is chiefly lime carbonate, with traces of lead; it is, furthermore, conglomerated—not as pudding stone—as breccia. The specimens were not treated for precious metals.

RAILROAD NOTES.

The management of the Northwestern Railroad will use gasoline motors for branch line work in Wisconsin, and will gradually extend the use of motors to supplant locomotives where it is considered practicable.

The Western Pacific Company has announced that electricity will be the motive power used to haul trains through the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Guy Earl, vice-president of the company, made the announcement on the occasion of a recent visit to Oroville. This has long been the popular impression, for the rails of the new line are to be laid beside the Feather River, probably the greatest stream on the Pacific Coast, measured by its capacity for power generation. One of the plants that will supply power to the railroad is now being built and will generate 100,000 horse-power.

The record of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway in building its Pacific Coast extension has never been equalled in the matter of time by any similar undertaking. Track is now building at the rate of five miles per day and it is confidently expected that trains over the new transcontinental railway will be operated through to Butte by May, 1908, and into Seattle and Tacoma about a year later.

The benefit of railroad combination is illustrated by the Alton and Clover Leaf which since they came under the same general management have en-

PIOCHE DISTRICT.

FAMOUS SUIT IS SETTLED.

HAS AGITATED PIOCHE DISTRICT FOR THREE YEARS.

Boston-Pioche Mining Company Buys Up Both Ends of Litigation Over Claim Which Adjoins Those That Made the Camp Noted in the Comstock Days.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PIOCHE (Nev.) Feb. 28.—A famous lawsuit that has agitated Pioche for the past three years has been settled and another big mining project will be the result.

The Boston-Pioche Mining Company, of which C. S. Miller of Boston is president, has finally succeeded in buying up both ends of the litigation.

The case was decided by the lower court in favor of A. W. McCune of Salt Lake City, but afterward that judgment was reversed by the Supreme Court of Nevada in favor of John R. Cook and William Lloyd of Pioche, the other litigants. The case was then started for the Supreme Court of the United States when Mr. Miller stepped in and after several months' negotiation bought out both ends of the controversy and took the case out of court.

The trouble arose from a relocation by Cook, a United States deputy mineral surveyor, of ground abandoned by McCune. Cook's partner was Lloyd, and these two drifted in on the old Pacific tunnel, from which was taken three of the old bonanzas of Pioche, and discovered beyond the line of the old Yuba line still another of the great ore shoots that had made Pioche famous in the Comstock days. The claim they located is the Yuba East. McCune immediately resumed assessment work, claiming that a deputy mineral surveyor had no right to locate ground, but the Supreme Court of Nevada, the Chief Justice dissenting, found that the claim was legal.

The ore shoot is exposed at 140 feet level, presenting a face of nearly solid galena averaging 121 ounces in silver, with over 50 per cent. lead, as shown by the three carloads already shipped. A new shaft was started in October, 1907, to tap the ore shoot at the 140-foot level, which was the level of the Pacific tunnel. This shaft has already been carried down to the 200 level, and station cut, and is now being continued to the 300 level preparatory to working the ore body from the 140 and 200 and 300 simultaneously. No ore shipments are now being made, although the ore is so rich, and so desirable to the smelters on account of the lead that there is no difficulty in obtaining good rates from the smelters. But the price of lead and silver is so low at present that the company is content with opening up the ore body and waiting for better conditions so far as metal prices go.

The Boston and Pioche own about 4500 feet of the old porphyry dyke of Pioche, which is largely virgin ground. The adjoining property of the dyke is owned by the Nevada-Utah Company, controlled by Thomas W. Lawson of Boston. It is from the old workings of this portion of the dyke and its adjacent fissures that over $75,000,000 in value was abstracted in the early days of Pioche. The Boston and Pioche believe that this property will yield as much as has the old property on the same dyke, and the discovery of this first ore body goes very largely to support the theory that these ore bodies occur at every 200 or 300 feet in the dyke. As to depth they have already been explored in the old openings to 1500 feet and were richer there than at any other portion of the property, when water, encountered at the 1300 level, compelled them to stop in the old days.

Although the company originated in Boston, the eastern office was recently transferred to No. 100 Broadway, New York. The stock of the company has been largely placed by Wagner & Berwanger of New York, and is owned by some of the best known people in Boston and New York.

The company is operating a forty-horse-power gasoline engine, made by Fairbanks, Morse & Co., and a compressor operating three drills, and will shortly place a sixty-horse-power on the Boss shaft, which is already down 220 feet.

President Miller is now in Los Angeles on business connected with the company, but he expects to return here soon, make Pioche his headquarters during the summer and personally attend to the operations of the big property.

ARIZONA.

HEAVY TONNAGE FROM BISBEE.

SHIPMENTS AVERAGE FOUR THOUSAND TONS A DAY.

Copper Queen Shaft Is Going Deep. Shattuck-Arizona Will Erect Eight Hundred-Ton Smelter—Greene Has His Troubles—Cananea Cutting Costs.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) Feb. 28.—There seems to be nothing in the nature of a slump in the mines at Bisbee, which for the whole of February have been turning out about 4000 tons of ore a day. Ninety of the largest steel ore cars made go daily down to Douglas, carrying ore for reduction at the Copper Queen and Calumet smelters. The Calumet and Arizona is producing more ore than ever before in its history, and its smelter is working up to the top notch of its capacity. At the Copper Queen smelter nine furnaces are being worked, beside a reverberatory.

GOING DEEP.

The four-compartment Sacramento shaft of the Copper Queen now is down 1200 feet, at which depth it has a hoisting capacity of 3000 tons a day in two eight-hour shifts, by means of skips, automatically dumped, at the surface, and distributed automatically to ten railroad cars. The ore will be brought to the shaft stations through long drifts by electric locomotives. From the time the miner in the stope pushes the ore into a chute, it will be automatically handled, even in the charging of the furnaces at the smelter. Even the bullion will be taken care of automatically. The bullion moulds are set on the rim of a large wheel; the wheel is revolved as each mould is filled and the bars are automatically dumped into a tank of water, at the bottom of which is an elevator belt, which takes them direct to the door of the car wherein they are to be shipped eastward.

ELECTRICAL ENERGY.

plete in about four months, and through it and the central power-house much economy is expected to be secured. The power-house will furnish 4000 horse power, developed by turbine engines and transmitted electrically and by compressed air. The hoists will be operated by compressed air, as will all the drills.

SHATTUCK SMELTER.

At a late meeting of the stockholders of the Shattuck-Arizona Mining Company, held in Duluth, Minn., full approval was given the plans of the directors for the immediate installation of an 800-ton smelter at Douglas. Advertisement has been made for the necessary machinery. It is stated that the company will establish its own smelter not particularly for purposes of economy, but in order to be independent of the custom smelters, which for a while refused to handle any outside ores. The report that S. A. Parnell was to become manager seems to have been premature; no action has been taken upon the resignation of B. M. Pattison.

MILL NEARLY READY.

At Nacozari, it is believed that the new concentrating mill will be ready to start by April 1. A 10 per cent. cut in wages has been announced, effective March 1, and employés who are not willing to accept the reduction have been asked to give the company as much notice as possible, that their places may be filled. The Nacozari company is about the last of the large concerns to drop to the scale of wages of a year ago.

GREENE HAS TROUBLES.

Somehow, W. C. Greene and the Greene-Cananea Copper mines are not pursuing similar financial paths and there are even rumors to the effect that Greene is losing his grip on the great copper properties south of Naco. Though there are assurances that Greene is as wealthy as ever, he is in considerable trouble at El Paso, for relatively small amounts. The Federal smelter near that point, purchased a short time ago by Greene, has been attached for a debt of about $20,000 for a note to the National Dry Kiln Company, which Greene seems to have indorsed for one of his corporations, the Sierra Madre Lumber Company. Altogether, eight suits have been filed against Greene in El Paso, five of them actions in garnishment and three suits for debts aggregating about $32,000. These are in addition to the action of the Dry Kiln Company. They have been filed by the Mine and Smelter Supply Company against the Sierra Madre Lumber Company and W. C. Greene.

The Sierra Madre Lumber Company last year was transferred by Greene to the Greene Copper Company. The stock lately was re-transferred, the mining company thereby being made the stronger by $1,150,000 actual cash. It is understood that Greene lately has been purchasing additional lumber ground and several mills in the Sierra Madres, particularly the large manufacturing plant of the National Mill and Lumber Company of Chihuahua.

CUTTING CANANEA COSTS.

The work of remodeling the mechanical equipment of the mines at Cananea continues on an extensive scale, but there seems no evidence of starting again in the near future. It has developed that at one time during the past year the cost of improvement and operation, charged against the copper production, reached the amazing figure of 18 cents a pound. It is believed that with the improvements contemplated, the cost of mining will be reduced from $4 to $2 per ton, and that large reduction will be made in smelting costs as well. The caving system of mining will be tried. It is said that several of the mines have been deprived of their pillars in the large working stopes. There can be no doubt, however, of the possession by the company of some of the largest copper ore bodies known in the world and the only question seems to be that of economical management.

BELEN'S BISMUTH.

Early in March, the small furnace and rotary roaster at the Belen camp, thirty miles southwest of Cumpas, Sonora, will be started up on selected copper ore. For a while, the ores from the Belen property were reduced at the Transvaal smelter at Cumpas and shipments have been made from the property to the Copper Queen smelter. At present, two carloads a week are being sent to Douglas. An extraordinary product of the property is bismuth, and eight carloads of bismuth ore have been shipped to Liverpool for reduction.

TONTO BASIN STRIKE.

In Northern Tonto Basin, near Payson, about eighty miles north of Globe, a notable gold strike has been made on a property owned by W. C. and H. S. Colcord. Assays across a three-foot ledge show values not less than $80 a ton, and it is said that fifteen tons of ore have been taken to the surface that averages $1000 a ton. In the vicinity is the mill of the Single Standard Company, a Los Angeles corporation, which suspended work some time ago. This mill is to be utilized in working ore from the Colcord property. The discovery is stimulating prospecting in the vicinity, and a number of small ledges have been located, carrying gold in such quantity that many of the miners are packing the ore to streams and washing it in rockers, after pulverizing.

The production of bullion at the Old Dominion smelter at Globe will be cut down in February, owing to trouble with the hoist at the mine, that caused a shortage of sulphide ore and the closing down of a couple of furnaces.

The first ore has just been struck in the Gem shaft of the Globe Consolidated mine, a two-foot vein which carries sulphide ore with copper values of 4 per cent.

Six feet of high-grade carbonate ore has been found in the west drift of the Iron Cap mine of the National Mining Exploration Company at Globe. The new vein was totally unexpected. Assays from it run as high as 30 per cent. copper.

Sixty men are working on the old McCracken mine in Southern Mohavo county, and the number is to be increased to 250 within a few months. About 10,000 feet of old workings are available on the property, but the new managers are sinking a new shaft on the ledge and will cut through the mountain from the 250-foot level. There are three ledges. None has been worked to any considerable depth and immense bodies of rich ore still remain. It is understood that a survey is being made for a railroad between the camp and Yucca station on the Santa Fé.

RAILROADERS RETURN.

General Manager W. A. Drake, Paul Hastings and F. P. Cruice of the Santa Fé, Prescott and Phoenix Railroad Company; Orleans Longacre, Jr., a Yavapai county mining man, and William Daum of Los Angeles, lately took an extensive trip through the mining districts that lie between the Arizona and California Railroad and the main line of the Santa Fé, and returned to Prescott full of enthusiasm over the mineral riches they had been shown.

A Los Angeles company is now about ready to commence the washing of creek beds and banks of Humboldt Creek in Southern Yavapai county, the Keating placer claims. Four miles of flumes have been built and a complete hydraulic plant installed.

MONICA MILL.

A forty-stamp mill at Milltown, nine miles from Vivian, Mohave county, is being torn down, to be reërected on the Monica mine in Yavapai county. The only explanation is that the mill was out of proportion to the producing capacity of the Mohave county mines.

The well-known Bulldog mine at Goldfield, twenty-five miles east of Mesa, has been purchased by Shattuck & Nimo from the Calumet Mining Company of Prescott. The Bulldog is only a short distance from the famous Mammoth mine. It has a large ledge of free milling gold ore and has a small stamp mill, which was operated about fifteen years ago.

ANOTHER SMELTER.

Announcement has been made that a smelter, with initial capacity of 200 tons of ore a day, will be constructed on the property of the Rendell Reduction Company, in Ajo mining district, to which a railroad is to be built this summer. A number of prominent stockholders in the corporation are now on the ground, coming from various New England points.

BIG TUNNEL IS FINISHED.

GUANAJUATO REJOICES AT COMPLETION OF WORK.

Will Prevent Floods That Have Devastated City in the Past—Plans for Railroad Junction Are Accepted. American Enterprise Has Revivified Mining.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

GUANAJUATO, Feb. 26.—The talk of this city is the completion of the Porfirio Diaz tunnel, which expert engineers say will save the city from inundation. This capital has lost more lives and more property has been destroyed by floods in the past, than by war or pestilence since its foundation in the sixteenth century.

The historical records show eighteen different inundations. One of the most disastrous occurred September 2, 1772. After this catastrophe the ayuntaminto met in extraordinary session and ordered the owners of buildings to remove the débris from the public streets, as traffic was blocked completely by it. In the year 1780 occurred a similar disaster when many persons were drowned and the whole population, panic stricken, left the city for the surrounding counties. After this the best engineers of New Spain were invited for a consultation, but while there was much talk and many plans drawn up, nothing was done in a practical way.

Flood gollowed flood until 1880, when the State government began the boring of a tunnel. About 130 meters were dug, when the work was abandoned. The Governor then was Lic. Manuel Munoz Ledo. Then came the terrible disaster of July 1, 1905, after which the present Governor, Lic. Joaquin Obregon Gonzalez, determined to proceed with work on the tunnel. A contract to this end was given to the Mexican Engineering and Construction Company, Limited, of the City of Mexico, and active work was begun in June, 1906, and communication between the two ends was effected January 23, 1908, in the presence of many citizens. The event was a great day for Guanajuato.

Plans and specifications for the junction of the Guanajuato Mineral Belt Railway with the Mexican Central have been completed and accepted by the Central, whereby the Mineral Belt Railway will be enabled to handle loaded cars from the Central line without transfer or delay.

The construction will be made by a system of parallel tracks starting from a point about one kilometer outside of the city of Guanajuato, and will run parallel with the Central tracks for some distance into Guanajuato.

The arrangements of the parallel tracks of the Mineral Belt and the Mexican Central will be such that less than carload lots can be transferred from a car of one road to a car of the other road without any great trouble, while full carload lots can be transferred to either track. The one kilometer of parallel tracks will be one comparatively level stretch of ground.

BIG CREW AT WORK.

Over 500 men haxe been put to work on the excavation and grading of the new right of way, of the Mineral Belt road and this portion of the line will be completed and connected within a few months. Up to the present time about fifteen kilometers of the Belt road have been graded and five kilometers of fifty-pound track laid.

The Central Railroad branch to Guanajuato is practically finished and will be opened for traffic as soon as the necessary terminal station and freight bodegas are completed. The work is advancing very rapidly and should be finished and opened to the public March 1.

RELIEVES CONGESTION.

The completion of the Guanajuato branch will be greatly appreciated by the mine owners of that district as the congestion at Marfil will be entirely eliminated, and full cars can be readily transferred from the Central tracks over to the Mineral Belt Railway and hauled directly to the various mines. At present all machinery is carted in wagons over very rough roads, distances varying from ten to fifteen kilometers, at considerable expense and delay.

The outgoing freight from Guanajuato has decreased considerable in the last two years, owing to the fact that the large tonnage of ore, etc., which was formerly shipped from the mines is now being reduced to bullion in the several modern stamp mills and cyanide plants recently erected there.

The circumstance which has, in a relatively brief period transformed this camp from a state of inactivity, to that of one of the most active, is the fact that through the advent of American capital and enterprise by hydro-electric plant, which transmits power over a distance of 120 miles from the nearest available water power, has been placed in operation here. The turbine installed is one having a capacity of 9000 horse power and is a single horizontal unit of the Allis-Chalmers scroll case type operated by the Guanajuato Power and Electric Company at Guanajuato.

There were millions of tons of ore in the dumps of the old mines, and underground vast reserves practically developed or used as filling. The dumps were sampled, extensive cyanide tests made, and with cheap power available, these properties have become very valuable.

While much has been heard of late of the La Luz district near Guanajuato its location is not generally known. The Guanajuato area as a whole comprises three districts, consisting first of the mother vein proper, whic tends in a northwest-southeast tion for several miles through G juato. This is flanked by two ou districts. The one to the east braces the Santa Rosa and Per groups, that to the west is kno the La Luz district. It was a mining center eighty years ago much of it was overlooked by American miners. Now they ar covering its virgin ground and zas there.

BRONSON'S MONEY-SAVING DESK SALE

Desk Same as Cut $45
55-inch length, of selected quarter-sawed oak or mahogany finish, genuine mahogany bed and desk fronts. Exceptional value at $67.50.

LARGEST LINE OF DESKS AND OFFICE FURNITURE ON THE COAST

Six floors, covering a space of 30,000 square feet, giving you a selection not to be equalled in the West.

It is a very unusual thing to sell office furniture—such as Bronson's—at less than the regular price. Specializing on these lines, our regular prices are much lower than those of other stores carrying them as a side line. An overcrowded condition of our salesrooms and warehouses forces us to make a discount of one-third off the regular price to move the goods at once.

This is no rummage sale—or odds and ends—all first-class desirable desks, highly finished, bearing the usual Bronson stamp of elegance and superiority.

If you are in need of a desk, or ever expect to use one, now is the time to buy.

WORKERS' PAGE—Perfumed Orange Groves of California Charm Tourists

Harvesting Golden Oranges.

A LIVELY INDUSTRY, FROM PICKING THE FRUIT FROM THE TREES TO SHIPPING TO MARKET.

it might mould, and the contents of the whole box, as well as all the surrounding boxes become endangered.

What is known as the "standard pack" is universally used. In this system the required number of oranges is placed in the box in precisely the specified manner, simplifying the disposal of the fruit most satisfactorily to packers, shippers and everyone concerned. The accepted sizes of the standard pack are graded in such a way that only an exact number of such sizes will fill a box. Beginning with the smallest, they range as follows: 324's, 288's, 250's, 216's, 176's, 150's, 112's, 96's, 80's, and 64's. The favorite size of all is the 126, it is large and is packed in the easiest possible manner. The 96 and even larger oranges prove more attractive to visitors, but not to connoisseurs

The average girl taking up the work of packing, after a few weeks' practice, is quite able to fill from 60 to 80 boxes in ten hours, the packing-house day. Usually she is paid but 2½ cents per box, and in order to make her $2 for the long, wearisome day's work, she bends every effort to secure forty boxes in the morning and the same number in the afternoon. When the fruit is running into the bins in small sizes, as is often the case during the season of seedlings and St. Michaels, redoubled efforts are required on the part of the packers. This strenuous exertion is, in the end, most exhausting and will eventually break the health of any girl who continues in the work for many seasons together. Men do not seem to mind the work. With their greater strength they seldom fill less than 100 boxes a day; indeed, some have been known to pack 170 in a single day. It is a novel sight to see a fast packer at work. One can scarcely imagine with what rapidity the hands can fold the paper around the orange and place it properly in the box. As each girl finishes a box, she puts one of her numbered tickets upon it and it is carried away to the press, by the lively rustler. There the pressman lifts it upon his machine, forces the protruding fruit down to the level of the top of the box and nails on two small boards for a cover. It is the duty of men packers to carry their own boxes to the press, for which extra service they receive extra pay.

Another rapid workman is the box maker. The average number made per day is about 450, those more skilled with the hatchet easily turn out from 600 to 700 boxes in ten hours. Forty-two nails are required to make a strong box; therefore if a man makes 650 boxes, he drives 27,300 nails, or about forty-five nails a minute, besides handling the shooks. One of the interesting diversions of packing-house life is the box-making contest that always occurs when there arrives in a district a new box maker with a "speedy record." Wagers lost and won at such events sometimes amount to a season's hard-earned pay. The contestants hammer away until "time" is called, when they retire amid loud applause, so heated and nervous that their hands tremble for days after. While all are fast workmen, it is always known that one must be the fastest, and there is no end of boasting and betting until it is determined "which one."

After the packed boxes in the house have been tallied by the foreman, they are trucked out into the refrigerator car and nailed firmly into place by the clever car loader. The car doors are closed, the seal is placed upon them by the railroad company's agent, and the fruit is ready for its long journey across the continent. Three hundred and sixty-two boxes of oranges, (each weighing about seventy-two pounds,) is the number loaded into the car in order to "make weight" for the railroad company, which is 26,064 pounds, or thirteen tons; the company refuses to take the responsibility of any weight exceeding 26,000 pounds to the car.

About all the box material comes from the Pine Box Agency, to which most of our Coast sawmills belong. The magnificent pine forests of the West are rapidly disappearing to supply the heavy demands of this gigantic industry.

ELTHEA EMBODY.

WHAT'S SAID IN SAN FRANCISCO.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 28.—According to the earnest workers in the noble cause of sanitation there are too many scoffers at the heroic efforts to purge us of bubonic plague. The ladies of the California Club have been formally urged to discourage this increasing spirit of levity and any citizen will be sent to Coventry who ejaculates "rats" disrespectfully or guffaws when the plague is mentioned with bated breath. Even a dullard must agree that there should be no levity in a serious campaign conducted by Gen. Blue.

Without a single case of plague or even a suspect and only 1 per cent. of infected rats, we were all feeling gay this week until the Citizens' Health Committee brought us up with a round turn and subdued us with a grim picture of the future. Thousands of blue circulars were distributed containing appears in San Francisco during the winter and reappears with dry and warm weather. The coming of the FLEA cannot be prevented, but we can combat the RAT, the source and the breeder of the plague. It is incumbent on all to wage a relentless war on the RAT." With all due deference to the sacred blue circular and in no spirit of nature faking, I maintain that the FLEA never disappears.

It does not require a Sherlock Holmes to see that the levity about the plague has increased among the liquor dealers ever since it was proposed to raise the saloon license from $500 a year to $1000, in order to get more money to kill rats. The sellers of the demon, rum laugh themselves black in the face and only sober up when told that a reform wave might inundate even San Francisco.

Nothing more is said about the dirty condition of the County Jail—at least by the inmates. The Supervisors have just appropriated $300 to buy a hose for the jail and for fear it may be turned on him, Abe Ruef takes his rations in silence.

Milkman Marty, arrested for selling a liquid with only 4 per cent. of solids when the law requires 20 per cent., was so flagrant an offender that he caused the birth of a formidable organization. It is named the Association for the Improvement of the Milk Supply of San Francisco. The new society is active and as an evidence that it is up to snuff to say nothing of the political pull, it has appointed a committee to watch the police judges. It was quite touching to see how soon after the new organization got in working order that the Milk Dealers' Association offered to coöperate in purifying the anomalous product to be sold this devoted city.

There was really no occasion for the milk and water reformers to appoint a committee to watch our police judges. All four of the jurists can be found at least once a day in their courtrooms and once a month at the treasurer's office. They met with the Mayor and citizens the other day and promised to punish severely offenders against the sanitary laws in all cases where ignorant lawmakers had not left technical loopholes for politically powerful culprits. Certainly no fault can be found with Judge Conlan, who fined a Chinaman $300 for throwing chop suey in a backyard and sentenced an unwise negro fortune teller named Solomon to six months in jail for insulting a female decoy.

Gavin McNab, lawyer and leader, recently watched with interest the unveiling of the Burns statue in Golden Gate Park. McNab was born in Mendocino county, but he is a Scotchman "fu 'a that" and his accent is broad enough to entitle him to a front seat at any Caledonian unveiling. He wastes few words and his epigrams have won primaries. Gazing at the bronze figure of the youthful "Bobbie," he said to me: "Some people object to making this park a residuary mausoleum, but all must admit that the billions of dead ones are entitled to political representation."

A tax collector named Zion the other day assaulted a prosecuting attorney named Duke for alleged leniency toward criminals and the general public was not displeased to learn that both tax eaters landed in jail.

The expulsion of three Stanford students for drunkenness and the general crusade now on against the unlimited sale of spirituous, malt and fermented liquors is arousing the liquor people to action. The worm has turned. The saloon men now point with well-feigned horror to the case of William Hush, a wealthy society leader, as an example of what will happen to a man who drinks an alleged temperance beverage. For a week Hush was missing. A distracted wife and his father's fatal illness were unable to uncover him. At last he came to earth again and explained his temporary extinction by saying that he drank a cup of tea in Oakland and then did not know a thing until he came to a week after in New York.

"Charley" Newman, saloonist, famous for his wifely enchiladas, after deserting us for Oakland, is trying to get a license to sell liquor and tamales at his old location, Kearney and Geary streets. He wishes to get in a twelve-story building and establish a café on every floor. He is willing to pay a $1000 license fee, or any fee, and in applying for the permit in another's name he hopes the police commissioners will forget that he once said: "'Frisco is on the bum; Oakland is good enough for me."

Game laws are well enough on the statute books, but when they interfere with club gastronomy they need revision. The law says that twenty-five quail are enough at one feast, but a little thing like that did not prevent the Athenian Club of Oakland from feeding 110 at one sitting. Game Warden Vogelsang is after it with a sharp stick and the club is quailing behind the portly form of Superior Judge Harry Melvin, once jovial ruler of the Elks. His Honor, who is the life of any social gathering he attends, remembers the feast but pleads ignorance as to what was served, liquid or solid. If the worst comes to the worst, he may declare the law unconstitutional.

Twenty sticks of dynamite in a tin box dug up by the police in Oakland show that whatever else may be said Industrial Independence.

INIQUITOUS LEGISLATION ASKED OF CONGRESS BY ORGANIZED LABOR—HATRED OF INJUNCTIONS.

ABOUT the most active lobby in Washington at the present session of Congress is that of union labor. While employers and corporations are willing to trust their interests to present laws and the disposition of the courts to do exact justice, union labor is seeking, through every possible means to secure the enactment of laws specially framed to promote the position heretofore taken by the unionites, that they are above the ordinary laws regulating human rights. The several reverses that have been recently administered by the courts has not made the representatives of the unions any more modest or disposed to meet employers on equal grounds, but instead a special effort is being made to prevent the courts from issuing injunctions to restrain boycotting and intimidation by organized labor or their friends.

Among the bills now before Congress is one providing that no writ of injunction nor temporary restraining order shall be granted in any case without reasonable previous notice to the adverse party, or his attorney, of the time or place of hearing for the same. Another one provides that no restraining order nor injunction shall be granted by any court of the United States in any case between employer or employés, unless necessary to prevent irreparable injury to property or to a property right of the party making the application, for which injury there is no adequate remedy at law.

The object of these proposed additions to present laws is to either so delay the issuance of injunctions that desired ends may be accomplished by strikers, or to prevent any injunctions being issued. The only purpose of an injunction is to prevent what the courts have decided to be persecution of employers of labor or intimidation of workingmen who prefer to work as they please instead of as some brutal walking delegate may please. There is never anything in an injunction that will oppress an honest workingman, nothing to restrain him from the exercise of all his personal rights. No man, however, has any right to attempt to ruin a former employer or to prevent a fellow workingman from exercising his God-given right to work for whom he may please, and if he may choose to work for $2.50 per day when the union demand is for $3.50 per day it is his equal privileges. The Constitution of the United States, as well as of the individual States, guarantees every man his personal freedom, but the principles of unionism destroy this personal liberty and establish a condition of slavery that at times is more injurious to its members than was negro slavery in the South. The suffering endured by the families of strikers who have thrown up their positions at the demand of union officials whose salaries are paid out of the union's treasury, is a poor offset to the victories union labor has gained by such violence to industrial conditions. Congress has as much right to enact laws penalizing men who seek to disorganize industrial conditions by striking as it has to legislate against the issuance of injunctions as asked for in the above referred matters now in the hands of the Congressional committee on labor matters.

Another vicious law asked of Congress provides that the right to continue the relation of employer and employé or to assume or create such relation with any particular person, or at all, or to carry on business of any particular kind, or at any particular place, or at all, shall be held as property or a property right. This is an evident union attempt to put employers into a position where unionites can do them a business injury if they assume to make an agreement with workingmen to the disadvantage of union demands. The unwillingness of labor unions to become incorporated so that they may become responsible for their actions is in sad contrast with this union attempt to get Congress to enact a law that will enable unionites to harass every employer who may seek to run an open shop in defiance of labor unionism.

Another curious demand of Congress provides that the agreement between persons concerning the terms or conditions of employment, or concerning any act or thing to be done or not to be done with reference to a labor dispute shall constitute a conspiracy or other criminal offense or be punished or presented as such. In other words if an employer requires any agreement from his employés with reference to a labor dispute it will become a case of conspiracy. Unionites may, however, conspire as much as they may please for the destruction of the same employer's business.

If the members of Congress could all be relied upon to be as discriminative in the enactment of legislation as the courts must be in construing the same there would be no necessity for employers of labor to keep watch of such proposed labor legislation, but the intimidation of organized labor is so openly exercised, that the people who will be affected adversely by the enactment of either of these proposed measures should see to it that nothing goes by default.

Loyal Unionists Rebuked.

When the agitation was on for the printing pressmen of the country to violate the agreement signed by the officers of the international union regarding the time for the eight-hour day to go into effect, the members of locals No. 6 and No. 43 of St. Louis refused to vote in favor of violation of the agreement. The result has been the revocation of the charters of each of these unions by George Berry, president of the International Printing Pressman's and Assistants' Union. The members of Web Pressman's Union No. 2 of the same city are threatened with also being turned out in the cold unless they reconsider their previous action when they decided to stand by the agreement made with their employers. The situation in St. Louis emphasizes what has been repeatedly said in these columns that the officers of the international unions as well as many minor officers are continually seeking some opportunity to stir up trouble as proof that they are doing something to earn their salaries. The idea rarely seems to be entertained that a long period of peace from labor disputes would do the laboring people more real good than the past continuous performance in favor of shorter hours and higher pay.

Strike That Cost Millions.

Some interesting figures relative to the financing of the eight-hour strike of the Typographical Union are contained in the recent report prepared for submission to the officers of the international union. Figures covering the eight-hour controversy all over the jurisdiction of the International Typographical Union are stupendous. In one year, from June 1, 1906, to May 31, 1907, the enormous sum of $1,642,441.94 uted $1,804,950.67 to their international treasury. In two cities where the fight was particularly fierce large amounts were spent. In Philadelphia more than $130,000 was used in twelve months, and in Detroit an even larger sum was expended in a like period.

In the city of Minneapolis during a period of twenty-three months, upwards of $180,000 was paid out for strike benefits and expenses incident to the controversy.

Members of the Minneapolis local paid in assessments in the twenty-three months more than $40,000, the union printers employed by The Journal alone contributing about $11,000. The average membership in the time stated was 336, a part of whom were on strike, so the assessments on the members employed, it will readily be seen, were high. A few men paid close to $250 in each of the two years; others all the way from $100 to $200 for the same time. On an assessment basis the union printers are now contributing to their local at an average rate of $35 a year.

Union membership is certainly expensive, and if the members would sit down and figure a little they would soon discover that it will take a good while under the proposed "improved" conditions to overcome the amount of assessments they have paid at the behest of union agitators.

Convict Labor Question.

Through the efforts of organized labor the manufacture of cigars in the Marquette (Mich.) prison is to be abolished. The contract expired on the first of the year, but the contractors have been given four months' time in which to wind up their business. The convicts who have been making cigars will, it is said, begin the manufacture of overalls. This will bring on a controversy with the garment workers, who will undoubtedly take up the fight against the convicts being put to making overalls. There were only 100 convicts engaged in making cigars, but it is said this number will be doubled in the overall factory in the prison.

As convicts never produce anywhere near as much as outside labor this opposition by organized labor is puerile. The attempt to provide employment for convicts is a humanitarian movement and the small revenue obtained reduces by so much the amount of money that has to be raised by taxation for the support of prisoners. If taxpayers would wake up about such matters instead of allowing irresponsible union laborites to increase their taxes they would be doing not only the proper thing for themselves but for the men who more frequently than otherwise are serving long sentences in prison because of inherited tendencies to crime.

Another Labor Law Flaw.

A curious situation has arisen in Congress with reference to the law regulating the hours of service for employés on interstate railroads, which was passed last spring and was signed March 4, 1907. The act contained the provision that it should go into effect at the end of one year, so that it will be practically in operation on the fourth of next month. Investigation which has been carried on by some legislators points to the certain conclusion that this act will prove to be unconstitutional on the same grounds which induced the Supreme Court to declare against the employers' liability act some weeks ago.

The point is made that it includes all of the employés of the railroads subject to its provisions, irrespective of the question whether they are exclusively engaged in service pertaining to interstate transportation or not. The Supreme Court found that the employers' liability act could not be regarded as constitutional, because it is in a similar manner attempted to bring under its control all employés, no matter whether they were directly engaged in the actual conduct of interstate transportation or not.

MORE CITRUS FRUIT GROVES.

Large Areas Planted to Oranges and Lemons and Still Demand Exceeds California Supply.

Ranchmen throughout the Southwest are awakening to the fact that many years must elapse before the supply of American oranges and lemons will be enough to fill the demand without importation, and for that reason several large planting of trees are being made. Nearly 500 acres of Valencias are being set at Riverside, a large number of trees is being placed at Arlington Heights, at Hagrove a big tract is being planted in lemons, while in Ventura county several hundred acres have been devoted to this citrus fruit.

It is noteworthy that the navel orange is not receiving as much attention as formerly. This is explained by the preponderance of that variety already growing, and by the fact that Valencias bring greater profits. The latter last year averaged from $2.50 to $3.50 a box, while the navel brought only from $1.50 to $2.50.

Noticeable is the heavy increase in the production of lemons. Less than three years ago they were a loss on account of the high freight rates to the East, which made it impossible to ship at an advantage. Some ranchers dug out their lemon trees and planted oranges. During the last two seasons this has changed. The railroads have made an equable rate, and the shipper is meeting with a fair share of success in getting his product to market and realizing a sufficient margin of profit to pay for the work and years of waiting for the fruit trees to bear.

The outlook for the California lemon is better than ever before. The fruit arrives in the eastern markets before that from Sicily, its only real competitor, which last year sent at least 1,500,000 boxes to the United States. From this State only about 1,000,000 boxes are handled.

This year California Fruit Growers' Exchange estimates the output from the State will be 2,000,000 boxes. The Sicilian crop, although as large as formerly, has had a setback on account of unfavorable weather, which has caused inferior fruit. The lemon of the Southwest is in splendid condition, and shows no sign of deteriorating. So far this year, 1366 carloads have been shipped East. Last year, at the corresponding period, only 900 had been sent out. Prices are firm, and average $2 in New York.

Tangerines are moving regularly, but not in quantities. The demand is not large. There is a steady and increased call for grape fruit, and the eastern price on fancy stock remains above $3 a box for seedless.

The Simple-Minded Malay.

The Malay loathes work, and only desires to live like a gentleman and be happy. This Malay is a poet without poetry, a devout man who learns the Koran by heart, without understanding the Arabic tongue in which it is recited. Even his roads—just like his life—lead nowhere, and stop short at the jungle-edge.

With this people a little kindness brings the eager flow of a child's is part of the night. In the clearing of the jungles there are little graves whose mounds show clear. On each there is a tiny wooden sign. For the sons it is of one shape, for the daughters, of another. No name is there. In the hearts of the living the dead live on. And death being of the night, it is in darkness that spirts are freed; so when the sun has sunk, these child-folk walk hand-in-hand out of fear for the Hantu.

Even now, while I am writing, in far-away Johore the light in the sky is dying. Gallant Malay lads are passing along the road. Trom-pah, trom-pah—they live for love and sunsets. Kisses with them are not to be weig against silver, nor estates against treasures of the heart. Can it re be that there is no room left in this wide, wide world for a face dreamers and wondrous wistful l ers?—[Pall Mall Gazette.

B. F. Yoakum, head of the R Island Railroad lines, says there is one position for which he would g up his present work and that is to Governor of Texas, so that he co develop the State. He said he c bring five million people to Texas four years, if he were Governor of State.

Having Its Effect

The strong stand taken by the Merchant Tailors' Ass'n, and ably backed by the Merchants and Manufacturers Ass'n. to conduct their own business irrespective of the views or dictations of the walking delegate is bearing fruit.

Of late several of the ex-employees have applied to be reinstated, and among them are some who from the first listened to the commands of the walking delegate--to throw up their positions and demand of their employers "Closed Shop."

Today the members of the Merchant Tailors Ass'n are in a better position to execute orders promptly and efficiently than ever before. They have their own workshops and employ only men of tried ability and experience and pay them accordingly.

Although the public generally have shown by their patronage and encouragement that they realize the far-reaching results of this struggle for freedom, we still ask your hearty co-operation to remember that business given to members of the Merchant Tailors Ass'n. helps the cause and tends to discourage the efforts of the walking delegate to stir up dissension and unsettled business conditions.

Brent's--the Great Credit House

And Its Original Credit System--Credit Costs You Just What It Costs

"BRENT'S" is "The Great Credit House," because our credit system is entirely different from the "installment" system. Our credit system is based on strictly "cash" prices. Our prices are all in plain figures for spot cash—our expense of keeping a credit account is 10 per cent. On credit we add 10 per cent. to our spot cash prices. Everybody knows they pay more when they buy anything on credit. The question is, what is a fair price for credit? We know you would rather trade where you know exactly how much you pay for credit than to take chances. "Brent's" is the originator of this credit system. Our credit system is liberal. We do not need the money. Our prices are always lower because we always are prepared to buy any quantity of merchandise that is offered below the market price. We pass this saving on to

THE Public.

As everybody knows, the high rents in Los Angeles are altogether out of tion to the volume of retail business. For ason, the ordinary shoe store is comto make an immense profit. Realizing ondition, we concluded to experiment "New Idea Shoe Store" in an office , where a rent of a dollar a day reur expense to a minimum. This, with ccounts of 25 per cent. on sample lines, bled us to give extraordinary shoe vale we have demonstrated that the pubreciates bargains. Our business has steadily from the start, and we have s of regular customers. Special values Monday, all styles and sizes for men, and children. SOCIETY MEETINGS—

LIFE—

Julian MacRae, Initiate—the Life-giving One—is now dispensing The New Life at his home, 32 St. James Park, Los Angeles, Cal. Those seeking the aid of an adept-master will do well to avail themselves of this opportunity, as preparations are being made to visit London, England, to confer with the Scientists there.

OBSESSION.

For the period until July 24 special attention will be given the matter of obsession—the mother-cause of human affliction—with the view of liberating a few souls from entrancement and making possible a more perfect incarnation.

HAPPINESS

Is not secured by health, wealth, success or glory, but by freedom from obsessing evils and UNION in the eternal God-life.

PERSONAL—
PROF. C. IRVIN ALTHOUSE,
305½ S. SPRING ST., near Third.
THE CELEBRATED RELIABLE PALMIST AND ASTROLOGER.

A resident of Los Angeles for 24 years, and whose work is known throughout this entire land, having made a life study of PALMISTRY AND ASTROLOGY, has convinced hundreds of the best intellects and persons in all walks of life that his remarkable readings and PREDICTIONS FOR FUTURE EVENTS in their lives are unparalleled.

THE PALM shows diseases, love, marriage, divorce, deaths, money, investments, changes, talents, travels, etc., etc., and many other things which cannot be mentioned here.

WITH EACH PALM READING THERE IS ALSO AN ASTROLOGICAL READING.

PROF. ALTHOUSE stands at the very head of the profession, having read more celebrated people than any other reader. His readings, too, must in no wise be classed with those of any other reader now operating in this part of the country, and his skilled work has no comparison with theirs whatsoever."

MME. SCHUMANN-HEINK says: "I was greatly surprised to find how many of your warnings were well founded, and having been prepared for the same, I was not taken unawares. YOUR WARNING regarding an oncoming illness also PROVED A FACT, as not more than ten days later I was at home with a severe attack of la grippe. YOUR READING WAS MOST MARVELOUS."

PAPINTA, actress, writes and says: "Everything has turned out just as you predicted when reading my hand and horoscope. YOU ARE WONDERFUL, and I cannot express myself of what I think about your WONDERFUL TRUE READINGS."

DR. ALEX. J. M'IVOR-TYNDALL, says: "Your work along the lines of Astrology and Palmistry is highly spoken of on all sides."

FREDERICK WARDE says: "Your reading was most satisfactory. Your knowledge and skill in palmistry is REMARKABLE and gave me a much more exalted idea of that science than I have hitherto entertained."

LOUIS JAMES, actor, says: "I wish to say that your reading was ENTIRELY SATISFACTORY." PAUL GILMORE, actor, says: "I want to express to you my keen appreciation of your reading. It is by far the most scientific I have ever had." JULIET CROSBY, actress, says: "Prof. Althouse has given me a most helpful, complete and satisfactory reading." Prof. Althouse also read E. H. Sothern, Admiral Schley, Senator Clark, ex-Gov. Pardee, David Starr Jordan, Gen. Chaffee, Baron Rothschild, Joaquin Miller, Ysaye, Sousa, Edison, Capt. Hobson, Caruso, Josef Hofmann, Huntington, Lillian Nordica, Calve, Julia Marlowe, Modjeska, Sembrich, Gadski, Jefferson, Nat Goodwin, Maxine Elliott, Mlle. de Lussan, Florence Roberts, Violet Dale, Fritzi Scheff, James Powers, Fritz Kreisler, Mary Mannering, and hundreds of others. These names of NOTED people are merely given because they are PUBLIC persons. It indicates the class of people being read by PROF. ALTHOUSE, together with hundreds of the very best people of Los Angeles—WITH WHOM ALL HIS BUSINESS IS STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL IN EVERY PARTICULAR.

Intelligent, HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED—those capable of appreciating the superior qualities of a fine reader.

ASTROLOGY AND THE HOROSCOPE.

PROF. ALTHOUSE is also an experienced practitioner in the science of Modern ASTROLOGY, by which he has made many REMARKABLE PREDICTIONS. The HOROSCOPE IS DECIDEDLY A GUIDE IN LIFE, showing remarkable things when properly cast for YOU INDIVIDUALLY, from the position of the planets at YOUR BIRTH. It indicates the condition of health, or disease; tells all about love—whom to marry and when—describing the marriage partner; shows deaths, divorce; tells about children, speculation, the best time to invest or to push affairs and when to hold on to what has been gained; your talents; your environment; when and where to travel; what to seek and what to avoid; when one will be in danger, of illness, accidents, death, losses, troubles; also of your good periods, coming—giving dates of these events for the future; IN FACT, TELLS EVERYTHING ABOUT ONE'S SELF WORTH KNOWING, being in truth, one of the best investments the world offers. YOUR HOROSCOPE is also a key to the character of OTHERS, and in this respect can be of the utmost use to you.

PROF. ALTHOUSE'S wonderful proficiency in hand reading and casting of horoscopes has brought him a large and successful practice. The most private confidences are reposed in him, and his advice is sought in the most difficult and critical circumstances.

PERSONAL—

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, Eng., can be consulted at

523 S. SPRING ST. (Suite 17.)

by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS, AND SCIENTIFIC HAND-READINGS FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn, in his investigations along psychological lines, that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper, can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject's name, age, etc., AFTER HE HAS HIMSELF WRITTEN THAT INFORMATION.

PALMISTRY, HONESTLY PRACTICED, WILL NOT tell you your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in every-day life.

Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health, marriage and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill-luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

—HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.
(Daily and evenings; Sundays, 2 to 5.)

WANTED—500 MEN WHO LOVE THEIR FAMILIES
to join our next weekly excursion,
WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 4, 11:30.
Personally conducted, Arcade Depot, Southern Pacific R.R. Special excursion rates. Arrangements made at our office. Come in and join our party for the EMPIRE RANCH TRIP.

You are not treating the wife and children right if you use up the few hundreds you have saved looking for a job, and when you secure one, it is the same old grind. This money will pay for the first payment on a nice farm. The balance the farm will pay for, besides supporting the family, if you put forth the same effort you did working for others. It is up to you—you alone are to blame if you continue in the same old way. Every man's opportunities are what he makes them. We can only show the way—you must think and act for yourself. $60 an acre. Easy payments to actual settlers.

UNITED BROKERAGE COMPANY—
$10,000 CASH, BALANCE $7000 ON AGREEABLE TERMS. On February 5, we had placed with us, by client wishing to retire on account of health and age, a $25,000 interest in established manufacturing business, at sacrifice price of $20,000. Gentleman unexpectedly died same evening. Interest being an active one needing management, estate has asked us to offer same at figure of $17,000. Condition of business is A1; (an expert audit account at hand,) and is open to exhaustive investigation. Has monopoly in its line, and has from the beginning been on paying basis, declaring in its first year, (above the cost of installing branch in east,) dividend of 10 per cent. Business has growing field, and without its having been pushed properly, has been paying well. Needs wideawake, active management, (executive ability,) to double its gross business. A finer opportunity not open, and this will only be for few days, after which time paid management will be placed in charge, and investment taken off the market. If you doubt the values of this, look it up, and be convinced. A dozen big firms of this city will express their opinion of the valuable future of this concern. Your immediate attention asked. Probably not advertised again. UNITED BROKERAGE CO., 326-28 L. A. Trust Bldg., Second and Spring. 1

MEXICO—
By July 4, the Cananea, Rio Yaqui and Pacific will reach Culiacan, the capital of Sinaloa. This is scheduled to be a day of rejoicing, for it signifies a new era for the Mexican Pacific States. The opening up of the vast area of rich virgin soil to agriculture and horticulture, along the route of this railroad, means the development of a new country and increase of commerce. This, with the Pacific Ocean, opens up the markets for native produce to the continental as well as oriental trade. Bananas, mangoes, papayos, pineapples, guavas, which heretofore have been shut out of the Southern California markets for lack of transportation, will now find easy method to enter into a competitive field with Cuban and South American trade. We have lands along and near this railroad through Sonora, Sinaloa, Tepic and Jalisco, at very low prices. In Sinaloa we have tracts of from 5000 to 100,000 acres at $3 per acre. We also have an extensive timber forest of select hardwood in the State of Guerrero for $2 per acre. In the tropics, on the Tehuantepec road, we have an excellent hacienda, also, for $3 per acre. Call and will be pleased to inform you.

LIVE STOCK FOR SALE—
Poultry, Birds, Dogs, Etc.

FOR SALE—IT STANDS TO REASON THAT a man that manufactures all of his own incubators, brooders, lamps, heaters, and every piece of metal work that goes into an incubator or brooder can make the lowest price. Investigation will prove that we can and we do. If dollars are worth anything to you, investigate here before you buy, it pays.

C. Coles, expert White Rock man of Gardena, selected the "Success" incubator, 340-egg size; Mrs. W. H. Obear, Fullerton, selected the 612-egg size; F. W. Rea, Monrovia, bought a 612-egg size; Bradly Hardy, Hynes, Cal., bought a 612-egg size; Mr. C. Griffith bought a 612-egg size for his poultry farm, Santa Fe and Soto sts.; Judge Thomas Carroll, Rivera, buys another "Success;" H. E. Keyer, Compton, buys a "Success;" J. C. Graves of 4322 Gordon st., city, buys a "Success;" L. E. Kent, Poway, buys a "Success;" C. Mensenheimer, Monrovia, buys a "Success;" Dr. T. Lewis, city, 3220 Darwin, buys a "Success;" Trimlett & Neylor's Poultry Farm, Artesia, buys six of the "Success;" W. A. Galer, Long Beach, buys a "Success;" J. A. Dillard, 1320 E. 54th, buys a "Success;" Mrs. D. T. Hill, 2403 S. Grand, buys a "Success;" J. P. Nau, Seal Gardens, buys two "Success;" C. Barraque, Lemon, Cal., buys a "Success;" C. Meyer, San Bernardino, buys two "Success."

We could name fifty more that have bought these machines recently. To see them is to buy. The price and the machine do the business. Come and see it; other dealers do not sell the "SUCCESS" incubators nor brag on them. McCLANAHAN, 711 S. Main. F1635, Main 5651. 1

FOR SALE — BABY CHICKS, THOROUGHBREDS.

Fancy stock for the price of the ordinary kind. You will be pleased with the chick you buy here for the reason that we are determined to have every purchase you make a satisfactory one; our customers demand good service and we are here to see that they get it. We rectify any mistake as soon as our attention is called to the error. It is almost impossible to keep our supply of baby chicks up to the needs of an eager public, so to be certain of your chick it is wisdom to have them reserved for you. You can phone us Sunset Main 4964 and we will hold them for that day. To insure your supply of laying pullets next winter you should buy now. These are the ones that produce the money-making egg machines for next season.

Monday we hope to have a full supply of White Leghorns, Barred Rocks, Rhode Island Reds, Wyandottes and a lot of very fine Buff Leghorns. These are not the Buff Leghorns you see every day, but are from a strain laid from winners for their size and laying qualities and 15c is cheap for this class of stock. Our White Leghorns are from large birds and at 10c each are a bargain.

Our line of poultry supplies and chick feed is full, containing all that is good and reliable; we do not handle everything under the label of chick food, but what we do, we can safely recommend. Did you ever use Acquatonic in your poultry yard? It produces marvelous results; only 25c a can. F. GILMAN TAYLOR, 803 S. Main st. 1

CARS FOR SALE.

FOR SALE—Handsome Durracq French touring car. This car is a brand-new car and has only been driven from the depot to the garage and will sell for $2000 less than car can be bought for in New York City, in order to move it quickly. This is one of the best cars that is in the State of California, and we consider this one of the best bargains ever offered in this city. An examination of this car will convince you that we are right. The car is right and the price is right, and must be sold, as we need the money.

We have on hand two slightly used Knox cars, having been used for demonstrating only. They are practically as good as brand-new cars, but will sell them at a greatly reduced price on account of them being slightly soiled, to close out the affairs of the firm who formerly handled this car. These cars are first-class in every respect, and the man who is looking for a good car at little money, this is his chance. Will take part cash and the balance on time to reliable parties, as they must be sold at once.

We have just had sent us by the former agent of the Queen Touring Car Company for Southern California, two fine four-cylinder Queen cars, fully equipped, in elegant condition, that we are offering at a greatly reduced price in order to close out the last two cars that they had on their floor, as the agent has left the city and has gone out of the automobile game. We have all the Queen parts for sale, and can take care of you on anything you may want in this line.

We have a dandy little 4-cylinder Ford runabout with Turtle Back and detachable tonneau, that we are offering at a very attractive price. This little car is in fine running order and has plenty of power. This is a dandy poor man's car. The price is right. Come and see it.

We have also a dandy little Maxwell runabout that we can make you a very attractive price on.

We have to offer for the next few days, one of those fine Thomas Flyers that you read so much about in the papers of today. This is a seven-passenger car, fully equipped with lamps, top, Gabriel horn, tire holders, etc. This car is practically a brand-new car, having been driven about 2000 miles, and is in perfect condition in every respect. The owner is going East and will sacrifice this car to move it in the next few days. Now if you are looking for a big car and a big buy, this is the chance of your lifetime. We got the car. Come in and make us an offer. Money is what talks. This car must be sold within the next three days.

We have an '08 Tourist, with tonneau and turtle back, for sale at a snap. This is an '08 car, not '07, and is new, having been used only about two weeks, and must be sold. This is a fine buy, and we can save you big money on this car. Come quick, as this will not last long at the price we offer it at.

We also have four other second-hand Tourist cars in fine running order and first-class condition. They are also good buys and must be sold this week.

We have one of those dandy '06 White Steamers, in perfect running order, fully equipped with lamps, shock absorbers, extra tires, etc. This car has been slightly used by private family and has had the best of care, and to move this car quickly we will make you a very attractive price. If you are looking for a White Steamer, we consider this one of the best buys in the city. Car runs like new and looks like new and is as good as new. Come in and see it.

Lozier Roadster, 40-45 horse power. This is the finest gentleman's roadster in the city, large handsome car, fully equipped. This is one of the bargains you read about, but seldom see; come in and see it; we have it.

We have one of those dandy little Cadillac runabouts, little used. This is a big snap; get busy if you know a good thing when you see it.

We have the finest slightly used Pope-Waverley electric in the city. Batteries warranted. This is a stylish ladies' car for city use and must be sold at a great sacrifice. This is your chance; come and be quick.

High-power Wayne runabout. This is a fine little car in good condition; has been run less than 300 miles. The price is right.

Fine Baby Reo. This little car is in fine shape, used but a short time, and must be sold at once.

Aerocar, gentleman's roadster. Come and make us an offer; must sell quick.

Dolson touring car, just like new; top, 5 lamps; run less than 300 miles. This is a fine car. Will sell at a big bargain; come quick.

Big buy in Thomas Flyer. This car is fully equipped for road work; 3 large searchlights, top, pump to pump tire by power. This is the biggest buy in second-hand car in town and must sell quick.

Good second-hand Premier 4-cylinder car, in perfect repair and running order, a good car for any one not wanting a big car. This is a good hill climber and will be sold at a very low price to move quick; need the money.

We have for sale a fine Peerless touring car; top, speedometer, glass front, extra tire and fully equipped; car bought late last year, '07, in fine condition; car has had best of care. Must be sold this week.

We have an '07 four-cylinder Wayne roadster, in excellent condition. Fully equipped and guaranteed. This roadster has been run less than 3000 miles, and looks and is as good as new. If you are looking for a high-grade roadster, come in and see us on this car.

We have to offer for the next few days, one of those 40-horse-power Thomas Detroit touring cars, in first-class running condition, with full equipment. This is an '07 machine and is fully guaranteed.

Good second-hand Locomobile, Limousine, '07 model. This car is fully equipped and has just been repainted. This car is in excellent condition, and is a big bargain.

We also have on hand one model K Winton. This car is in splendid condition, fully equipped and a big bargain. If you are looking for a cheap high-grade car, come in and let us demonstrate this to you.

We have just received a brand-new Dragon touring car, '07 model. This is not a slightly used, but new car, and we are selling it at a price that is right. Come and see it.

We also have two Rambler cars; one an '06 2-cylinder and the other an '07 4-cylinder. Both of these cars are in good condition, and will sell cheap for cash.

We have a very large list of second-hand runabouts and touring cars that we could fill this paper full of in describing. If you are interested in either a touring car or runabout, it will pay you, and we can save you big money by calling and seeing the large list of cars that we have to offer. Our cars are the best and our prices cannot be beaten on the Coast. We are the Headquarters for slightly used cars of every description, and we will not be undersold.

Again Asks for Injuncti Against Harriman.

Seeks New Adjudication Old Controversy.

Final Desperate Effort Ma by His Attorney.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive D patch.] Stuyvesant Fish, through attorney, Henry W. Lehman, mad final desperate effort this afternoon block E. H. Harriman and prevent voting of the 281,231 shares of conte Illinois Central Railroad stock at directors' meeting Monday.

Just before the closing of the co this afternoon, Mr. Lehman, as ow of ten shares of capital stock of Illinois Central Railroad, filed a suit an injunction to enjoin the voting the stock. The suit, wich is exactly si lar to the one by Stuyvesant Fish fore Judge Ball and denied by t jurist, was filed in the Superior Cou in which Judge Ball is one of judges.

E. H. Harriman and thirty-six ot persons in whose names the 281 shares in question stand, are made fendants in the suit, together with Union Pacific Railroad and the R road Securities Company.

The suit is a complete surprise. If injunction is granted it will, of cour mean that the 281,231 shares of sto that Judge Ball decided could be vot will have to be side tracked. A n adjudication of the controversy is quested by the plaintiff.

The bill which is quite lengthy se the following:

"That the Union Pacific Railro Company may be decreed to have right, power or authority to own 2 231 shares of stock of the Illinois C tral Railroad Company or any one more of said shares, and that claimed or pretended ownership of shares or of any one or more of th by said company may be decreed to illegal, ultra vires, and null and void.

"That the Union Pacific Railroad Co pany may be decreed to have no rig power or authority to own all the sto of said Railroad Securities Compa or any one or more of the shares stock of the said company, and th the claimed or pretended ownership said shares may be decreed to be illegal, ultra vires, null and void.

"That the Union Pacific Railro Company may be decreed to have right to vote 281,231 shares of the sto of the Illinois Central Railroad Co pany at the meeting of the stockho ers of the railroad company, to held March 2, or at any adjournme thereof or at any other meeting of t stockholders of said company, and th any attempt to vote the same at s meeting or at any adjournment ther of, or at any other meeting of stockholders of said company may declared to be illegal.

'That the Illinois Central Railro Company may be, by the decree of th court, perpetually enjoined and strained from permitting the Uni Pacific Railroad Company and t Railroad Securities Company to vo any one or more of said 281,231 shar of stock of the Illinois Central Ra road Company, at the meeting to held on March 2, or any adjournme thereof, either by any officer of t said Union Pacific Railroad Compa or of the Railroad Securities Compa or by any of ots attorneys, solicito agents, employés or representatives, by its or their proxies.

"That the ownership and holding the stock of said Illinois Centr Railroad Company by the said Uni Pacific Railroad Company, or by a Railroad Securities Company, or b any other corporation or corporatio either in its own name or names, in the name or names of any pers or persons for them or for any them, may be decreed to be ille ultra vires, null and void."

VERDICT IS A SURPRISE.

Guilt Is Admitted, but She Is Acquitted.

Jury Decides Female Bomb Thrower not Guilty.

Had Attempted to Kill Governor of Warsaw.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

VIENNA, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Young and beautiful Wanda Dobrodzicka, the bride of the painter, was acquitted today of an attempt to assassinate the Governor of Warsaw, though she said calmly in court that she threw a bomb at his carriage, and expected to be either blown to pieces herself or arrested and hanged.

Women who filled the courtroom threw quantities of flowers at her when the verdict of acquittal was announced.

The result of the trial was a great surprise in view of the circumstances and the frank acknowledgment of guilt which the fair revolutionist made. The crowds in court cheered judge, jury and the acquitted woman, who stood with her husband and father, receiving congratulations in the midst of a pile of nosegays.

DAUGHTER OF A PATRIOT.

Wanda's father was a rebel of 1863 who spent five years of his life in exile in Siberia. He taught the daughter his principles, and after she had finished a very careful education at the age of 17, as a daughter of Poland, she felt it her duty to aid in freeing her people from the yoke of Russian absolutism, and she joined the revolutionary organization.

Several futile attempts had been made against the life of Skallen, the Governor of Warsaw, who had used all his efforts against the organizations. Wanda and a friend whom she has not revealed, accepted an assignment to destroy him as he drove through a certain street.

Wanda, then 20 years old, stood on the balcony, a bomb concealed in the folds of her skirt, and her woman friend in an adjoining window. As the carriage passed she threw her missile, aiming at the horses. No explosion followed.

Seizing a second bomb, Wanda hurled it full at the carriage. Smoke and fire appeared when the missile struck, but there was no loud report, and the carriage proceeded on its way. There had been a mistake made, and the packets of bombs had been transposed. The deadly bombs had been left and the harmless ones, manufactured to deceive the police in whose hands it was intended they should fall, had been used.

ADMITS ALLEGATIONS.

At the trial she admitted all the allegations set forth in the indictment, but would not plead guilty, saying it was no crime in her eyes to remove a bad man. When questioned as to how she expected her attempt at murder would end she replied with perfect composure:

"We thought we should either perish in the explosion or be caught, examined and hanged, as so many have been treated before us."

She was asked if she had no scruples or thought of the other persons beside the Governor, who might lose their lives or limbs in the explosion.

"No," she answered, "in the street where I made the attempt nobody lives except some aristocrats, and the Governor was surrounded by Cossacks. All these deserve no better fate."

"Does not your religion teach you, 'Thou shalt not kill?'" asked the judge.

"Oh, no," was Wanda's reply: "Christ said: 'The time will come when I shall sell my cloak and buy me a sword.'"

The jury withdrew for a quarter of an hour, and returned a verdict of not guilty.

POWERFUL BASE AT MANILA.

Russia's Leading Paper Says American Plan Will Insure Manchurian Open Door.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 29.—The Novoe Vremya today devotes one of its leading articles to the American plans for the fortification of Manila, which, it believes, will convert Cavite into the most powerful naval base on the Pacific, and enable the United States to insist upon an actual as well as a theoretical realization of the open door in Manchuria.

Continuing, the paper says the denial of the report that it is the present intentions of President Roosevelt to raise this question merely exemplifies its conviction that "soft words are a corrolary to the policy of the big stick.

"When the Manila works are completed, the doors of Manchuria will fly open to America's 'Open seasame.'"

California Girls at Court.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—The second court of the season held by King Edward and Queen Alexandra at Buckingham Palace tonight was even more brilliant than that of a forthnight ago. Miss Jane T. Peck and Mrs. Miller Graham of California were presented.

Reduction in Discount Rate.

BERLIN, Feb. 29.—A reduction in the rate of discount of the Imperial Bank of Germany to 5 per cent. is regarded as probable for next Tuesday. This will depend, however, upon the final returns for the month, which are expected to be favorable. The general feeling about the monetary situation is one of growing confidence.

CONFUSION IN NAMES.

Lenke and Richardson Were Partners in Coal Concern Now Extinct; Not in Bankruptcy.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29.—Through a misunderstanding and a confusion of names it was reported yesterday that August Lenke and O. S. Richardson, partners in the Richardson Coal Company, had filed petitions in bankruptcy.

Lenke and Richardson were partners in the firm of O. S. Richardson & Co., which has been out of business for nearly three years.

The O. S. Richardson Coal Company is entirely a different corporation, and is not directly or indirectly affected by any proceedings against either Lenke, Richardson or the old partnership of the firm of O. S. Richardson & Co.

"Increase Your Income $2000 A Year"

By buying a 40-acre farm where you can have a "Twelve Months' Growing Season."

Where?

At Corcoran, half way between Los Angeles and San Francisco, where the climate is nearly perfect—where the water question is solved by doing your own irrigation from your own Artesian wells.

Where crops can be raised the year around—where the soil is practically inexhaustible.

For the first time the large ranches of this section have been cut up into small tracts, which can be secured at $100 an acre, on easy terms.

Where one acre will yield a good living—ten acres will make you well-to-do, and twenty to forty acres will make you wealthy.

Where vegetables of every kind yield immense crops.

Where a crop of Alfalfa can be raised every forty or sixty days the year around.

Where it's to your interest, if you wish to improve your condition, to investigate our Corcoran land now.

Where in three months you won't be able to secure any of this land.

Call or send for copy of "Profitable Realty," our monthly magazine, which gives photographs and full information concerning this wonderful country.

Or better still, come in and arrange with us to take you there. That's the best way—seeing is believing.

PERFECT MANHOOD

Weakness---Its Cause and Cure

DR. HARRISON
The Leading Specialist

Almost every case of weakness is due directly or indirectly to some abnormal local condition existing at some vital point in the pelvic region. The common causes of weakness are, in the first place, a congested, inflamed or enlarged prostate gland; in the second place, uncured cases of contracted disorders; in the third place, stricture; in the fourth place, varicocele, and in the fifth place, irritation or hyperesthesia of the veru montanum. All these conditions may, of course, be aggravated by excesses and abuses, and complicated by general debility not neurasthenia.

Over ten years ago (as reference to the columns of The Los Angeles Times of that period will prove) we first elaborated and subsequently demonstrated the truth of these theories. Since that time we have cured completely hundreds of the most stubborn cases that ever baffled medical science. Each succeeding year has witnessed still further improvements in our method of treatment and has been marked by still greater triumphs in the completeness and permanency of the cures.

The old adage reads: "Imitation is the sincerest form of flattery," and it is positively amusing to notice how nonchalantly some physicians who have only been practicing in Los Angeles a couple of years calmly appropriate our theories and our style of advertising. The time to consult us is now. Don't wait until you have wasted time and money on ineffectual treatment, administered by inexperienced men, who make extra charges for medicines and seek to foist on an unsuspecting public worthless appliances.

We do not claim to have a monopoly of all the virtue, wisdom and goodness in the world, nor do we claim to work miracles, but WE DO CLAIM THAT SIXTEEN YEARS OF UNPARALLELED SUCCESS AS SPECIALISTS FOR MEN ONLY, RIGHT HERE IN LOS ANGELES, COUPLED WITH THE FACT THAT MANY OF THE LEADING BUSINESS MEN IN THE CITY WILL VOUCH FOR OUR CHARACTER AND ABILITY, STAMPS OUR WORK AS LEGITIMATE IN EVERY PARTICULAR AND FURNISHES EXCELLENT REASONS WHY AILING MEN SHOULD CONSULT US IN PREFERENCE TO OTHER SPECIALISTS LESS WIDELY AND LESS FAVORABLY KNOWN.

Varicocele

One man in every four has some degree of varicocele; three-fourths of all cases of varicocele have been up against doctors who advertise to cure without an operation, which is an absolute impossibility. We have been curing varicocele in Los Angeles for sixteen years, and can show business men here in the city by the score who will be more than glad to tell any man who is afflicted with varicocele all about their experience with our certain and absolute cure by our strictly painless operation. Now, we wish to ask any man who has varicocele if he would like to be cured. If so, will he go to a specialist who will introduce him to any number of first-class leading business men here in the city who have been cured, or will he hand over his money to a would-be specialist who carries a bombastic advertisement saying he can cure without operation, and who cannot show a single reliable man whom he has cured? Read this over again and think about it.

Specific Blood Poison

Our treatment for this affection is thoroughly scientific and curative, and precisely similar to that in vogue at the famous Hot Springs of Arkansas. Mistakes in diagnosis are frequently made, and it is of the utmost importance that the unfortunate victim of this malady treat with a reputable and skillful specialist.

Each case of specific blood poison coming to us for examination is carefully and thoroughly examined and the exact nature of the disease and its probable duration patiently explained. We never try to scare our patients, but extend to each and all our sympathetic aid and advice, and do all in our power to effect a speedy and permanent cure.

Contracted Disorders

Of all the diseases peculiar to men, contracted disorders are most abused by cut-and-dry-hit-and-miss treatment administered by good friends, druggists, doctors in general practice and most of the would-be specialists. It is certainly interesting to hear the story of the average patient telling his experience with the different kinds of so-called treatments he has been "up against." A large majority of our patients come to us with all the original disease and part or all of the complications resulting from delay and mistreatment. We generally have to cure them after some or all of the following conditions have developed: Chronic discharge, stricture, or all of the chronic bladder troubles, diseased prostate, sores, swellings, etc., besides a patient whose confidence and mind are also diseased through failure and disappointment. Don't trifle with these disorders; go to a doctor who knows how to cure you; it's the cheapest, surest and shortest way out. We have been twenty-five years in the business.

Our fees are reasonable. You pay when cured. No charges for medicine. Simple cases cured free. Consultation, examination and expert diagnonsis free in every case.

With the fleet coming here to draw sightseers, it is entirely reasonable to look for a great increase in the activity of the real estate market. We are likely to have hotels, apartments, and all rental property down to cottages pretty well filled up in the city and at the beaches during the greatest portion of the year. Those who come here to see the fleet will not hurry back the day after the ships sail northward. Once here they will be disposed to remain for considerable time and see the country thoroughly. The newcomers crowding in will take up a good many properties on the market for sale, and occupy others that are for rent. Once there is a call for houses which can be met, the owners of property will get busy very soon in building new cottages for rent or for sale.

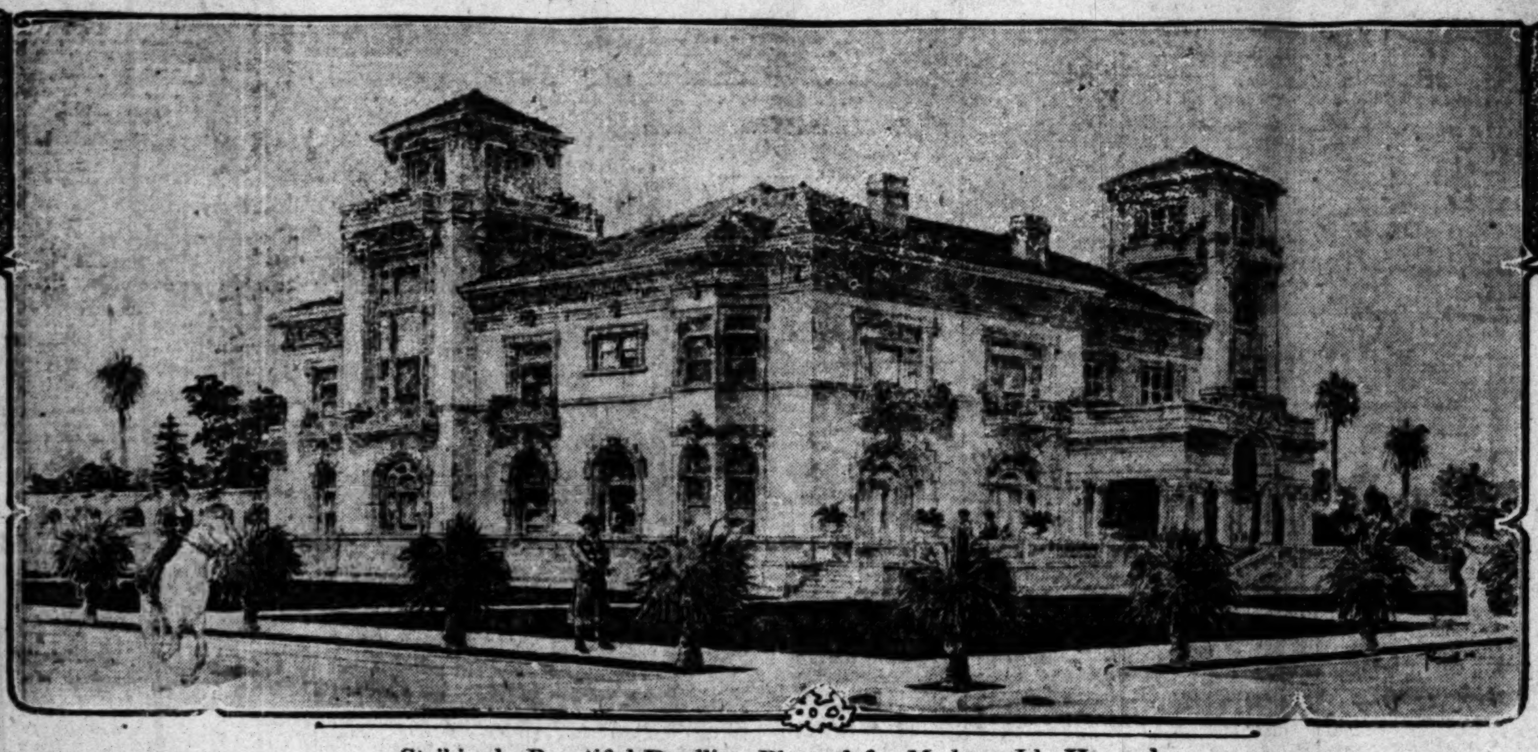
The Country Attracts.

We need not expect that all of the 50,000 homeseekers that the railroads report to be coming here will crowd into the city of Los Angeles. A large portion of them are from farming communities, and are those whose lives have been spent in farming. They are giving up farming in the Middle West to come to farm in California. The financial flurry and business depression has had no effect for a moment upon the demand for country property. There never was a time in the history of the State when so many people were buying small farms and settling upon them to make their home and their living, too. The settling up of the country is going on with great rapidity. The new rush of homeseekers will accelerate this, but holders of city property should take courage by this. If their turn is not now, it is coming. The filling up of the country with an industrious, productive population must be followed by city growth following very soon upon the heels of this growth of rural population.

RESIDENCE FOR WILSHIRE BOULEVARD, LIKE A BEAUTIFUL ITALIAN VILLA.



Strikingly Beautiful Dwelling Planned for Madame Ida Hancock, for northeast corner of Wilshire boulevard and Vermont avenue. John C. Austin, architect.

MAGNIFICENT.

MODELED AFTER ITALIAN VILLAS.

GRACEFUL DWELLING PLANNED FOR RICH WOMAN.

Handsome Structure to Be Erected for Mme. Ida Hancock Will Resemble Mansions of the Medici and Borghese and Will Cost Seventy Thousand Dollars.

The pure Italian Renaissance style has been chosen by Architect John C. Austin for the residence planned for Mme. Ida Hancock, on the northeast corner of Vermont avenue and Wilshire boulevard. It will be one of the handsomest dwellings in this city of fine homes.

With the graceful observation towers reaching toward as fair a sky as any under which the style of architecture grew, the view of the house given herewith brings up visions of sunny Italy, and the beautiful villas of the Medici and the Borghese. In fact, the two grand Italian mansions have furnished the architect with many suggestions for the external design, and while the house is by no means a duplicate of either, there are distinct touches, where the resemblance is marked. The style of architecture has been skillfully adapted to modern requirements, producing a most harmonious effect. The arch of Constantine also furnished some suggestions for the Wilshire boulevard entrance.

The lot is 137x250 feet, and the building will, of course, be very large and commodious. There will be two ornate entrances, the main one being on Wilshire boulevard. Formal gardens and terraces will surround the house, and there will be a porte cochere entrance on the north side. An ornamental wall will surround a formal Italian garden on the rear of the lot, and give the necessary setting to the handsome building. At one side of the garden will be a large garage, capable of accommodating three machines on the first floor, giving ample room for the help on the upper floor. The garage will conform in design with the larger building.

To the six main rooms on the first floor, entrance will be gained over a large porch and through an elaborate vestibule, opening into a huge reception hall, 20x35 feet. This room will be furnished in old oak in the fourteenth century Gothic style. Off the hall will be a reception room, 15x17 feet, also tastefully finished. The library, 20x22 feet, and the dining-room, 19x24 feet, will both be finished in a manner similar to the reception hall. Both the latter and the dining-room will be high wainscoted, and the dining-room will be furnished with a series of doors, extending the length of the room, opening onto a patio.

The music room will be another remarkable feature of the beautiful house. It will be 20x48 feet—a veritable hall—finished in the beautiful style of the Georgian period in white and gold. Here will be placed the $10,000 pipe organ which Mrs. Hancock has just purchased, this occupying a space 9x20 feet. On one side of the room there will be a mezzanine gallery and a platform for an orchestra. On this floor, also, will be a breakfast room, 14x18 feet, a conservatory and a large and well-planned kitchen. There will be, in addition, a servants' dining and sitting room.

From the reception hall a huge double stairway will rise to the second floor, uniting at a landing half way up, where art-glass windows of special design will light the hall. There are to be eight bedchambers on the second floor, six bathrooms, two sitting rooms and a day nursery. Beautiful white and gold effects will be used in the decorations. The attic on the third floor will contain a billiard room, trunk room, general storeroom and the stairs to the two observation towers, which will rise to the fourth-story level, from the tops of which one can command a view of a wonderful stretch of mountain and ocean scenery.

The building will be constructed of brick, stone, steel and timber, the exterior being of pressed brick and cut-stone facing.

There will be a large basement, which will contain a heating plant, laundry, storerooms and a space for the organ motor. The building will be heated by an indirect steam system, and ventilated by means of concealed air ducts and fans, the amount of heat or cold coming into each room being regulated by a thermostatic valve. The building will cost something like $70,000. The owner is well known as having become wealthy through owning valuable oil lands.

BUYS UPLAND ORANGE GROVE.

T. R. Woodbridge has purchased the A. H. Regier grove at Upland, through the agency of L. M. Pratt & Co. and J. O. Enell. This property is at the northeast corner of Twenty-third street and San Antonio avenue, and consists of five acres of Eureka lemons and five acres of Washington navels. The trees are ten years old. The consideration was $11,000.

MAGNIFICENT HOME IS SOLD.

Wilshire Boulevard Residence Changes Hands at Forty-five Thousand Dollars.

J. Frank Walters has sold to Alexander Keating his residence at the southwest corner of Wilshire and Harvard boulevards. The lot has a frontage of 135 feet on Wilshire boulevard, and is 150 feet deep. The residence, which was built by Mr. Walters, is a two and one-half-story, twelve-room house, in the Old English style, the first story and balustrades being of sandstone, and the second story of cement and timber. The house is finished inside with Hawaiian and South American mahogany and solid oak, with hand-carved mantels. It is thoroughly modern in every respect and contains four baths. There is also a thoroughly equipped garage on the property. This is one of the most attractive residences on Wilshire boulevard. The sale was made through the agency of the Holmes-Walton Company, the consideration being about $45,000.

REALTY MARKET ACTIVE.

Numerous Sales by a Local Firm Donates Return to Former Busy Times.

Croake & McCann report the following sales: A lot 50x125 feet on the north side of East Twenty-ninth street, between Trinity street and Maple avenue, improved with seven-room cottage, for J. C. Walker to S. C. Cole, for a consideration of $3750. It was bought for a home.

A lot 40x135 feet, on the north side of Lee street, between Central and McKinley avenues, improved with a five-room cottage, for C. E. Pendall to A. C. Harper, for $1750.

A lot 50x136 feet on the north side of Normandie and Budlong avenues, for J. M. Campbell to Ernest P. Wellman for a consideration of $1000.

A lot 60x138 on the west side of Willard avenue near Prospect avenue, Hollywood, for Aldritt, Croake & McCann, to Benjamin P. Hoar, for $1275. The buyer will erect a residence. A lot 50x135 feet on the east side of Glorietta avenue, near Prospect avenue, in Hollywood, for Aldritt, Croake & McCann to E. H. Hallberg, for $900. A lot 44x136 feet on the west side of Rosetta street, near Prospect, E. Hollywood and Jane O'Neil to Ida B. Preston, for $1000. The purchaser will erect a cottage.

A lot 40x115 feet on the west side of Tennessee street, between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets, improved with a four-room cottage, for Frank Zens to G. W. Walley, for $1900. This was bought for a home.

LAKE STREET HOME SOLD.

Nearly Twenty Thousand Dollars Is Paid for Handsome Palm Place Residence.

The sale of the handsome two-story residence at No. 1115 Lake street, in Palm Place, for a consideration between $18,000 and $19,000, was reported through the agency of the Arthur W. Kinney Company last week.

The property was owned by Mrs. W. I. Hollingsworth, and was purchased by H. Clay Breeden. It consists of a lot 85x150 feet, highly improved with ornamental trees and shrubbery. The house is one of the finest in the section. It contains ten large rooms. The lower floor is finished in an artistic manner, there being several unique effects in Japanese decorations and tapestry. Five bedchambers occupy the upper floor, in addition to two bathrooms.

MANY BUYING HOMES.

No Drop in Prices of High-Class Residence Property—One Firm's Good List.

The Ideal Realty Company reports the following sales: Elizabeth Clark to Louisa Quint, the property at No. 1300 West Thirty-sixth street, a lot 50x135 feet, improved with a modern five-room bungalow. Bought for a home, for a consideration of $4000.

Charles M. Tucker to Edward Strayer, a five-room cottage at No. 710 Dexter avenue, lot 40x120 feet; consideration $3000.

Sarah A. Naismith to Mollie E. Clark, an eight-room cottage at No. 1110 Fedora street, lot 45x128 feet; consideration $5700.

Nichols & Clark to Hester A. Cline, an eight-room, two-story modern home at No. 1640 West Twenty-fifth street; consideration was $8000.

Ella Alman to Ida Peters, a lot 45x120 feet, improved with a six-room modern bungalow, at No. 536 Dexter avenue; consideration $3500.

Asa H. Squier to Paulina Krokover, a lot 50x150 feet, improved with a six-room modern bungalow, at No. 475 Prescott street, Pasadena; consideration $3000.

Clara Helman to Andrew Jamieson, a lot 50x150 feet, improved with a seven-room, two-story residence, at No. 4218 South Figueroa street; consideration $6000.

SALES AND EXCHANGES.

Twenty-five Thousand Dollars Valuation Represented by One Agency of Last Week.

Sales and exchanges made through the agency of J. Madison Carter, are as follows: An eight-room house at No. 1055 West Thirty-seventh street, to Miss Julia Williamson, for $4030 cash, and a six-room house in West Park Tract on Ventura street, to Mrs. L. Jones, for $3675, part cash.

The exchanges were a five-room house at No. 1020 Hobson street to Mrs. Anna Hyatt, for a ranch on Seventh street, Burbank, owned by D. Henke. The value of each property was $3000. An exchange of a six-room house by F. H. Seydel for a ranch at Cyoltio Creek, owned by A. Meyer; the value of the house was placed at $4000 and that of the ranch at $7500.

IN VERMONT AVENUE SQUARE.

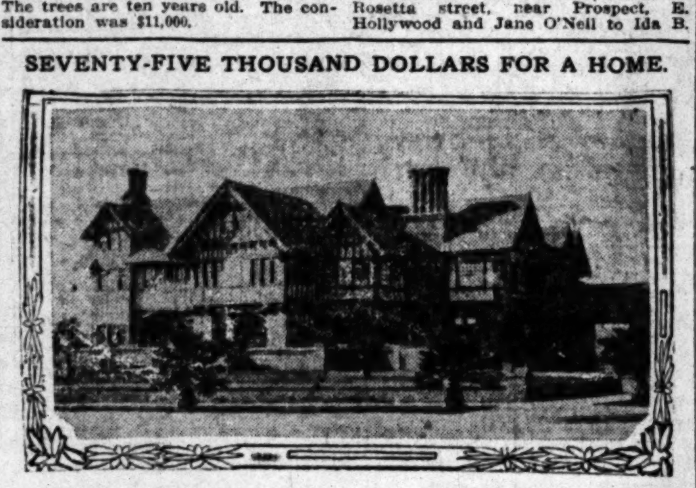
Sales in Vermont-avenue Square made recently by Tracy E. Shoults & Co. are as follows: For W. H. Corlelle, to Mary Pearson, a lot 46x148 feet on Forty-seventh street, between Budlong avenue and Beach street, for $850. The buyer will erect a bungalow. To Mrs. Mary Keefe, a lot 43x130 feet on Fifteenth street, between Budlong avenue and Beach street, for $750. To W. R. Lamb, for W. E. McEvens, a lot 50x150 feet, on Forty-seventh street, between Vermont avenue and San Juan street, for $900. For R. Givium to Louise Hillstrom, a lot 50x150 feet on Forty-fifth street, between Budlong avenue and Beach street, for $800. The buyer will build at once.

BUYING TO BUILD.

A. E. Warmington reports the sale of a lot 50 by 140 feet, on Loretta avenue, between Vermont and Budlong avenues, to Mrs. Birdie T. Kaeppler, for $600. She will build a home at once. He states that several other houses are to be erected on the Vermont avenue park tract. He also reports the sale by Ralph Salsbury of a lot 50 by 150 feet and a five-room cottage on Sevelle street, Huntington Park, to E. C. Ruhling for $2500.

(See Page Sixteen.)

SEVENTY-FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR A HOME.



Westmorland Place Residence of Oliver C. Bryant, which was purchased for $75,000 by Mr. Gillett, a mining man from Mexico and Arizona, last week. The property is one of the show places of Los Angeles. It occupies the southwest corner of West Eleventh street and Westmoreland avenue, 150x200 feet. The substantial house is of brick, stone and frame construction, and contains twenty-eight rooms, handsomely finished in various hardwoods, beautiful decorative effects and special hardware and electric lighting fixtures. The sale was reported by A. T. Jergins & Co. The buyer is a former Ohio man, who has extensive interests in the mineral regions of the Southwest, and has decided to make Los Angeles his home, so as to be in closer touch with his business projects. He had only been in the city a few days when he purchased the Bryant residence.

following results were picked andom by the writer in various f the Corcoran district. They beyond all doubt that any man inary ability, with a few hun- ollars, can secure a generous of Corcoran acreage, and not ake a living out of it, but also pay for his land with the m the crops.

ACRES PAY LIVING EX- ENSE FIRST YEAR.

Little, assistant cashier of the Bank of Corcoran, owns five in the town. Chickens alone his entire living expenses last and they required very little at- . He expects peach trees on cres of this land to net him $500 year. Melons from a half acre him $190 the first season. Mr. purchased his property only a ago last March.

J. W. Guiberson says that his income from chickens and garden on a small piece of land more than paid the living expenses of his large family.

George A. Smith cleared $350 from two acres of potatoes. He found the soil fertile enough to produce two crops on the same ground in the same year. He also secured enough seed for two years' planting.

ENOMOUS PROFITS IN ALFALFA AND BUTTER FAT.

Alfalfa seed netted J. R. Charles over $8000 last year. He also receives $750 to $1000 per month from the Corcoran creamery for his milk.

A. V. Taylor clears about $600 per month from milk alone. W. H. Ginn's net monthly milk check averages $300. Dozens of other alfalfa ranches are making fat bank accounts for their owners.

AN INCOME FROM THE START.

The man who goes on a piece of this wonderfully rich land can begin to produce almost at the very start. An acre planted to alfalfa now will produce by May, furnishing sufficient feed to keep a cow. Milk, cream and butter are secured for family use and the remainder can be sold for cash daily at the creamery. While the alfalfa is growing cows can find abundant natural feed on all sides.

HOGS, CHICKENS AND TURKEYS ARE GOLD WINNERS.

Chickens and turkeys roam about, securing their own feed to a great extent, and require practically no attention. Turkeys sell readily at $3.75 to $5.00 each. Chickens bring high prices and eggs average 35c a dozen the year round. Hogs are a by-product of the dairy. Skimmed milk and alfalfa make the choicest pork. Corcoran hogs command the highest prices in San Francisco and Los Angeles markets.

BROAD, LIBERAL POLICY OF THE LAND COMPANY TO SECURE ACTUAL SETTLERS.

An officer of the company informed the writer that when permanent improvements are made, such as a house, barn, gas well, wind mill, tank, etc., a rebate is made in the purchase price of the land amounting to approximately 50 per cent. of the cost of the improvements. This is an unusually liberal inducement to land buyers.

EXCURSION WEDNESDAY, MAR. 4.

Newport & Milner, general agents for Security Land and Loan Co., offices at 357 S. Spring street, will be in charge of a two-day Pullman excursion trip to the Corcoran district, leaving Wednesday, March 4th, at 6:30 p. m.

It will be an excellent opportunity to see the wonderful money-making opportunities that exist in this fertile section.

ROOM FOR THOUSANDS IN THE CORCORAN DISTRICT.

The writer believes that there are thousands in Los Angeles who are virtually struggling to make both ends meet, although their incomes are from $1200 to $3000 per annum. High rents and the high cost of living incident to city life pitifully reduce these incomes. If these same people would secure 10, 20 or 30 acres of land at Corcoran, with the free water and the free gas for light, heat and power, they would be as independent as a railroad magnate. Instead of spending $3000 per year, they could live in comfort and plenty—and actually bank from $2000 to $5000 yearly.

Why do people choose to be poor?

A LARGE 6-ROOM COTTAGE, NEAR WESTLAKE PARK.

If you are looking for a comfortable home near Westlake Park, cheap, this should suit; this place was built about 3½ years ago; there are six large rooms and neat reception hall, pantry and screen porch; floors are of Oregon pine throughout; this cottage is located between Sixth and Seventh, near Burlington; the lot is well worth $2500, and the house would cost from $2000 to $2250; price only $3850.

AN ARTISTIC 6-ROOM BUNGALOW, ON DOUBLE CLEAN CORNER.

$4250—Located on the southwest corner of W. 29th Place and Arlington ave. You enter from a porch into a pretty reception hall on your left is the living-room, with brick fireplace and built-in bookcases; on right of hall through sliding doors is the den or front bedroom; the dining-room has paneled walls and pretty built-in buffet; all these room have oak floors; two of the bedrooms and bath finished in white; neat kitchen and screen porch with set tubs; fine lawn and flowers.

A COSY HOME.

$4750—Located between 18th and Pico, near Magnolia; lot 50x150 to an alley. Reception hall with large brick mantel, pretty living-room; dining-room has mantel and china closet; large kitchen and pantry; two pretty bedrooms and bath; cement basement. Large barn and auto garage. Fine trees, flowers and shrubbery. This is an exceedingly well constructed house and very nicely arranged. Lots in this locality are held at $2500 and $3000, and the improvements on this lot could not be duplicated under $3000.

A BEAUTIFUL SEVEN-ROOM HOME.

$6000—This is entirely new and has never been occupied. Located in a pretty section of the southwest, and only half a block from the W. Adams car. Pretty porch with cement porch. Very neat reception hall, large living-room with beamed ceiling, brick fireplace flanked by bookcases; dining-room with paneled walls, beamed ceiling and buffet; large den with built-in writing desk; all these rooms have quarter-sawed oak floors. A very complete cabinet kitchen; screen porch with stationary tubs. On the second floor are three elegant bedrooms, with very large closets; a pretty dressing-room; cement cellar and furnace. This is one of the most complete seven-room homes that we have found for the money in a long while.

FOR SALE—
"BARGAINS IN BUNGALOWS."

This is our BUSINESS, and we can sell you a strictly modern bungalow, with every convenience, in the best location in Los Angeles, at from $200 to $800 cheaper than you can buy it anywhere else. They are not built by contract, but under the closest personal supervision, and after you have seen some of our bargains you will be surprised at their style and actual value, but ASTONISHED AT THE PRICES. Here are just a few:

$2150 takes the nicest 4-room modern bungalow in Los Angeles; a "swell" little place, in a nice neighborhood, and on best car line; when you see it you will wonder how we can make such a ridiculously low price. It's located on East 27th st. If you want this move quickly.

$2250; is our sacrifice price on a new 5-room strictly modern bungalow, nice location—southwest, on car line; it's a little treasure, and worth a good $2750; built entirely too swell to sell at any such price, but the owner needs the money; terms.

$2600; this buys a strictly modern 5 (large) room bungalow, with basement; every convenience; quick car service; and must be seen to realize the value; this is one of our BARGAINS for this week that is going to go quickly; beautiful place, and the grounds highly improved.

$2750; here is a modern strictly first-class 6-room bungalow, new, and will be a surprise to you when you see it. We ourselves do not see why owner makes such a sacrifice price, but he says he means to SELL IT THIS WEEK, and so it goes; it's a beauty, and is yours at a price way below even a BARGAIN FIGURE. See us for full particulars.

$3000; this is a place really built at a cost of $4000, and is the choicest modern 6-room bungalow we have seen at anything like this knock-down price. It is simply all right as to location, convenience, actual value, etc., and you will heartily agree with us when you see it.

The above are just a few samples; come to our office and we can show you some of the greatest bargains you ever saw. This is a GRAND TIME TO BUY, but these offers cannot stay long. They are being taken up every day. "BARGAINS IN BUNGALOWS" is our business, and by coming to us you get THE BEST IN LOS ANGELES AT THE LOWEST FIGURES.

FOR SALE—
MR. & MRS. BUYER.

We are the exclusive agents for some of the best modern up-to-date homes in Los Angeles and Pasadena at prices which are right, and if you will give us a little of your time we can convince you of the above facts.

The following are just a few among many we have.

Wilshire Boulevard District. A very artistic, modern, up-to-date, home in the noted Wilshire Boulevard District, a rare bargain at $8000. We can deliver it for $7000. This home includes all modern fixtures, such as hardwood floors, built-in buffet, beam ceilings, etc.

Westlake District. Located between 7th and 8th on the best street east of Alvarado, east front lot 50x150 to alley, improved with modern 9-room house, including furnace with pipes to every room, also cold air ducts to outside. Large open fireplace and mantel. Construction is of the very best. If you are looking for a home as well as an investment be sure you see this. PRICE $9000 FOR TEN DAYS ONLY.

NEAR BERKELEY SQUARE, WEST ADAMS HEIGHTS DISTRICT. TWO-STORY, SEVEN-ROOM HOUSE FOR $6000. THAT'S ALL. CAN YOU BEAT IT.

We have a large and very handsome home in the Wilshire-Westlake District which is cheap at $40,000, located on the highest point in this famous district with a view of the mountains from beyond San Bernardino to the sea. We can deliver this for $36,000 for a few days only.

THE KREMER COMPANY.
507-8 Lissner Bldg.
Main 2757. 524 South Spring st. F5094. 1

FOR SALE—
$2600—Just imagine an 8-room modern house in a fine neighborhood; every convenience; beautiful street; best car service in city; this is a price cut down $1000 as the owner is leaving town and we must sell it within a few days; call on us, or see it at 589 West 46th st.

$3750—7-room 2-story, located 3813 Sunset boulevard; fine high ground, delightful view, and a thoroughly modern and desirable home, and so convenient. Would accept smaller house as first payment, or suburban acreage. Here's a chance for a good trade for some one.

$7500—If you are looking for a typical "Los Angeles" home, where are to be found all modern conveniences, delightful location, "swell" neighborhood, and best car service in the city; house built with an abundance of artistic features; well, then, see this home in "ELLENDALE PLACE." It's mighty "nobby," and you are saving in the price a good $2500. This is a fact, as offers were made of $10,000 only last summer. See us about this as some lucky person will have it before the week is up. Might consider a good lot.

Call at our office for all particulars, and let us show you these places. They are not simply BARGAINS, but SACRIFICES.

FOR SALE—$4500. $4500.
SEVEN-ROOM CORNER BUNGALOW.

So many "beauties" are offered in advertisements that it seems like an old story to use that expression, but if there ever was a little palace in seven rooms that has surpassed this, for the price, we have yet to see it, and would have to see it to believe it.

On an east and north front corner lot, with fencing and barn, absolutely new, fixtures just installed, hardwood floors, full paneled dining room, living and den. Two large rock-faced brick mantels, three bedrooms, all opening into a center hall.

The plan of this house is one of the most perfect things ever drawn. It is the charm of every one we have ever sold a house to, that was built from it. But this house is the most elaborate one in all of its detail, both inside and out, that we have ever constructed.

The location is southwest, in that beautiful section known as WEST PARK, just west of Agricultural Park, and on the Dalton car line, which is known as the fastest car line reaching the southwest; ten minutes or more quicker than the Adams st. or Jefferson-st. cars, and only the same air line distance from center of city.

Without the present tightness of money this house would not be sold for less than $5000 to $5500, but we want a thousand cash quick this week, and will turn it for $4500, $1000 cash, balance $35 and interest monthly.

LET US SHOW YOU.

PUT THIS ADDRESS DOWN.
(2196 WEST 30TH ST.)
THE S. E. CORNER OF CIMMARON ST.

Come out TODAY and look it over. A rare chance to buy a bungalow that has as handsome an exterior as interior. I will be on the premises from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. TODAY to show you around.

Now take in these details for your further information.

Seven rooms, including as follows; reception hall, dining-room, den, 2 bed-rooms, kitchen, breakfast room and bath-room, 2 mantels (both without duplicates in the city,) a handsome and ornate built-in buffet in dining-room, also one in breakfast-room, hardwood floors in three first rooms, scraped and polished throughout balance of the house, tile walls to ceiling in kitchen and bath. Large closets with electric lights, beautiful fixtures, immense cement porch across front and on side, built-in desk and bookcases in den, stationary wash tubs, lots of closets and drawers in kitchen, large lot to an alley and garage. 1

FOR SALE—I AM SACRIFICING MY NEW house, into which I have never moved, and is not quite completed. Just before this financial trouble I started a new home, expecting to be able to complete it and pay all bills. This I cannot do, the plumbing fixtures are yet to go in, and about $400 yet to pay out on finishing bills.

The house has cost me $2900 cash, the lot is worth $1200, and $400 is yet to be paid out to clear it all up. It is in actual money costing $4600.

If you will assume the $400 bills, and give me about $500 in cash, you can have it for $4150. You can judge its value by my stating that I borrowed to start it last summer $3000 on plans at 7 per cent. interest.

I am offering this under a box number, as I do not care to air my troubles to the general public. Drop me a reply, and I will see you anywhere any time. I must realize on it right away.

Address E, box 123, TIMES OFFICE. 1

FOR SALE—ARE YOU WAITING FOR US to raise the prices before you buy? Do you know many wise people are buying now for homes? Eight the past week in this tract, and if they can't pay cash, as very few can right now, they are showing their far-sightedness by taking advantage of our easy terms of $10 month. We are selling choice building lots in the SOUTHWEST, between Vermont, that great and popular avenue, and Budlong ave., on 52nd, 53rd and 54th sts., for only $600 up to $700. Three car lines near by; more actual building done in this vicinity the past year or two than any similar area in this city for homes. Don't be a pessimist any longer. There are always a few, but they are seldom the ones who are living in their own homes. Start now on your own home. Don't put it off any longer. You'll pay more money if you do, and meanwhile throw away good rent money that oughht to be paying for your family a home. IF YOU WANT A HOME LOT, don't fail to see and talk it over at once with M'GRATH, with STRONG & DICKINSON, Second and Broadway.

FOR SALE—A NORTHEAST TRACT fronting on Huntington blvd., 150 to 200 feet higher than city; level, elegant view; 3-minute car service; 14 minutes from business; just outside city limits; 6 1-3c car fare. But think of the time you'll save for 1 1-3c. I presume your time is worth more than 1c an hour. If it is, you can save money every day by living at this place, and enjoy the ideal home section; get a lot on your own terms; $5 or $10 a month, if you want, and a big lot, too. They're over 50 ft. front, by 140 to 150 ft. deep to alley; modern street work; $1500 building restrictions and a number of fine homes now occupied on the tract. On a few lots back from the car line, a temporary building or California house will be allowed on the rear of the lot only. Now I've given you all the weak points and only a few of the good ones. You should be independent and own your own place. Lots are $400, $450 and $500. Call personally and bring your wife or any one you want to help your pick out the lot, and see M'GRATH, with STRONG & DICKINSON, Second and Broadway.

FOR SALE—
NOTICE TO BUILDERS.
OPPORTUNITY SELDOM OFFERED.
BEAUTIFUL LOTS CLOSE TO WILSHIRE BOULEVARD AND WESTLAKE PARK, YOU CAN GET WITHOUT PAYING ONE SINGLE DOLLAR DOWN, IF YOU WILL BUILD.
NO HIGHER CLASS PROPERTY IN THIS FINE SECTION.
FROM 50 FEET FRONT UP TO 120x150, INSIDE OR CORNERS. REMEMBER, NO CASH DOWN AND NO INTEREST FOR 2 YEARS. BUT YOU GET A DEED.

HAVE YOU SEEN
THE WATER THAT PUMPS ITSELF?

If not, it is well worth your while. Go down to LOMITA, the model town of little farms, and see a huge engine pumping water and gas, and transforming the gas into units of energy, as the Los Angeles Times neatly phrases it.

Lomita is divided into 5-acre and 10-acre tracts, with water rights and water ownership. The gas is something new, but it may prove to be the biggest thing yet.

Only 15 miles from Los Angeles postoffice, with splendid transportation and market facilities. Free tickets at our office.

FOR SALE—
THE CLOSE-IN FARM LANDS OF TODAY WILL BE THE CITY SUBURBS OF TOMORROW.
BUY AT SOMERSET ACRES AND PROFIT BY THE ADVANCE.

Besides getting number 1 farm lands you get the growing crops and great future prospects when you buy at Somerset Acres. The Santa Ana electric line station and power house are located there. The site was selected by the Pacific Electric because it is the highest point between Los Angeles and Santa Ana. It is considered the site of a great future suburban city. Investors buying there now get in ahead of big developments and can't fail to make big money.

HOMESEEKERS ARE CROWDING THERE AND BUILDING IS VERY ACTIVE.

The land is the best in this vicinity. Everything grows, from beets to barley and from potatoes to prunes. Evene oranges succeed, several groves in that vicinity proving the fact. It is the best portion of the old Bixby ranch, famous for its big productions. Present crops go with the land. Water costs nothing, as it flows without pumping and is piped in steel mains to every acre.

ONLY 30 MINUTES FROM SIXTH AND MAIN, TO SOMERSET STATION ON THE SANTA ANA ELECTRIC LINE.

FOR SALE—

ORANGE GROVES THAT PAY.

20 ACRES COVINA WAY.

4½ acres in Eureka lemons, 1½ in Valencias and 6½ acres in navels, all bearing trees; balance of land vacant, but suitable for oranges or lemons. The lemons alone should bring $300 to $400 per month this year; improved with a beautiful 6-room strictly modern bungalow that was built last fall, and cost $3300 to build; oak floors, beamed ceilings; paneled walls, etc.; porcelain bath, toilet, stationary tubs, etc.; gas plant for fuel and light.

Owner is going to leave the city, and will include all furniture, which is the best; piano, brass bed, etc.; linen, silverware, dishes, etc.; cow, team and complete working equipment; all one needs is to move one's trunk in. This ranch is $5000 under value. Price $20,000; no trade.

20 ACRES, COVINA, CAL.

9 acres in Valencias, 9 acres in navels and 2 acres in Eureka lemons; all bearing and will net $4500 this year; although the orange market is low; improved with a modern 6-room bungalow, electric lights, furnace, etc.; beautiful drive, flowers, ornamental trees, etc.; this ranch is located near electric line and the location is the best in this district overlooking all the rest; I can easily show how this ranch will be worth $40,000 inside of two years; also that it is now under value. Price, including crop, $36,000.

110-ACRE FOOTHILL RANCH. BETWEEN SAN DIMAS AND LORDSBURG.

35 acres in navels, 15 acres in grapes, balance of land in grain. I can make you a price that will startle you if you are interested. Absolutely free water, gravity flow.

Want L. A. Income or Orange Grove.
OPPORTUNITY EXTRAORDINARY.
Great Chance for Capable Man.
Middle West.

An institution that has already made one fair fortune and will make another more easily. Not a prospective business, but a BIG INSTITUTION doing a BIG BUSINESS NOW. Present owners have interests here that demand all of their attention. Business is located in one of the best cities in the Middle West. Established 1895.

OLD ESTABLISHED CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOL.
UP-TO-DATE BUSINESS COLLEGE AND SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY.

Acknowledged leaders in all lines taught. Highest national endorsement. Doing an extensive business throughout the entire United States. Thousands of successful students—all satisfied, enthusiastic and pushing. Equipment very best.

CAPABLE MAN—Well educated, can buy this institution for $32,500, and manage it himself. Sale will include book accounts (about $20,000) and large stock of textbooks, printed matter of all kinds for the three schools, plates, copyrights and complete equipment; office fixtures, many typewriters, etc. (Approximate value $8500.) Rent reasonable. Current expenses light. GOOD WILL alone worth more, in actual earning power, than the price asked for the big institution complete. Average net income about $7000 per year, and can be much increased. Over three hundred enrollments past 60 days.

Enough NEW BUSINESS coming in yearly from old students to make handsome thing. Capable and efficient employees, so NO EXPERIENCE WILL BE NECESSARY. Fullest investigation. Records open. Items valued above are from recent State Appraiser's statement.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY.

Will accept Los Angeles income property or orange grove up to $25,000 and balance cash. No agents, as will deal with principals ONLY.

Don't answer unless you mean business, have the qualifications, good property and the cash balance. References expected.

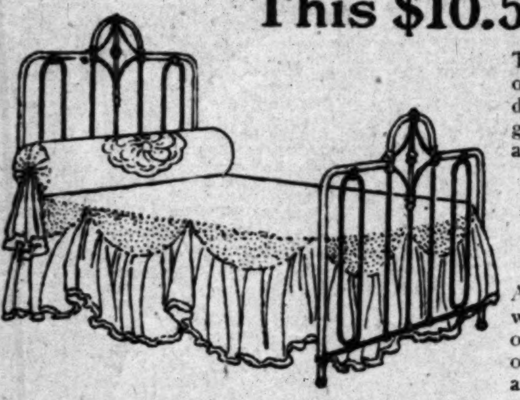
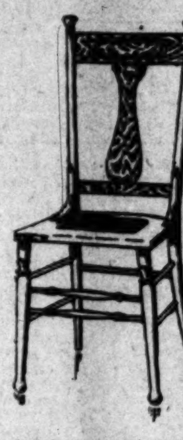
All Wash Stands Half Price

This $10.50 Metal Bed $7.35



The exact design is shown in the picture. It is one of our best sellers at $10.50. The price is down to $7.35 for this sale. Color is cream with gilt trimmings. Full size, of course. All beds are greatly reduced.

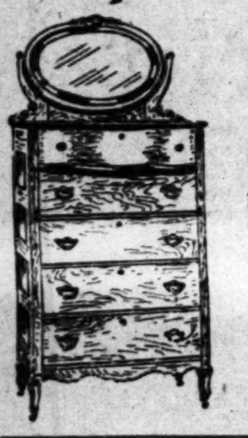
$2.40 Dining Chair $1.65



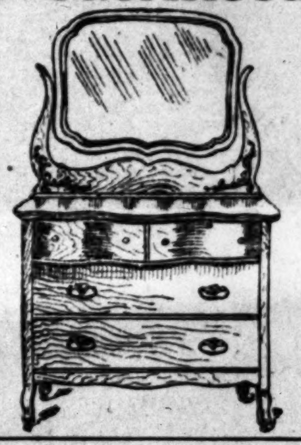
A solid golden oak diner with continuous posts, well braced and cane seat. You can get an idea of the design from the picture. There are scores of exceptional snaps in dining chairs in all woods and finishes.

All Hall Furniture Reduced a Third

Sample Chiffoniers and Dressers Sacrificed



We have on our floors scores of Chiffoniers and Dressers, samples which are backed up by little or no stock in the warehouse. We need the room they occupy for samples of the new goods, hence this great cut in prices. We mention here two examples:



$23.50 and $25 Dressers $15

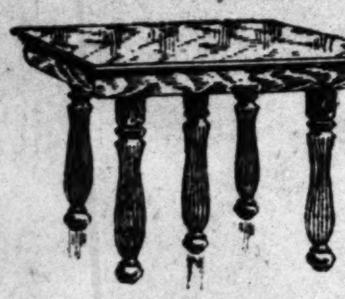
Dressers in golden oak, maple and mahogany finish, with body like picture on the right and oval or pattern mirrors. We offer them all at $15.00—a clean saving of $8.50 to $10.00.

$22.50 and $23.50 Chiffoniers $12.75

Chiffoniers in golden oak, maple and mahogany finish with five drawer bodies, as shown in the picture on the left. Mirrors are in various shapes—all heavy plate and beveled. They all go at $12.75.

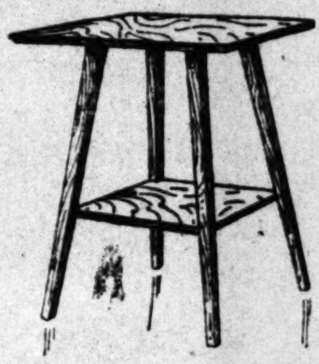
All Cellarets Reduced a Third

Solid Oak Dining Tables $7.25



A solid oak table in either golden or weathered finish. It is the six-foot extension size. Exact design shown in the picture on the left. Every price is a bargain price in dining tables.

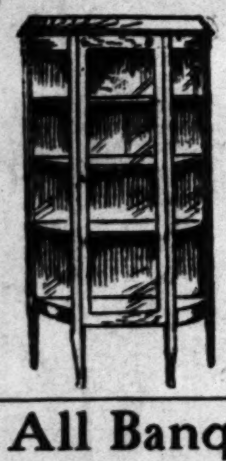
$3 Parlor Table $2.50



A table just like the picture, in selected birch, natural finish. It is well made and finished. There are scores of exceptional bargains in parlor tables. The minimum reduction is 20 per cent.

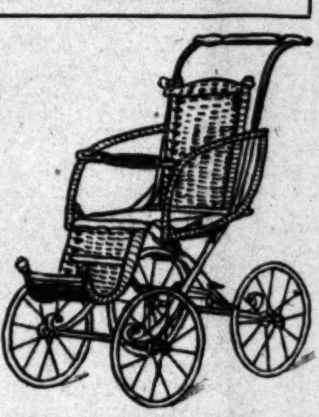
All Birch Furniture Cut a Third or Better

$20 China Closet $14.50



We show a picture of it on the left. The frame is solid oak, golden finish. Side glasses are bent and shelves are adjustable. We have put a very interesting price on every china closet for this sale. If you need one, get it now.

$4.00 Go-Carts $2.50

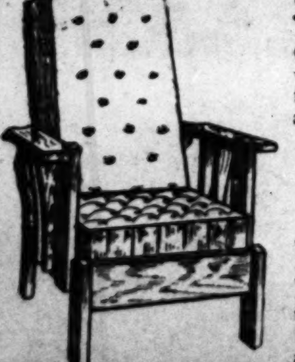


The design is shown in the picture, the only exception being that the seat and back are veneered maple instead of rattan. The wheels are the 12-inch size and the tires are rubber. The back is adjustable and the entire cart folds flat.

ALL GO-CARTS ARE MARKED AT BARGAIN PRICES DURING THIS SALE.

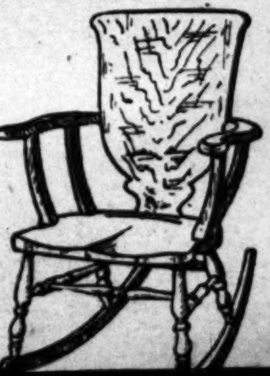
All Banquet Table Tops Reduced a Third

$15.75 Morris Chair $9.75



One of the late designs. The frame is in solid oak, weathered finish. It comes from the best Morris chair factory in the country. Cushions are goat hair filled and velour covered. Choice of green, red or brown.

$10.50 Oak Arm Rocker $7.00



The best rocker bargain we have offered for many years. Design exactly as you see it in the picture. It is new—arrived only a short time ago. The wood is quarter-sawed oak, golden finish and hand polished. It is perfectly constructed and will outwear this and another generation. See it sure.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Kenny, Sr., of Blair, Neb., arrived yesterday and took a suite at the Westminster, expecting to remain several weeks.

J. T. Scott, son of President Scott of the United States Telephone Company, is a guest at the Van Nuys.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Miller of Detroit, are at the Westminster. Mr. Miller is a financier of some prominence.

F. L. Bellan of Denver arrived in Los Angeles last evening and will remain at the Lankershim a short time before returning home. Mr. Bellan has been passing the last few months in Honolulu.

Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Gibson, wealthy residents of Salt Lake City, are guests at the Lankershim.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Scott and daughter of Chicago are at the Westminster. Mr. Scott is a business man and capitalist.

J. S. Bransford, Mayor of Salt Lake City, is at the Hotel Lankershim for an indefinite period.

A. C. Van Hagen, one of the wealthiest flouring mill owners in Minnesota, is at the Hayward. He comes from Sleepy Eye.

A. B. Jennings of Hazelton, Pa., is registered at the Alexandria. Mr. Jennings is interested in a steel corporation.

Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Hall of Chicago are at the Hayward. They are in Southern California for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Kleinschmidt and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Grimes of Helena, Mont., have taken apartments at the Lankershim for an indefinite time.

John W. Richards of No. 1223 South Dakota street, left yesterday for a trip to Portland, Me., where he will visit his uncle, Henry J. Herrington.

Miss Elsie Withers of East St. Louis is spending the winter with her cousin, Miss Nellie Munson, No. 940 Camulos street.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Reynolds and Mr. and Mrs. Jacob T. Kelsoe of Chicago arrived in Los Angeles yesterday. They will spend some time in California before returning East. The party is staying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Ives, No. 3812 Hollenbeck Road.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Denton and Miss Sallie Denton of Charleston, S. C., arrived in Los Angeles yesterday en route to the Orient. The members of the Denton family will visit relatives in Hollywood during their stay here.

Miss Caroline Willis of Atlanta is visiting Miss Harriet McNair, No. 1047 South Evergreen street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Spalding of Kansas City, Mo., who passed a few days in Los Angeles, have gone to San Diego, where they are guests of relatives.

Mrs. D. Newman of Pomona, a relative of Bishop Newman, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. W. W. Coates.

W. W. McCready, a prominent railroad contractor of Spokane, Wash., who spent the early part of the week in Los Angeles, has returned to his home. While here he purchased a touring car, which was shipped to his home yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Siegel of No. 1041 Magnolia avenue, have returned from a visit to New York and Boston.

E. L. De Camp of Detroit, who is associated with Charles C. Coleman, manager of a local tire agency, will leave this evening for San Francisco to attend the automobile show which will open in the Bay City tomorrow.

John R. Packard, a veteran merchant, in active business since 1854, is registered at Hotel Hollenbeck. Mr. Packard first saw the city in 1874, the guest of the Pico House, now the National, then the bon-ton hotel of Los Angeles.

Frederic Belasco arrived here yesterday for an inspection of his local theatrical interests.

Fritz Kreisler, celebrated Austrian violinist, is due to arrive in this city today.

PEOPLE OF THE COAST.

Samuel Armstrong of San Mateo, aged 14 years, has surprised the experts and artists of San Francisco with a poster he submitted for consideration in the fleet competition. He has for some time been in the employ of merchants and business men of the city making cartoons and sketches for advertising purposes, which work has made such inroads upon his time that he has been obliged to leave school and continue his education under a private teacher whom he pays from his own earnings.

Rear-Admiral Charles M. Thomas, who is practically in command of the battleship fleet by reason of Rear-Admiral Evans's attack of rheumatism.

a bath long enough. At home he has a bed which was built to his measure.

Dr. W. A. Egbert, a practicing physician of Spokane, has just awakened from a sleep of thirteen days with a clear vision, a good appetite and in a healthy condition. His case is a puzzle to his brother physicians, as it was not the result of any liquor or narcotic, and the whole period, is a blank to him. He became unconscious January 20. He was found lying on the floor the next day and it was not until February 9 that he awoke. During this time he was taken from his room in a block downtown and carried to the hospital.

Frederick W. Sharon, one of the principal owners of the Palace Hotel at San Francisco and other realty controlled by the Sharon estate, is visiting San Francisco. For about sixteen years he has lived abroad, chiefly in Paris, returning to San Francisco occasionally for short visits.

Miss Marguerite Bruntsch, formerly of Alameda, but at present in Berlin, has brought fame to her home city by her success in grand opera in the German capital. She is under contract to remain on the continent for the next few years, although several flattering offers have been made by musical directors for her return to the United States. She is a girl of remarkable beauty and charming personality, which lends an added power to her singing. Mrs. Charles Bruntsch and her daughter, Miss Tosca Bruntsch, will close their home in Alameda, late in the spring to spend two years in Berlin as the guest of Miss Bruntsch.

OVER THE SEA.

Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, once said to Cecil Rhodes: "I wish you were a German, for I would appoint you director of my foreign affairs." "That," replied Rhodes, "is a great compliment, sir; but I respectfully assure you that if you had been an Englishman I would have engaged you as my general manager."

The Countess von Linden is publishing in the "Biologishes Centralblatt" the interesting results of her researches regarding the endurance of hunger among butterflies. She finds that one of these animals may live for seventeen days without food, having lost in the meantime two-thirds of its initial weight; whereas birds and small mammal die in nine days, losing in weight only from one-fifth to two-fifths.

Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein, King Edward's sister, enjoys going about incognito and riding on the London omnibuses. She likes to get into close quarters with the people, and flatters herself that she has never been recognized during one of her tours.

Monsignor Anette, the new Archbishop of Paris, is reputed to be the most pious man in France. He does not, however, go around with a face of serious mien, but is a very jolly fellow.

Maj. Ferdinand Esterhazy who, through false evidence, caused Capt. Dreyfus five years of shame and imprisonment as a traitor to his country, has been found in an attic at No. 116 St. James Terrace, Warwick avenue, London, where he is dying, alone and in poverty. Quite a recluse, and cut off from all the world except his own intimate circle of friends, he is now living under the title of Comte de Voillemont. He was found recently huddled up an old armchair and clad in a well-worn light brown overcoat and crouching over the fire seeking to get warmth to his thin, attenuated frame. The gray-bearded old man, with hair prematurely silvered and shoulders bowed, looks what he is—an outcast from society, whose only desire is to be left alone and to eke out his own life.

EDUCATORS, AUTHORS.

Owen Wister has joined the ranks of authors who are in politics, and has been nominated for City Councilman on the Reform ticket in Philadelphia. Mr. Wister is a personal friend of President Roosevelt, and a staunch Republican in national politics, but his appearance as a candidate is in direct opposition to the Republican "machine" nominee. His home is in one of the strongest "organization" wards in the city, but he has entered on the campaign so vigorously that his chances of election are said to be excellent.

Dr. Henry Fairfield Osborn has been elected head of the American Museum of Natural History, New York, to take the place of the late Morris K. Jessup. He has been second vice-president for some time, and, for the first time in the history of the institution, its head is a trained scientist.

George Ade, the playwright and author, who is to be one of the Indiana delegates to the Republican national convention, reported in former days political conventions and political headquarters in Chicago and New York City. Eventually Mr. Ade's friends in the Hoosier State hope to nominate him for Governor.

Prof. C. E. Norton of Harvard University is regarded by the small boys of Ashville, Mass., where he has a summer home, as their patron saint. His love for animals led him to ad-cents a bushel for them, a windfall for the boys. To them he is known as "Mr." Norton. At the university he is Charles Eliot Norton, LL. D., Litt.D. D., D.C.L. Oxon, professor emeritus of the history of art in Harvard College, "The American Ruskin," "the most cultured man in the country," and a few other equally important titles.

Prof. John Bassatt Moore, formerly assistant secretary of State, has been compelled to give up his duties as professor of international law at Columbia owing to failing eyesight. The trustees have granted him leave of absence for the remainder of the academic year and he will go to Florida to recuperate.

Acting upon the recent endowment of $100,000 to establish a chair of humanity at Columbia College, the trustees have appointed Prof. R. C. McRea, formerly of Bowdoin College, to make a preliminary study of humane societies and instruction in humanity.

POLITICIANS, STATESMEN.

Senator Winthrop Murray Crane of Massachusetts is said to be about the best posted man in either branch of Congress on matters pertaining to either Senate business or national politics. It doesn't seem to make any difference whether the matter is one being "pulled off" in the East or along the Pacific Coast, Murray Crane knows about it, and, what is more, he knows the exact and the inside facts, and he will tell you about them if you are on sufficiently intimate terms with him. Also he knows how the United States Senate stands on almost every conceivable subject. No man in that body can come nearer to telling you offhand how any one or all of the ninety members of that body feels toward any subject. Just how Mr. Crane got to his present place of preeminence it is difficult to say. You might watch him from the galleries of the Senate through every moment that body was in session, and you would be as much in the dark as though you had not visited that body. Neither would there be any signs of the Senator's activity, nor indications that he was not a most ordinary pawn in the game legislative. But, just the same, members of the Senate themselves realize his qualities, and no man is appealed to more often, and no man is acquiring a greater following than he. The strange part of it all is that he is now serving his first elective term in the Senate and is in the first year of that term, and has had but two years of the unexpired term to which he was appointed.

Frederick Holbrook, Governor of Vermont during the Civil War, on Sunday celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday. He is the oldest living ex-Governor and one of the three surviving war Governors. In spite of his advanced age he still retains an active interest in public affairs.

J. L. Bristow, formerly fourth assistant Postmaster-General and now editor of the Salina (Kan.) Journal, has announced his candidacy for the United States Senate to succeed Chester I. Long, whose term expires March 3, 1909.

Arthur M. Beaupre, the retiring American Minister to the Argentine Republic, has arrived in Buenos Ayres to take his official leave prior to going to The Hague, where he will succeed David J. Hill as American Minister.

Hon. Whitelaw Reid, Ambassador to England, is reported to have dropped a million and a half dollars in the London Tribune, which recently suspended. The paper after two years had failed to become a paying proposition. The Tribune came into existence with the present English government and was believed to have been more or less of a mouthpiece of the Liberal party. Its principal backer was Franklin Thomasson of Crewe, and for his services to his party those on the inside confidently look forward to his being created a peer before the Campbell-Bannerman government goes out of power. He is very wealthy, a director of Lloyd's Bank and is financially interested in many Cheshire industries.

SCIENTISTS.

Dr. Szielasko, a German geographer, has set a mark for scientific enthusiasm. He accompanied a whaling expedition into southern waters with a sounding apparatus for the purpose of exploring the sea floor. He also intended to make a study of Antarctic birds. Off Cape George the whaler struck a hidden rock and sank in six minutes. Her crew got off with their lives and nothing else. They were fed at a whaling station in Cumberland Bay, while they waited for a passing ship.

The explorer had lost his entire outfit, but on the very day of his landing he began to look about for scraps of knowledge. He mapped the courses of the little streams; he followed up seven big glaciers, as far as there was time. With bits of timber he constructed a rude instrument for taking angles and ascertained the height of the hills about the bay. He charted the land forms, mapped the glacial morraines, and, of course, named everything. He also made notes on the bird life and studied the geological formations. Beto South America he had put in thirty days of the hardest kind of work and acquired a fund of information, and while the others yawned away the wait, the good man was terribly busy and perfectly contented.

Gustav Liebau, a German chemist, after years of experiment, has discovered a preparation which makes artificial stone absolutely impervious to water. He has named the preparation "agua lear." One claim made for the invention is that it will put cement into immediate competition with terra cotta, where this material has heretofore been supreme. This, at least, is the contention of the craft which uses cement in building construction and the industrial arts.

SPORTSMEN.

Reid Holliday of New York, accompanied by his secretary, William Butter, is on a tramp from New York to Richmond, in an effort to cure himself of indigestion. Mr. Holliday is a member of the chemical firm of Read, Holliday & Co., of New York, and will spend several weeks roughing it in the South. He says he has already learned more about race horses and tramps—real weary Williams of the road—than he could have gleamed through years of study.

Lady Constance Stewart-Richardson, younger sister of the Countess of Cromartie, has added ballet dancing to the list of her accomplishments, which she gained before her marriage to Sir Edwin Austin, and when she was still Lady Constance Mackenzie and was regarded as the most athletic young woman in the United Kingdom. She was born in 1882, and even in her early teens was known as a fine shot and bold rider. She has hunted and shot big game in the Rocky Mountains, is a splendid horsewoman, having ridden across Somaliland; is an enthusiastic fisherwoman, and has the landing record for salmon, and at present holds the swimming championship of the London Bath Club, a select organization of Piccadilly. Lady Constance's courtship was a romance, her marriage a sensation. Both were conducted on horseback. Recently she has been taking lessons of the ballet mistress at Covent Garden, who actually says that she has a genius for the terpsichorean art.

Mrs. Albert E. Coon and Mrs. Eugene B. Clark of Chicago, who accompanied their husbands on a recent hunting expedition into the canebrakes of Louisiana and Mississippi, are credited with having shot one bear and one deer, while only one bear is credited to the male members of the party.

The Duke of Portland, who has just celebrated his fiftieth birthday, is a good sportsman. He went in for racing, and ten years of it saw him the winner of two Derbies in succession. When he succeeded to the title from comparative poverty, he took up the position of a great landlord and resolved to run his 300-square-mile estate on business principles, and with a strict regard to the interests of his tenants and servants. At Welbeck may be seen an almshouse and school built out of money won by the Duke on the turf as prizes, for he abhors betting. There are also model dairies, model workshops, and a model fire brigade. Forestry is also one of his concerns, for his estate includes nearly 10,000 acres of woodland.

ARMY AND NAVY MEN.

Gen. Edward Stuyvesant Bragg, hero of the Civil War and distinguished also in civil and professional life, celebrated his eighty-first birthday last week at Fond du Lac, Wis. Despite his years, Gen. Bragg looks almost as young as he did twenty years ago. During the winter he has been at his law office nearly every day when he was not in court, and he has been engaged in several of the most important cases which have come up in this section since his return from China.

Capt. E. B. Underwood, the former ordnance officer at Mare Island, has gone to the Bremerton navy yard, where he will relieve Capt. Stanton as commanding officer of the cruiser Colorado. It is rumored that Capt. Young is to be given command of either the battleship Oregon or Wisconsin when they are commissioned at Bremerton in the near future. Capt. Young was slated to take command of the new battleship Nebraska, but at the last minute Capt. Nicholson was ordered to the ship. Capt. Young is now stationed at Mare Island as the president of the examining and court-martial boards.

A. C. Van Dusen, a sergeant of artillery, retired, living at New Glatz, in Prince George's county, Maryland, served in the United States Artillery for nearly a half-century. While on duty at Fort Monroe, toward the close of the Civil War, he was one of the guards of Jefferson Davis, for whom he has very kindly recollections because of the acquaintance that ensued during the latter's imprisonment.

Lieut. Calvin P. Titus, Fourteenth Infantry, is distinguished as the first American to scale the walls of Peking, while a musician in one of the companies of his regiment. For this act of gallantry he was awarded a medal of honor and an appointment to West Point, and while he was a cadet at the Military Academy, the medal of honor was presented to him with great ceremony, which gives him the additional distinction of being the only officer who wore a medal of honor while a cadet.

Capt. James N. Pickering, First Infantry, and Capt. Pegram Whitworth, First Infantry, are mentioned as probable members of the rifle team of the United States Army, which will meet a team from the British army for a contest during the coming carnival at Manila.

ARTISTS.

Miss Gertrude Partington of San Francisco, who has recently returned from five years' sojourn in Paris, can claim the distinction of being the only woman dry point etcher on the Pacific Coast. In fact, there are few anywhere, Paris being able to show only a half-dozen. Instead of using an acid to bite into the copper plate, dry-point etching is done with a needle or a diamond point, and requires considerable muscular force to draw the line deep enough. At the present time Miss Partington has a number of her etchings on exhibition at San Francisco.

The Princess Iltina Lwoff Parlaghy, by birth a Hungarian, and by marriage a Russian, is in Washington, and will soon resume her journey to India. She is one of the most distinguished artists in Europe, her unusual talent having been recognized when she was less than 10 years old. Since then she has painted the portraits of more royal and princely persons, more persons of distinction in all lines of human endeavor—statesmen, scientists, philosophers, philanthropists, lions literary and lions artistic, than any one living.

Dr. Kurtz, director of the Buffalo Academy of Fine Arts, said recently that there "were at least over 200 living painters in America whose work was of sufficient importance to entitle them to a permanent place in our museums, not to mention many more who had passed away;" and he claimed, with a reasonable show of truth, that no other country could such quality and such diversity of expression.

The matrimonial infelicities of the Waldo Storys have resulted in the sale of their household effects in the Barberini palace in Rome. The Storys' occupancy of the Barberini palace dates from 1847. The library of the palace contains a rare collection of manuscripts, including letters of Galileo, of Bembo, and some illuminated missals from Ghirlandajo brought together by Cardinal Barderini, whose coat of arms had the same emblem as Napoleon's, theree. And in the very top of the old palace is a small room entirely decorated with the insect. The private theater and cosy rooms are full of sunlight, and from them can be had a magnificent view of the Eternal City. Here it was that the elder Story entertained Landor, Hawthorne, Lowell and Longfellow, and imparted the inspiration for the writing of "The Marble Faun." Here, too, the sculptor wrote much of his prose and verse—"Roba di Roma," "Cleopatra," "Estrangement," "Fiametta" and two volumes of "Conversations in a Studio." Here it was, too, that the Marchese d'Ossoli courted Margaret Fuller, and here, finally, the three Story children grew up—Waldo, Julian and their sister, who later married the Marchese Peruzzi. In 1893 the Palazzo Barberini witnessed the celebration of the elder Story's golden wedding. Two years later Mr. Story died in Vallombrosa, leaving his lease of the Barberini and its principal art treasures to his son, Waldo, and his villa at Vallombrosa to Julian.

HUMANITARIANS.

Lady Hope has erected in London a great pile of brick buildings for the housing of the Hope and Connaught clubs, the members of which are men servants. The price of rooms will range from $1.25 to $2 per week, and though she has invested a quarter of a million dollars in the enterprise it is expected the rentals will at least equal the expenses of the establishment. A big library, gymnasium, billiard and recreation rooms have been provided for the members, and special low prices for meals are to be charged in the great restaurant.

Senator George S. Nixon has donated a $40,000 theater to the town of Winnemucca, Nev., The playhouse has been completed, and is said to be one of the finest in the State. During his residence in Winnemucca the millionaire Senator missed the pleasures of the show, and he said then he would give the town a theater if he were ever wealthy. Several months ago he had plans drawn for the structure and masons were set at work. Since then the Senator has moved to Reno, where he has built a mansion on Newlands Heights. He will preside at the dedication of the Winnemucca theater when the present session of Congress ends.

A friend of the under dog is Miss Julia Jones, principal of primary school No. 3, in Brooklyn. Vogue says that she is carrying on a "Kindness Society," and has enlisted some 13,000 scholars in the cause. The little ones repeat every morning the pledge, "I promise to be kind to all dumb creatures and will try to protect them from all cruel usage." The children are urged also to give practical effect to these fine sentiments through rescue work which Miss Jones makes out for them. The principal efforts of this Good Samaritan are made in finding homes for dogs, her ultimate ambitions being to have a home established where unfortunate dogs may be housed.

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

A. E. Stocker, a blind merchant of Canton, O., is the latest addition to the Aëro Club, and proposes to take part in the New York-Chicago contests for supremacy in aëronautics.

Ex-Judge J. J. Hoyt of Duluth, Minn., says he has lived for seventy years, and has not had a day's illness in all that time, thus having had more pleasure in life than could be purchased with a million dollars.

Archibald McIntosh of Brockton, Mass., believes he is entitled to the title of purveyor of musical instruments to royalty. McIntosh some years ago came into possession of two leaves of a table, owned in Halifax, which had been used by the Duke of Kent, grandfather of King Edward, while he was on this side of the Atlantic. As McIntosh, who was born in Scotland, was once a member of the British army, he thought it would be a fine thing to make a violin out of the wood and present it to England's sovereign. This idea struck him while Queen Victoria was alive, so after he had finished the instrument he sent it to her. She dispatched a note of thanks to him. Recently McIntosh finished another of the violins and this he forwarded to King Edward, who also sent him a letter of thanks, saying that the instrument would be kept in the royal music room.

John J. Crouse of Pittsburgh is the possessor of a gold piece presented to him by the late King Carlos of Portugal. The gift was made by the King as an appreciation of the first boxing bout he had witnessed. In 1904 the North Atlantic fleet was in the Tagus River, near Lisbon. The laws of that country contain a mandate that when a male person reaches the age of 18 he must enter the army. While the fleet was at anchor the Crown Prince Luiz reached the eighteen-year limit, and a general holiday was declared to mark the event. One of the features of the festivities was the visit of several members of the fleet to the Portuguese capital under the escort of Admiral Barker. During the visit two American sailors, Crouse and a man named Nelson, agreed to give a boxing exhibition before the King. It was for that bout that Crouse was given the gold coin.

St. Louis has two people to whom February 22, Washington's Birthday, has special significance. They are George and Martha Washington, brother and sister, just turning the twenties, and they trace their descent from Samuel Washington, brother of George Washington. They are the children of Dr. Nicholson Washington, and are proud of their names and of their ancestry.

BEAUTIES.

Mrs. George Crockenthorpe, who has created something of a sensation in London this winter, will be remembered as the daughter of Gen. Sickles. She appeared at a ball in London in the costume of Queen Louise, and it was pronounced a most decided success. Her beauty is much praised, and she is one of the American women in that city who is much sought after, being quite as witty and brilliant as she is beautiful.

Miss Gladys Parker Deacon, the most beautiful American woman in Europe, is announced to be about to marry Baron Antoine de Charette, who is a descendant of Charles X of France. Miss Deacon has been a favorite in European society for several years, being a great friend of the Duchess of Marlborough and of aristocratic French families. The Crown Prince of Germany fell in love with her and announced he was willing to give up the throne to marry her. The affair was soon settled by diplomatists, however, and Miss Deacon has not been in Germany since.

Mrs. Charlemagne Tower, the beautiful wife of the American Ambassador to Germany, who is to return to this country in the early spring, finds that ing her exit difficult. So great a success has been Mrs. Tower socially in the official world of the German capital that Emperor William himself views the departure of this brilliant woman with personal regrets.

ACTIVE WOMEN.

Mrs. J. A. Booker, formerly of Washington, D. C., who has been blind since she was 9 years old, has been secured to preside at the large pipe organ in the Duquesne Presbyterian Church at Pittsburgh, Pa. Mrs. Booker has had twenty-three years' experience as organist in churches, and is said to be an adept in playing both the pipe organ and the piano. Among the churches in which Mrs. Booker has played are: St. Dominick's Catholic, Third Presbyterian and Second Presbyterian of Washington, D. C.; East North Avenue Presbyterian and St. Ann's Catholic, Baltimore, and the First Presbyterian Church of Lynchburg, Va.

Mrs. Caroline C. Furbush of West Newton, Mass., has presented to the Navy Department for the Naval Academy at Annapolis, a valuable historical painting by Thomas Birch of the "Battle Between the Constitution and the Guerriere." Birch was an artist of a century ago, and was one of the first designers of United States coins at the Philadelphia mint. He painted his naval battle picture in 1828.

The only woman bank president of staid New England is Mrs. Elisabeth Burleigh Davidson of New York Harbor, Me. She is the head of the York County National Bank. The bank was organized in 1893 by her husband, and at that time Mrs. Davidson was much interested in her home duties. When her husband died, Vice-President Walker was elected to his office, and Mrs. Davidson succeeded Mr. Walker as vice-president. On the death of Mr. Walker, she became the president, and has held the office for two years with success.

Mrs. Robley D. Evans, wife of the admiral in the United States navy, was before her marriage Miss Charlotte Taylor of Washington, D. C., a very charming woman and a noted beauty. She is very fond of travel, and has had considerable of it. She is noted for the grace with which she presides in her own home.

The grand total of the money benefits that the residence of Mrs. Eddy has conferred upon Concord, N. H., is estimated at $1,570,000, and there is widespread regret among her neighbors that she has left them. Besides her donations to charity, the church, and other things, Mrs. Eddy gave $25,000 for good roads. Mrs. Eddy has now moved to Newton, Mass.

HEROES.

Oscar F. Nelson, chief engineer in a sawmill at New Richmond, Wis., possesses a medal of heroism presented to him by Congress. He is a survivor of the Bennington disaster at San Diego in 1905. His act of bravery consisted in his efforts to rescue others on board the fated ship after having been himself blown up by the explosion. After he recovered consciousness he brought three persons out alive from the hell of flame and steam and boiling water. Nelson, whose rank was that of chief machinist, on board the Bennington, has seen service in all parts of the world. He worked as a machinist on the trans-Siberian Railway, and he has served two years in

OUR EACH-AND-ALL GROUP—With the Young Folks—Letters and Storie

GENERAL MEETING.

A GENERAL meeting of the Each and All Society of the Los Angeles Times is called for next Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the rest-room of The Times. The purpose of the meeting is to get the old and new members better acquainted with each other and with the various chapters of the organization, and to propose news plans for future enjoyment of the work.

There are many new lines of endeavor which may be worked out, both for usefulness and for pleasure, and as there has not been a meeting for so many months, the editor of this department believes the young women should be able to discuss important matters first-hand, occasionally, and be able to form social acquaintances and estimates of the members of the Each and All whom they have not met before.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed on the statement that the meeting for Wednesday afternoon will be an open one, a general one; all who are devoted to the Each and All Society are invited to be present. Suggestions from all members for the good of the organization will also be in order. All shall thus have a chance to "talk out" at meeting, and it is a foregone conclusion that members taking advantage of this privilege will have something good to say.

This Wednesday afternoon meeting is to be an entirely informal affair, planned primarily for the purpose of having members meet personally and discuss informally ways and means of carrying on successfully an organization which has always been a source of much instruction, entertainment and pleasure for Each and All.

Here is a memorandum to paste on your dresser mirror. I know this is a catchy place through experience: "General meeting of Each and All Society, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rest Room, Times Office."

Two Popular Chapters.

Inclosed please find addressed envelope. Kindly send me addresses of chairman of "Would-be Authors" and the "Walking Chapter" promoter. Did not expect so prompt recognition of my request for information. I am glad to see that a general meeting is to be called soon. I cannot hope that my suggestion last week prompted the thought, but I am glad we are of the same faith. Sincerely yours,

MRS. J. W. F. (Los Angeles.)

Mental telepathy must have been the agent here, since folks interested in the same thing seemed to have the same thought at the same time. I hope you will find the time set for the meeting convenient for you to attend.

Wants to Join Two.

I am delighted with the Each and All Society's new department, and am especially interested in the "Would-be Authors" and "Walking" chapters. Indeed, a cross-country chapter would prove a delight to many who feel the need of open-air exercise. I want you to put me down in your list of both, and I will send addressed envelope for Would-be Authors address. I might own a few badly-written things, no doubt, and a desire to do more, not so badly. Your [illegible] has overcome my scruples against my photo in The Times. Pardon this "epistle." You are doing much for Each and All and will succeed. Sincerely,

J. M. (Los Angeles.)

At the general meeting we hope to have a good representation of both the chapters you mention. Be on hand early and get acquainted.

Wants to Know.

I would like to have a little information regarding the Each and All Society, for I am one of the old numbers. I would like to join the Los Angeles Chapter and meet some of the girls. Also would like to join the "Walking Chapter," as I am obliged to walk every day. Please let me know in regard to this. Have you a "Musical Chapter" yet? If so, that would interest me greatly. I am taking vocal lessons of Prof. Paulin, director of the Lyric and Ellis clubs. I can also play some. I would like the list of those wishing to exchange postals and the address of A. R. Rheinfals, Germany. Hoping to receive an early reply.

A. T. (Los Angeles.)

Bless your dear heart, we have been publishing steadily for three weeks the new order of things, as the Each and All Society will be conducted now. The society is not confined alone to this city, but is intended for all of Southern California and surrounding territory. Try to attend the general meeting, of which notice is given at the top of this page today.

For Stamp Collectors.

Will you please insert in next Sunday's issue that the Stamp Chapter will meet at my office the first Monday in each month (weather permitting) and that all stamp collectors are welcome? We had no meeting last month on account of the rain. Collectors are requested to bring their albums and duplicates and exchange stamps and get acquainted. We have had most enjoyable and interesting meetings.

Please also forward the inclosed letter to A. R., Rheinfals, Germany.

Thanking you for your attention, I remain, sincerely yours,

ANNA B. DESSAU, 402 L. A. Trust Bldg.

Interested in Vocalists.

Please find inclosed a 2-cent stamp for which I would be pleased if you will send me the address of the president of the Singing Chapter, or that of one of its members, as I should like to get in touch with it.

It has been long since the Singing Chapter had a gathering, but with the advent of many new members interested in this line, the Singing Chapter will in due course prove one of the most attractive branches of Each and All.

Walking Chapter Again.

I would be pleased to have my name in the Each and All Society again. I have been a member for over a year. I am very much in favor of the Walking Chapter and know it will be fine. Is there a president for this chapter? and if so, I would like to hear the particulars about it from her or any one.

NAVAJO.

The chapter of which you write is in course of formation. If you will send me a self-addressed stamped envelope, I will send you the name of the promoter of the Walking Chapter.

Pyrography, Magazines and Stamps.

I do so want to learn pyrography, and should be glad to exchange embroidery or duchess lace lessons, or even fancy crochet slippers, for lessons in such work.

Also I have a quantity of magazines and papers that I will give to any one sending postage. I'm not much interested in postals, but am in stamps. I must have 1000 different stamps, and should like so much to exchange.

I'm going to tell you what else I like, or, perhaps, I had better say I like all things that better and brighten one's life, and I crowd in as much of the good things in life as I can, including birds, fancy work, housework, gardening, children, flowers, music, reading, stamps, and—last of all, but not least—my fad of collecting five-piece tea sets.

My new one, which my husband gave me a week ago, is in the shape of tomatoes. The teapot, sugar, creamer and cups are tomatoes, and the saucers are lettuce leaves.

The things I want to take up are principally these: Pyrography, stenography, pressing and mounting seaweed and helping young girls without mothers. To these I will give help in housework and sewing, or will aid any of the girls, young or old, in millinery.

MRS. E. F. B. (Los Angeles, Cal.)

Will the writer of the above send her address to the Each and All Editor of The Times?

Gratitude Expressed.

I hope you will excuse the seeming neglect on my part in not writing sooner. It was a most pleasant surprise, after so long silence, to enter the postoffice and receive three beautiful letters and post cards from the members of the Each and All Society a few days ago. You may be sure they brought consolation to me, and none but those who have been through it can truly know what a lonely life is, or how the soul reaches out for a little sympathy in the way of society and congeniality. Ah! what we women suffer! Over and over again it has seemed that I could not bear up, but the strength has come. "Where there is a will, there is a way." I can only do the little things in life for my invalid sisters in the way of sending post cards, books, quilt pieces, and cooking recipes of all kinds. Will gladly pass them on. Now, I am going to tell you a little about my husband; please pardon the egotism. He has been very ill since I last wrote. Under the doctor's care for the last five weeks, unable to do hard work, as he is fighting the asthma, for it is damp on this ranch. The doctor says if he could go where it is high, in the foothills, and drink mountain water and rest for one month, he thinks he might be able to cure the old trouble. If my husband could only get his health again, what a blessing it would be to us. Our doctor has been such a sterling friend to us. Perhaps some of the members of Each and All may know of some such place as the doctor recommends, where expenses would not be beyond us, for we have spent a small fortune within the past two years.

Josephine Myers,

one of the earnest well-wishers of the Each and All Society.

Blessings on the members who sent a ray of sunshine into this lonely life, battling against such overpowering odds, and who must lose sight of self and administer help and cheer to a sick and no doubt disheartened partner. If any member should know or can learn of such a place as is above described, lose no time in sending the address in to the Editor, that it may be immediately forwarded.

The Each and All Spirit.

In response to your request for names of chairmen of the various chapters, I will send you mine as chairman of the Domestic Science Chapter, which is one of the oldest in Each and All and of which I have been at the head for two and a half years.

We have done good work in our chapter and have thirty-six members at present, but only three or four are from our own vicinity, all the rest being eastern members. I have often regretted the fact that we could not be in personal touch and I have many ideas of great interest which are not practical except when so used, so that I am ready, if you wish, to help form a chapter of housekeepers, which shall be strictly local, have meeting places and discuss our various topics of interest and be of mutual benefit. I am willing to become chairman, pro tem. of such a chapter.

I hope to be at the general meeting and am ready to help you in any way that I can to get the Los Angeles contingency back to successful work. Yours sincerely,

MRS. E. P. R.

Here is a member who has the beautiful "Each and All" spirit perfectly developed. "Will help form a chapter, if we wish it." I shall speak for the Each and All members and state we do wish it and most earnestly. We shall all look forward with pleasure to the prospect of shaking your hand on meeting day.

A New Idea.

I wonder whether any Each and All girls besides myself ever feel limited by their vocabularies. I wish they would tell us how they develop a better command of language.

As I read, I underscore words, of the meaning of which I am uncertain, the ones that I cannot pronounce, and those which I am not in the habit of using, and look them up and jot them down on cards, with the sentences in which the author used them, and lay the cards on my bureau. In the mornings, as I dress, I study, from the cards and learn the spelling, pronunciation, meaning and derivation of the words, and then, during the day, try to use them naturally in conversation. Usually I can learn four or five new words each week day in time that would otherwise be wasted mentally—that will be over twelve hundred in a year. I am surprised at the number of words with whose significance I am familiar that I cannot pronounce, and with the number which I have seen in print again and again of whose meanings I have only a vague idea. Scarcely less surprised am I at the number of words whose meaning and pronunciation I know, that I never use, although many times I could express myself more clearly and forcibly by employing them. Am I the only one thus handicaped?

I am in hope that the "Would-be Authors," of which chapter I am chairman, may do a little vocabulary work on the side. I should like to know how to plan a co-operative study of words to make it effective, and keep it from growing dry and uninteresting. Can any of the teacher girls or others offer suggestions?

MARGUERITE WINNIFRED.

As a matter of fact, most people have a very limited vocabulary, which, however, seems to fill the needs of ordinary conversation.

The plan above suggested is a splendid method to improve and extend the scope of one's vocabulary and no doubt will be applied by many. Clearness in the expression of an idea, whether spoken or written, should be the very first aim.

OUTDOOR CLUB FOR BOYS AND GIRLS.

BY EOBBY CRUSOE.

Although this is in the midst of the "winter" season in California, the weather is not too bad—unless it rains—for hardy boys to sleep out in some of the cañons and washes, with the proper precautions. But I would not advise any but those who are used to the practice to try it. However, in spare moments boys may prepare an equipment for the spring season in the foothills and mountains.

Probably the most indispensible article is the sleeping bag, or some substitute. As patent sleeping bags are beyond the reach of most of the boys, a home-made article is just as comfortable and preferable to most because it can be used for other purposes.

The most valuable article of a camper's equipment is a piece of canvas. For a man of ordinary size, a piece six and a half feet long by six wide is about the thing, and for a boy it can be cut in proportion to suit his size. For those who can afford it a new piece can be purchased for $1.50, and less for boys' size. But boys can rustle an old piece about the house or barn occasionally which is good enough to turn water.

Fold the piece of canvas in the middle the narrowest way. At one end of the crease cut off diagonally about an inch and a half of the goods.

Turn up the under edge along the foot of the canvas so that the edge of the upper fold drops over it. Along the upper side of the turned-up under edge sew on a row of horn buttons two or three inches from the edge of the canvas. Reverse the buttons so that they sew on as a saucer would stand on a table. Put them about six inches apart. Then sew a corresponding row of buttons along the under side of the upper fold so that when in position the buttons will touch the corresponding buttons.

Then sew on buttons along the under edge lengthwise of the canvas to a point about two-thirds of the way to the other end which will be the head. Place the buttons just a trifle further apart each time, for it will save time in fastening afterwards. Also sew corresponding buttons along the upper edge of the top fold.

Cut a lot of pieces of stout twine about nine inches long. Knot each end of these pieces. Then tie the pieces by the ends to the lower rows of buttons all around. Now you have your canvas prepared.

Now, to make a bed when you go out into the mountains. Select a level spot, not too sandy, but soft enougt to allow of digging. Shallow out the ground just a trifle at the places where your body fits in, so as to make it easy to lie. Then, if there are leaves available, spread them out evenly, allowing for the hollows where your body fits in, and making a pile where your head is to rest. If you have brought newspapers with you, spread them out over the leaves. Then lay your canvas with the bottom fold directly over the place hollowed out. Now spread your canvas out. Take your blanket and spread it over the top. If you have two blankets, spread out the second in like manner.

Fold the whole in the middle where the crease is in the canvas. Then take the other ends of the strings tied to the lower rows of buttons, and wind them about the corresponding buttons, fitting the canvas edges snugly. Take four or five wraps, and allow the ends to hang loose, as this will be sufficient to hold the canvas in place. Fasten the row all along the foot and about half way up the side. Then turn down the flap at the head, canvas and blanket; remove your shoes and crawl in. Remain in a sitting posture and fasten the strings on the remainder of the buttons. Then you may lie down and make yourself snug.

With the pile of leaves or dirt under your head, the canvas and blanket will be enough for a pillow. If you do not care to sleep in your coat, it may be rolled up and placed under your head.

For general use, this sleeping bag is the best and most practicable one I know of. During the day the canvas may be stretched as a shelter from the sun.

If one so desires, he may wear a skull cap of some kind at night, or even an ordinary cap.

In the morning, shake out your blankets. Spread them out, with the canvas on the bottom. Divide the space into thirds, and fold each outer third inward. Then roll up tightly. Tie the end of a heavy piece of cord around one end of the roll; pass the cord to the other end of the roll, allowing enough slack to that it can be slung over your shoulder; then tie the other end, and you have your blanket roll ready for traveling.

The temperature in the mountains is cool at night, and such a bed will be appreciated. One heavy army blanket is sufficient, or two of the kind that are used on beds. Two quilts or one comforter are about right, also, for those who have no blankets available.

The waters from the mountains are too high at the present time to allow of easy travel up the arroyos and cañons, but it will not be long before one can make the trip.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

THE little deaf children of the Grand-avenue School form a never ending subject of interest. They are such dear, lovable little girls and boys, who try so hard and have accomplished so much through sheer patience and perseverance on their own part as well as that of their devoted teachers. These pupils range from four to sixteen years of age. For Washington's birthday the story of this great man was told to them by Miss Frith, while they watched eagerly the movement of her lips which conveyed to their minds through their eyes what is made known to other children through their ears.

There is something inexpressibly pathetic in the earnest faces of the group of children and to note the stillness of the classroom. No subdued murmur of voices in studying is heard here, but the children are keenly alert to everything that is going on about them.

After the story of Washington was told and his pictured face studied, the children wrote the impressions they had gathered from what was related to them. These efforts were exceedingly good. One of the little girls, after studying the picture, asked her teacher by lip movement what made Washington look so sad. This query gives an idea of the keenness of the powers of observation in these little minds. Scarcely a child in the eighth grade would catch this expression evident in Washington's pictured face. Miss Frith, the director, repeated the question to the class. She wanted the views of the others on the question. Then the faces all took on the anxious look and with puckered brows Washington's portrait was closely studied again. Then a hand went up—a boy this time. "Because there was war," were the words his lips formed.

These children made pretty book covers of cardboard with a picture of Washington, decorated with the national colors, in which the carefully written leaflets of the story of Washington told in their own words, were placed. Then there were continental [illegible], decorated with red, white and blue, which also were candy boxes.

These [illegible] children have also taken up the sloyd work, girls as well as boys. One of these little girls, Lillie Rapport, who is only 11 years old, has made a chair. Lillie calls it a doll's chair, but it is a large, pretentious affair with a high back and curved arms which gives it more the appearance of a bishop's chair. [illegible] Reber, 10 years old, has made a cradle, a colonial affair, which could easily hold a baby quite comfortably. [illegible] was asked to give the dimensions of the cradle. One of her classmates, immediately realizing what was wanted, handed her a ruler. Quickly she measured off the inches and told in her lip language that the cradle was 22 inches long and 10 inches wide, and that it took her three weeks to make it, working possibly an hour each day.

There is a small philosopher in this classroom who states "when I feel ill-tempered I go off alone or shut myself up somewhere and fight it out." Miss Bennett receives these children when they are first entered in the classroom, and initiates them into the mysteries of the wonderful lip-movement language.

The Grand-avenue school has a very fine orchestra consisting of twelve instruments, under the direction of Miss [illegible], one of the kindergarten teachers. These young musicians range in age from 10 to 15 years. Through the painstaking efforts of the director, the whole school has acquired a taste for good music. Schubert's "March Militaire" and the Soldiers' chorus from "Carmen" are two among a list of musical classics executed by these little performers. The members are Clare Cardell, Myrtle Ryan, Charles Zgolslas, Rose Neuman, Joe Stearns, Wayland Hendry and Earl Amos, violins; Richard Bebrine, clarinet; B. Ellis, cornet; Herbert Prothage, triangle; Miss Brooks, piano, and Miss J. L. Jones, clarinet.

The children, even of the kindergarten of this school, have acquired a taste for good music, readily recognizing the introductory chords of any piece in the repertoire of the orchestra. These little people are now studying the story of "The Five Knights," with Sir Galahad as the Central figure.

The Mothers' Circle met last Wednesday and was very well attended.

Main-street School.

The Main-street school has graduated thirty pupils to the high schools, one of the largest classes in the city. The pupils of the eighth grade have formed a literary society, electing the following offices: Frank Parrish, president; William Roberts, vice-president; Ruth Pankey, secretary; Louise Schuster, treasurer. The society is to meet every two weeks and some regular course of literary work is to be followed.

The pupils are busy, under the guidance of Miss Finney, clipping magazines and periodicals of all matter of historical and geographical interest, which will be used for reference.

A mothers' meeting, largely attended, was held Wednesday, each room vieing with the others to have the largest representation of mothers present, for in recognition of the interest shown by the Mothers' Circle a large picture was purchased to be given to the grade whose mothers made the best showing.

There is a very dear kindergarten class in the Main-street school, under the direceion of Miss Powell. There are fifty-two youngsters, and they show very much interest in gardening just now. They have selected a plot on the school ground and have planted flowers and vegetables. They work in the garden once a week. The tots are very enthusiastic over the work, the only trouble being that many of the little ones are so anxious to see how the seeds are growing that they desire to dig them up for "just a peep."

It is a great treat to see these little folks go through the stately figures of the minuet. The little girls take on the quaint airs of the colonial dames of long ago, while the little boys become courtly cavaliers as those of olden times.

Immediately after this performance to the tune of "Soldier Boy," the children become enthusiastic patriots and the spirit of the revolution is in the air. Each boy, armed with a flag, takes his partner in a march around the room, while "Three Cheers for the Red, White and Blue" is sung. These are wonderfully versatile little people.

Not long ago these children were selected for the bestowal of a great compliment when Mrs. Linnet, a dainty little bird-wife, built her nest right in the shrubbery of a hanging basket in the center of the kindergarten room. Five wonderful little birdlings were hatched out. Each day the children would sing a song for Mrs. Linnet and her babies, which the mamma and fledglings seemed to enjoy, for the mother always chirped joyously in answer.

Then, too, every day the little boys and girls got a peep into the nest, first" at the five pretty round eggs, and later at the birdlings. The three teachers of the class would make a ladder with their hands and the little tots would climb up and take a peep into the nest. The children would not permit the teacher to water the ferns in the hanging basket for fear the dampness would cause the birdies to take rheumatism, and so the plants withered and died, a sacrifice to the survival of the fittest.

But "the best of friends must part," and so when the energetic little mother took her brood and flitted away to enjoy the greenery and sunshine of outdoors, the children were so sorry, but they received some compensation while mamma taught the little birdies to use their wings and fly farther and farther away from the home nest each morning children are hoping that mamma bird will return to hatch her next brood in the fern basket, and they have prepared a new house, with nice green plants all around, for her reception.

Twenty-three of the kindergarten children were promoted to B1 grade last month, and the other children entertained at a farewell party in their honor.

The members of the orchestra are re- Merriman, and before long will be able to provide the school with first-class music. The orchestra is composed of pupils of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades.

Fortieth-street School.

The Fortieth-street school had a wonderful exhibition of school work last Friday night, given under the auspices of the Mothers' Circle, the members having decorated the school and put in electric lights for the evening. It was the purpose of the Mothers' Circle to hold the exhibition at night in order that parents of the children attending the school would have the opportunity of visiting the school and examining the work of the pupils. It is estimated that fully 700 persons were in attendance.

A very attractive programme was presented. Mrs. M. B. Ludlow, a former leader of this school, gave a very beautiful flute solo, being accompanied on the piano by Mr. Curtis. There was a chorus made up of the pupils in the different grades, and a flag and soldier drill by forty-five children of the kindergarten and second grade.

James O. Kane, one of the pupils of the eighth grade, recited Lincoln's Gettysburg Speech. Glen Scofield, Dwight Kendig and Avery Bennett recited.

The exhibition of the pupils' work attracted much attention. Emma Gamble, 9 years old and of the first grade, wove a beautiful scarf of many colors. She did the work at home. Pupils of the fifth grade exhibited samples of cake and bread made at home. The teachers and women of the child study class acted as a reception committee. The circle meets on the second Wednesday of each month.

The Olive-street School.

A number of the boys of the Olive-street schools have formed a walking club from among the members of the seventh and eighth grades. The boys are training every day and propose to get in condition to attempt a trip up Mt. Wilson. They take walks about town, going a little farther every day, and thus hope to be in fine shape for the long hard climb to the snow line and above, if they feel like it. The boys will take the cars to Sierra Madre and from there attempt the nine-mile walk up the trail. Walking has become very popular and recruits to the club are being added daily.

Last Friday's debate by the boys was on the topic, "Should the Japanese be permitted to take part in the entertainment of the fleet?" The negative side Silverstein and Charles Harris for the affirmative; John Mersch Clarence received the decision, after a very spirited contest. Those who took part in the debate were Samuel Moody, Nathan Parke and Walter Teague for the negative. The subject for the next debate, on March 6, is "Resolved, that Theodore Roosevelt should serve a third term."

WHY MY DAUGHTER ENJOYS HEALTH.

BY PROF EDWARD J. ROBINSON.

I fail to recall a single instance in my thirty years' career as a physical culturist where a man, woman or child enjoyed perfect physical health without indulging in some form of exercise. attern Sales Are Booming

Since Installing the New Ladies' Home Journal Patterns

Although but two weeks since we announced the opening of the new Ladies Home Journal Pattern department the sales have doubled and tripled. Isn't that proof that we've made the right move?

We didn't make this pattern change at a moment's notice. We've studying the situation and over a year ago negotiated for the agency, we are ing up with the march of progress.

After much consideration and great expense we discontinued a pattern which rried for over 10 years to take the agency hese popular patterns, believing from vation, and the experience of thousands erchants throughout the country, that is a greater demand for them than other pattern made.

simple a child can use them, and yet curate one can be their own dressmaker. show you wherein these patterns exnd how thoroughly good they are, we with us Miss Goodsell, an expert from ome office. She will be glad to give ny information you desire regarding erits of the Ladies' Home Journal Pat- Aisle 11.

A Bargain Landslide that's it. The headlines tell the story. Monday the Broadway Department Store will be the scene of the greatest activity of the year.

Cost and profit have been thrown to the four winds, every item in this ad was put there with the intention of bringing a great crowd here Monday. No matter what the attractions may be elsewhere, no matter what bargain news you may read, you can't afford to pass by this great Bargain Budget.

Take this fact into consideration. The values are absolutely to be depended upon. No misrepresentation, no exaggeration, we are hitting right out from the shoulder, to make the Broadway the busiest store in Los Angeles Monday.

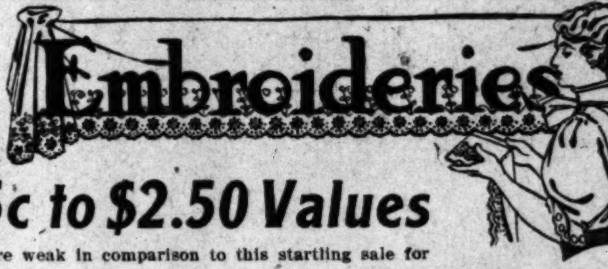
Some 40-inch Skirtings Included, 35c to $2.50 Values



19c Yd.

Yes, we've had embroidery events before, but all other embroidery events are weak in comparison to this startling sale for Monday.

10,000 yards of it. Not a piece in the lot worth less than 35c, some of them are actually worth $2.50, sounds like exaggeration, but it's a fact, see them in the window, they tell their own story. They've just arrived in time for this sale Monday. The latest patterns, on finest Swiss and cambric, open work, allover eyelet patterns, wide flouncings, corset covers, elaborate panels, some skirtings that are 40 inches wide, also band insertions. Note this fact every piece you see on display in the window will be on the counters when the doors open at 8 o'clock. We're going to have the biggest embroidery crowd we've ever had. The buyer says, "Give me the biggest available space in which to handle them." Find them in aisle 5, on the great big Bargain center. Be here when the doors open to share in the cream of this, but even if you do come late you will get a big bargain in any piece in the lot at 19c yard.

STOCKHOLDERS — ANTI-FRICTION JOURNAL BOX COMPANY—

You are being handed a document under the guise of what its framer is pleased to call a "Report of the Board of Directors to Stockholders," but which in reality is a gathering together under one head of some samples of the dope you have been fed on at 215 South Broadway for the past six months, and is conspicuous for its utter lack of logical purpose to honestly clear the situation of its perplexities. What it gives you as a "disclosing of true conditions" is nothing but a display of wordy gymnastics by a clever veteran practiced in the art of twisting and distorting a few facts, the crafty stating of half truths, and purposely withholding of well-known facts which would tend to throw an entirely different light on the matter at issue, which is what the board most desire shall not be accomplished.

The framers of this "report," knowing full well that the true responsibility for existing conditions was finally their monumental blunder of the telegram of October 21st, are engaged in a desperate effort now to cast the odium of failure on my shoulders. I have asked for a clean-cut show-down along manly lines before your committee, but the evident purpose is to stab me in the back, and by devilish insinuation and cowardly innuendo to draw your attention from the actual issue and thus prevent your discovery of actual causes for failure. The "report" maliciously withholds the fact that when I made the contract with Mr. Newton for the 20,000 shares of stock at a dollar, my wired intelligence was answered by their telegram instructing me to hold all stock at $5 and to let none go for less, thus advising me to repudiate my contract, and the twaddle about my treachery to Mr. Newton but serves to show their poverty of resource in their search for spots on the sun.

You are being worked overtime on the thought of my expenditures, but nothing is said about the closing of the stock books contrary to my advice with a few thousand dollars on hand, and of the eight exhausted stock books which are mute testimonials of the orgy of stock speculation for personal gain while the treasury was suffering for funds and a handful of men were cleaning up over a hundred thousand dollars on manipulation of Anti-Friction stock, news of which reached the financial circles in the East and made my work difficult and covered the credit of the company with a stain from which it will be difficult to recover.

The sole issue between the board and myself is whether the highest duty to stockholders is to consummate the deals by which every promise contained in my open letter of May 23d, 1907, which is handed you in connection with the Brown matter, or whether every single interest must be submerged under the mire of personal abuse and the sinking of every obligation, no matter how sacred, under a desire for a pettifogging attempt to discredit my work and motives, and a denial of proofs so patent and strong as to give the lie to each and every imputation of my failure, and just so long as you permit yourselves to continue to drag these chestnuts regardless of your own burns, then just so long may you hope to experience the difference between the actual and legitimate values of Anti-Friction stock which my work gave it and can again establish, and the gradual drifting toward the bottom of the list.

I have offered to show you the actual situation, free from bias and narrow personalities, which are the product of the slums, in order that you might take intelligent action and thus save the situation, since, unfortunately for you, matters have arrived where you alone can extricate yourselves; but you are at the forks of the road and these acrobatic jugglers in terms and phrases are endeavoring, in every cowardly manner, and a refusal to meet the issue like men, to induce you to take the one which leads to certain continuance of the present conditions. The choice is up to you, and the wail of the uneasy conscience at the close of the "report," asking you to send your proxies to some fellow named Billings as the only alternative to the suicide of sending them to me, is only amusing, and is consistent with the standard of Indian warfare so attractive. My challenge for proofs still holds good.

Market Notes.

Interest in the new district of Rawhide shows no sign of abatement, and with the glowing reports we have at hand, we feel safe in saying that before very long Rawhide will take its place as the greatest treasure-house of Nevada. It is too early yet, and development work is not far enough advanced for anyone to say which mine will be the "New Mohawk," but Balloon Hill is the hub of the wheel, and we strongly advise those of our clients who have the least speculative tendency to invest in this locality. We have a very good map of the district, and will be glad to have anyone interested call at our office and look it over.

The failure of the Goldfield mines to reach an agreement as to the wage scale and conditions under which the miners should be employed caused a weakening in Goldfield stocks during the last few days. Our advices indicate that the Consolidated people were responsible for the deadlock. It is unfortunate that the management of the largest mine should thus hold the district back, but there seems little doubt but what many of the leases and independent mines will resume active operations in a few days without waiting for the big company.

We still recommend the purchase of the leading Goldfield, Tonopah and Fairview stocks. The ore is blocked out in their workings, and anyone buying for cash is assured of big profits within the year.

The hearing of the Jumbo Extension "Apex" case has been finally set for tomorrow. President Lockhart promises to put up a great fight for the company, and we have a great deal of confidence in both Mr. Lockhart's judgment and his fighting ability.

And hundreds of others, good, bad and indifferent, but if you ask my advise I will try and tell you the truth about any stocks and I consider I am the best posted man in town. Rawhide is still booming, but I advise the public to go slow and only buy the best companies who own their ground and have a good showing, keep away from the wildcats.

Hart is also booming and I believe it has come to stay. Los Angeles people should give the preference to Hart as it is in San Bernardino county and tributary to this city. (WATCH HART.) also watch 29 PALMS, it is a solid good mining camp. Only about 155 miles from this city in San Bernardino county it already has mills and shipping mines. Two of the best buys there, is the Mohawk Herald L. and M. Company at 25c. Gold Park Consolidated at 20c.

I will take any one up to the mines who purchases enough stock to make it worth while and show them. You are from Missouri, I can show you.

RELIGIOUS.

NEW CHAIR IN UNIVERSITY.

Instruction on Missions in School of Theology.

Bible League Is About to Start Institute.

"Mel" Trotter Is Attraction This Afternoon.

It has been determined to establish a chair of missions, in connection with the Maclay School of Theology of the University of Southern California.

Dr. E. A. Healy, dean of the school, said last night that no one has yet been appointed regularly to the proposed chair, but that it is likely to be made a permanent part of the school. A number of students of the university who are preparing to go into the mission field have interested themselves in the movement. Miss Elaine Anderson, who has charge of the missionary work of the Young Women's Christian Association of the university, and who contemplates entering the foreign-mission field, made the announcement to the association at its last meeting.

Rev. Dr. George B. Smythe, general secretary of foreign missions on the Pacific Coast, is in Los Angeles and will begin next week a series of afternoon lectures in line with the new movement. Dr. Smythe was for twenty years president of the Foochow University in China, and, being a most forceful and entertaining speaker, will lend enthusiasm to the work. At the close of the Smythe lectures, Dr. Eli McClish of this city will take up the work, under the direction of Dean Healy. Dr. McClish is also a polished and entertaining speaker, and those who hear the lectures will get a feast of good things.

Dr. Robert McIntyre will lecture before the School of Theology, in the college chapel, on Tuesday afternoon, on "Analytics." The ability of Dr. McIntyre assures something rare.

Melvin E. Trotter, rescue evangelist, who will talk on "Something Doing."

BIBLE LEAGUE.
WILL ESTABLISH FREE SCHOOL.

The Los Angeles Bible League, Dr. J. A. Gordon, president, will open a Bible Institute at No. 260 South Main street, on March 10, where they will have splendidly equipped quarters for the accommodation of a large number of students. The purpose of the institute will be the training of men and women for practical Christian work, and the Bible will be the chief text-book. Any Christian of adult age, properly recommended, will be admitted to the school. There will be no educational test, nor will there be any charge for tuition.

A convention of the Bible League will be held in the First United Presbyterian Church on March 2 and 3. The first session will be held tomorrow night, and will be presided over by Dr. E. A. Healy, dean of the Maclay School of Theology. Ministers of all denominations will take part, the principal address being by Rev. Albert H. Smith of Pasadena, on the subject, "The Bible and the Christian Ministry."

Dr. Hugh K. Walker will preside at Tuesday morning's session, and the principal address will be by Dr. George Soltau of London. Tuesday afternoon, Rev. W. W. Logan, chairman; W. E. Blackstone, chief speaker. Tuesday evening, Judge Wilbur, chairman; speaker, Dr. J. Q. A. Henry, whose subject will be: "The Mutilated Bible."

These set talks will be in the midst of sessions filled with interest, where there will be many brief talks and plenty of good music.

TROTTER MEETING.
PICTURESQUE EVANGELIST.

Melvin E. Trotter, though superintendent of a great rescue mission at Grand Rapids, Mich., has spent most of his time since he visited Los Angeles in February, 1907, in evangelistic work, through many States.

He has during this time made a campaign through the Southern States with Dr. Chapman and "Billy" Sunday, and has been instrumental in establishing many evangelistic missions.

Mr. Trotter is regarded by church people of all denominations as a representative of the efforts of the churches in behalf of the masses who will not go to any church. He is a man full of magnetism, born of a deep sympathy for the fellow who is down, and his own wonderful life-story appeals to these in a remarkable way.

He has been wonderfully successful in his work, and has made place for himself as one of the phenomenal entertainers of his class. It is asserted that he has turned down offers of a fabulous salary if he would drop the rescue work, simply for the joy of saving men, and go into another line for money-making.

He will address a mass meeting in Temple Auditorium this afternoon at 3 o'clock, when his subject will be: "Something Doing." There will be vocal and instrumental music by individuals and singing by a great chorus.

NOON-DAY MEETINGS.
BROTHERHOOD OF ST. ANDREW.

During the forty days of Lent, beginning next Wednesday, noon-day services will be held in St. Paul's Pro-Cathedral, following the annual custom adopted several years ago by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

Bishop Johnson has secured as the speaker for the entire period, Rev. Dr. Butler, a man of rich experience. He began his ministry as assistant in the cathedral at Davenport, Iowa; later he became rector of the Church of the Epiphany, New York, and became especially active in mission work. He was then called to become Warden of Seabury Divinity College, Faribault, Minn., where for ten years he was active in the education of the clergy. He has written much on Sunday-schools, and is connected with the advancement of the best educational work of the Episcopal Church.

The meetings at the Pro-Cathedral will begin each day at 12:10 o'clock, p. m., and will continue for twenty minutes.

RELIGIOUS BRIEFS.
MONTH'S REVIVAL CLOSES.

Today will be the closing day of the revival in the First Baptist Church, and the day will be marked by the reception of a large number of new members in the morning and the celebration of the Holy Communion. In the evening Dr. Henry will perform the rite of baptism and will preach on "The Suburbs of Sodom." It will also be the last day for Prof. Stout, the vocalist, and he will sing "The Holy City," at both services, as well as other of his favorite sacred songs.

The choir of St. James Methodist Church will give a concert tonight, in lieu of the regular service. It will be conducted by J. Benson Starr, the new director of the choir, with the assistance of a number of vocalists, among them being Mrs. L. I. Stadden and Miss Mabel Clark, sopranos; Miss Carrie F. Tallman, contralto.

The pre-lenten concert, to be given in Mammoth Hall by the choir of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, tomorrow evening, promises to be of much interest. Among the attractions will be the singing by Mrs. Baker P. Lee of a song of her own composition.

STATE OFFICERS ENJOINED.

Insurance Companies Win Temporary Victory in Fight on Peculiar Law in Missouri.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 29.—Judge Slover, in the Circuit Court here, today issued a temporary injunction restraining the Missouri State officials from ousting from this State the Prudential Life Insurance Company of New Jersey, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York and the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York for violating the law passed by the last Legislature, prohibiting any company that pays its officials a salary of $50,000 or over from doing business in the State.

CROOK ASKS FOR PARDO

Get-Rich-Quick Fitzsimm Tired of Jail.

Sends Petition to Presiden Set Him Free.

Prison Officials Think H "Bughouse."

Orlando K. Fitzsimmons, the rich-quick" crook, has applied t President of the United States f pardon. He wants to get out o County Jail just as soon as possibl cause he has some financial the he desires to put in practice, and operations are limited in his pr quarters.

As president of the Cumulative it Company, which had offices upon a time in the Mason Operah building, Fitzsimmons fractured laws regarding lotteries. A fraud der was issued against him by Postoffice Department, and he was rested and tried before Judge born in the United States Court sentenced to six months in jail. then he has been a prisoner in County Jail, and at present is a tr and a model one.

Up in the jail, many of the offi say that Fitzsimmons is "bughous "He's crazy over his financial tem of regenerating the world abolishing poverty," remarked on ficial.

Evidently there are some people do not appreciate the remark genius of Mr. Fitzsimmons, though they may not be the cred of the defunct "Credit" company.

SECRET PETITION.

Everything has been done by Fitzsimmons and his friends to secret the presentation of his pet for a pardon to the Departmen Justice at Washington. It was clared yesterday in the offices of U States Dist.-Atty. Lawler and U States Marshal Youngworth that ing was known of any petition pardon for Fitzsimmons.

"I think, before any such petit acted upon it will be referred to office," said United States Deputy trict Attorney McCormick.

Yet it is true that such a peti has been forwarded to Washin and has not yet been referred to local office. When it is, there chance that Fitzsimmons will get of jail before the pardon becomes erative.

"Why, how did you find out th have applied for a pardon?" as Fitzsimmons, when seen in the Co Jail yesterday. "I did not know any one here except a few friends of it.

"I am anxious to get out and back to my life work," continued Fitzsimmons. "Have you read book, 'Metamorphose?' That wil plain the principles of my work tell you, if these principles had in effect before this bankers' there would not have been any I am really a teacher, but I a practical man, and realize the ch must come slowly.

DID IT HIMSELF.

"Yes, I have drawn up the peti for my pardon and sent it to a fr in the East who will present it President Roosevelt. There are letters, too, which will go with petition. My friend will see that will not be too much red-tape bec that will delay things so that my here will be up before the pa reached me.

"Some people might call me a Soc ist or an anarchist, but I am really one. I am broad-minded eno to see good in all parties, the Repu can party, the Democratic party, have good in them. So has the Soc ist party. But I am not a Socialist "What am I? Well, that would another volume to explain. My simply deals with the causes of th If these causes were done away people would be happier. There w not have to be so many laws. T are too many laws now.

"Present conditions should changed. The newspapers should lish only what is good. Profit is ity; somebody says 'Buy from me cause I need the money,' and so body else says, 'No, buy from then they lie about it in their adv tisements. Lawyers are most of the most vicious things on earth, are harpies. But all these things be changed when my system is und stood."

Mrs. Fitzsimmons is proving her a devoted wife of the former rich-quick" financier and calls at jail whenever the regulations per and has been the hardest worke order to get her husband's pardon fore the President.

HOW HE FEELS.

The prisoner spoke in the high terms of the jail as conducted Sheriff Hammel and stated that it the best in the United States.

"Not that I have had much exp ence in jails," he added.

Fitzsimmons did not seem to th that he had done anything wrong which he should be imprisoned evidently thinks that "conducting lottery" and breaking the laws of United States is nothing very seri without taking into consideration get-rich-quick schemes which ha made him known in half a score cities of the country.

"I feel that I do not hold a dol of anybody's money to which they entitled. Half a million dollars ha passed through my hands and n of it stuck. I have no money and property and am a poor man. when everybody understands this bo of mine then the world will be b I dictated that book in three wee after my trial."

In case the pardon applied for Fitzsimmons is refused the get-ric quick prisoner will get out of jail a little less than two months.

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—A week's fr opera for his subscribers is announc by Oscar Hammerstein of the Ma hattan Operahouse. The Manhatta proprietor yesterday invited his re ularly subscribing patrons to reta their seats for another week after th end of the twenty weeks for whic they have paid, assuring them would not cost them a cent.

Mr. Hammerstein says he gives th as a "benefit" to his subscribers, in stead of taking one himself, to sho his appreciation of their support. his letter the impresario says the a ditional week of opera

WHAT, AGAIN?

ER GROWING COLLECTION.

nother Lawsuit Added to Long Record.

t Mrs. Osborn Has Quietly Vanished as Usual.

oman Is Despair of Deputy Constables.

rs. Kitturia B. Osborn yesterday another lawsuit added to her va- collection. But she has not been ved with notice of it because, as al, the process server has not been e to find her.

here is not a process server in town o does not dread having the as- nment of presenting to Mrs. Osborn opy of the papers in any suit which y be instituted against her. Even most expert detectives have been fled by Mrs. Osborn.

he suit filed yesterday in the Supe- Court is by Harry E. Hall, a rcher of records for an abstract npany. He seeks to quiet title to lot at No. 2627 Magnolia avenue. o really owns the lot remains for court to decide.

is this quieting of title to things ich are claimed by Mrs. Osborn that kept the deputy constable and dep- sheriffs and other law officers on jump from time out of mind. Once y located her in a little outhouse r her home, and besieged her there day. Finally, they tried to upset house, and the self-made prisoner rendered and accepted service.

lore than once the defendant has ricaded her house and defied the uties, who have spent days at a e trying to catch her off her guard g enough to touch her with the fatal ument. In this case it promises to harder than ever, for the informa- given out by her family and ends is that she is in San Francisco. Don't you believe it," say the depu- , with emphasis.

ut apparently she might just as well so far as they are concerned, for y can't locate her.

ecently she wanted to borrow a few usand dollars. But her vacant lot worth only about $800. Right next r to the lot is a fine two-stor house. lender was steered up against the house and gladly shelled out the ney, and took a mortgage on—the ant lot.

f course, Mrs. Kitturia refused to , and the lender foreclosed the mort- ge. Imagine the lender's—s e was a man—surprise and other feelings en she found she owned the lot next r to the fine house.

s for the house on Magnolia avenue, re is a good story about it, which ld not be verified yesterday because . Kitturia B. could not be located usual.

his story is that the house did not her anything. She got the ma- al on credit, hired the carpenters, sons and others by the week, and en they did not get their money at end of the week they quit work. Mrs. Osborn had another relay of ready, and they went to work and t at the end of the week. Finally, last man quit just when the house s completed.

ust what the complication 's in re- d to the lot is also a mystery which Southern California Title and Ab- act Company of Temple street does explain. But those who have fol- ed the legal career of Mrs. Kitturia Osborn say they shouldn't wonder if very interesting.

nyway, it's a puzzle for the unlucky ige who tries to untangle the ques- n of ownership. Mrs. Osborn is a nkrupt upon petition of the Board of ade. City Auditor W. C. Mushet s formerly her trustee in bank- ptcy, and is made a defendant in the sent suit.

ROCLAIMS DAY OF THE TREE.

ayor Officially Sets Aside Next Saturday and Calls Attention to Its Special Fitness.

layor Harper has issued a procla- tion setting aside next Saturday as bor Day for Los Angeles. He says t the reason for selecting this es- cial day is that it is in the glorious ingtime when tree-planting should gin, and it is the official Arbor Day the Native Sons and Native Daugh- s.

he day will be a half-holiday at the y Hall, and the city officials will n with the Native Sons and Daugh- s in suitable exercises.

n his proclamation the Mayor says: 'I hereby designate Saturday, March 1908, as Arbor Day, in the city of s Angeles.

'This is the natal day of that izard' of field and garden, Luther rbank, and the official Arbor Day the order of Native Daughters of Golden West. It is at the request Native Daughters I make this signation in recognition of the mani- d blessings Luther Burbank be- wed upon mankind, causing the es of the world to turn to the Golden est.

'Setting apart a day to be observed Arbor Day is a custom generally served throughout the country. In uthern California benefits derived rough following this custom are par- ularly noticeable. Nearly all of our es and shrubs have been planted by n, but Nature has met man more an half way.

'In setting apart Arbor Day this ar especial attention is called to the undance of water distributed from e sky and fitness of soil for planting trees.

'When Nature has done so much to epare the soil I think it the duty of ery citizen to devote at least half Arbor Day in planting trees."

Collier to Be Fitted for Transporting Torpedo Boats to Philippines for Permanent Defense.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The United States collier Caesar is at the New York navy yard, having arrived yesterday, where she will be overhauled and fitted to carry to the Philippines two submarine torpedo boats, which are to be a part of the permanent defenses of Manila. The boats which are to go to the Philippines are the Plunger and the Porpoise, both of which are also at the navy yard undergoing extensive repairs.

The officials at the navy yard have not yet decided what changes will be made in the Caesar in order to enable her to safely carry the submarines on the trip half-way around the world. That the boats will be placed on the collier's deck is probable, but the main problem before the officers in charge of the shipment is arranging for the launching of the boats from the collier's deck.

It is planned to arrange a scheme by which the boats can be sent to any place, and it is said to be not unlikely that experiments will be made with launching the boats somewhe in the open sea, and then reloading them on the collier.

It will probably require more than a month to fit the Caesar with the necessary appliances for carrying and launching the submarines.

TAKING FLIGHT.

KING GOING TO BIARRITZ.

BUTTERFLIES OF FASHION TO FLOCK AFTER HIM.

Three American Women, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester, Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Harold Baring, Vieing With Each Other in Their Entertainments.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BIARRITZ (France) Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King Edward will leave London on Thursday for Biarritz. That is to say, London high society is about to depart for Southwestern France, where elaborate preparations to entertain His Majesty are making.

Three American women are in friendly rivalry, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester, Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Harold Baring, who was Miss Marie Churchill of New York. Each is striving to provide the greatest and at the same time the least obtrusive luxury for her entertainments during the King's stay.

The Duchess has rented Milrasol Villa, which has beautiful and extensive grounds. She has sent ahead her chef and numerous servants, with two motor cars, to make everything ready for her arrival; stores of supplies of delicacies are being shipped to the villa from Paris and London. She has sent twelve American rocking-chairs. The King likes the comfortable ease a rocking-chair affords, and, of course, the Duchess's guests must be grouped around him in equal comfort; etiquette orders that every one present follow the King's example.

Mrs. Potter Palmer has engaged the great Villa Etchopardia, famous on that coast. Mrs. Palmer has discovered a chef in Paris, who, she avers, is a true artist, full of that sensitive pride which led "The Great Vatel" to kill himself because the fish he had prepared was not worthy of the royal guest. Mrs. Potter Palmer's chef is already in possession of the villa's kitchen, and has with him a brigade of assistants and servants. The villa is being furnished in the style of Louis XVI, all the furnishings being sent from Paris. The Princess Cantacuzene, Gen. Frederick D. Grant's daughter, and Mrs. Potter Palmer's niece; Mrs. Honore Palmer, Mrs. Palmer's daughter-in-law, and other Americans will make up the house party at the villa.

Mrs. Harold Baring, who has taken the Villa Oceana, is already here to personally superintend the preparations for the season. Like every other man of good taste, King Edward greatly admired Mrs. Baring—her beauty, her witty conversation and her innocent gayety—and he promised to visit her husband and herself this season again.

Mme. Anna Gould is at Biarritz, and is made welcome everywhere. She was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Duke Alexander of Russia at a dinner the other evening, with Prince and Princess Orloff and Count Tallyrand-Perigord.

RUN DOWN BY ENGINE.

Contractor Steps in Path of Switching Locomotive and Injuries May Prove Fatal.

J. M. Bridges, a contractor, who lives at No. 1410 Mission Road, was injured, perhaps fatally, by a Southern Pacific switch engine about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at Moulton avenue and Alameda street. His skull was fractured, his left foot crushed and his body bruised. He underwent an operation at the Receiving Hospital, but there is little hope of his recovery.

According to witnesses, Bridges walked in front of the engine, which was pulling a train of cars. Evidently he did not see the engine until it was almost upon him. When the engineer blew the whistle, Bridges made a desperate effort to leap out of the way. The foot-board struck him, however, and he was hurled several feet. Before the engine could be stopped the tender passed over his body. His left foot was crushed and he was dragged several feet. Bridges has a wife and four children.

NOW BUY THE TOWN LOTS

In this big and growing country the safest class of investments ever made was the money planted in the new cities. Town property in Riverside, Redlands, San Bernardino, Colton, Corona, Pomona, Covina, Santa Ana, Long Beach, Ocean Park, San Pedro, and a hundred others all made money for its fortunate owners. It will be just the same at Beaumont. History will repeat itself the only difference being that the investors of twenty years ago took some risks, whereas there is no pioneering in Beaumont. The pioneer days are past forever. The city has an established foundation. The railroad is not one in prospect, but there already. The finest fruit land in the State is there. Water is plentiful and more developing every day. The climate is ideal—none other in Southern California surpassing it—and when you say Southern California, you really might say the world. The eagerness with which the country lands are being seized by actual settlers indicates the confidence of the people in the future of Beaumont country. In the midst of such surroundings the town must steadily expand as it has started until it becomes at least as large as Riverside or Redlands. A splendid city water system has just been installed. New stores, new dwellings, new business buildings are constantly going up. One of the handsomest hotels in interior California there, the Hotel Edinburgh. It is a modern $40,000 hostelry, and would be a credit to a city five times the size of Beaumont. The finest mountain scenery in America is visible from its roof and verandas.

Go and See the Lots Yourself—$85 and up

Platted 4 lots to the acre, with broad, graded and oiled streets, wide alleys and beautiful twenty-year shade trees in front. Lots large enough for ordinary family orchards of 120 trees, with finest soil, and in the land that carried off the capital prize for fruit at the World's Columbian Exposition. If you want a real home in the finest climate on earth, where asthma, catarrh, hay fever, and bronchial troubles are unknown. If you have already bought farm or fruit lands at Beaumont and need a site for a town house, or if you have a little money to invest in the Bank of Old Mother Earth, which never yet recorded a failure, see Beaumont and plant a few dollars there before prices go higher.

COME IN AND GET TICKETS FOR THURSDAY'S BIG EXCURSION. Only $1 for the round trip, 162 miles there and back. Regular fare $4.90. Excursion train leaves Arcade Depot at 9 a.m., arriving back at 7:30 p.m. Only 1000 people can go. No tickets given out at the depot. You must call, write or phone this office for them. Train will stop and pick up parties at stations en route, if arrangements are made in advance. Regular excursions every Thursday and Sunday.

SEE THE LANDS! SEE THE LANDS!

$90 AN ACRE AND UP

Go and see the new wells. Water at 16 to 20 feet. Land at $90 and up adjoining lands upon which unlimited water is developed, and only ten minutes' WALK from the Southern Pacific Depot via graded and oiled streets.

DON'T STOP TO MAKE COMPARISONS BEFORE YOU GO.

See Beaumont first and comparisons will then appear unnecessary to you. Remember that this is not a new country, buried away in the desert or on the hills, but a vast area of old fruit lands, platted twenty years ago, swamped in the financial maelstrom of 1887, and tied up with blue tape, in the bank, under mortgage, ever since, emerging now to find the whole world built up around it and presenting to the homeseekers and investors of today an opportunity the like of which will never come again at the price.

COME IN IF YOU CAN, BUT MAIL THIS IF YOU CAN'T.

THE GREAT FER-DO

Meets With Great Success in Los Angeles. His Enter ments and Lectures Enjoyed by Thousands Nigh The European Medical Experts Prove Themselv Friends of Suffering Humanity.

The Great Fer-Don is, by the excellency of the entertainments he is presenting the people at a low price, and by his lectures, crowding the People's Theater, on Main street, between Fifth and Sixth, every night. There will be two performances today, at 2:45 and 8 p.m. On Sunday the Great Fer-Don does not lecture, but on every week day evening he delivers a short talk and the European Experts make their demonstrations upon the lame and the deaf.

These talks by Fer-Don are to most people the most interesting and instructive part of the evening's program. Fer-Don is not a calamity howler, but one of the most conscientious boosters who ever visited Los Angeles. He preaches health and prosperity. Nor does he neglect to practice that which he preaches. He helps the poor and needy. He gives money and medicine to those who suffer poverty and sickness. At times he throws handfuls of money broadcast; at others he goes quietly into the homes of poverty and distress and by his whole-souled generosity leaves happiness where before sorrow reigned.

In speaking of the work of the European Medical Experts, who have offices at 745 South Main street, the Great Fer-Don last night said: "Their success has been phenomenal. The results they have attained have placed them in the front ranks of the benefactors of mankind. So many owe their renewed health to the European treatments of chronic diseases, that there are thousands who are always glad to testify to their recovery. Rheumatism, deafness, blood, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, nervousness, and in fact many chronic diseases which are pronounced incurable by others are curable by their methods. Naturally their success has brought in its wake many imitators, both in name and in methods. Some claim to have the treatments used by the European Experts, and claim not only to be able to cure chronic diseases, but to remove tumors, cancers and gallstones by their methods.

"In the hands of Edison," continued the Great Fer-Don, "that which we call electricity is a thing by which marvels are performed. In the hands of one ignorant of its use, electricity becomes a monster, dealing death and destruction. So it is with the practice of medicine. With the medical secrets which these European Experts use, disease may be fought and conquered, but put these secrets into hands into which they sometimes fall, there will probably be none but detrimental results. That is why you who are sick should demand that the physician who treats you should understand the uses of the medicines and treatments which you must pay for and take. The European Medical Experts understand their treatments. They have proven this by the marvelous results they have shown. They are always willing to stand investigation, and to give the names of people who have been benefited and cured."

Following are some who can testify to the efficacy of these treatments:

246 Fourth street, Redlands.) One cup sugar, 4 tablespoons water, ½ cup lemon juice. Boil sugar and water five minutes, add lemon juice and pour over the fruit and serve in small dishes, when cold. Banana and strawberries cut in small pieces, or other fruits, can be used.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Miss Grace, box 173, Covina.) Pare and core 3 apples, chop fine; add 3 small bananas, sliced thin, small cup English walnuts, chopped fine, ½ box strawberries, cut in small pieces, save other ½ box whole for top of salad. Dressing: Two eggs and ½ cup sugar, beaten well, add ½ cup water, ½ cup vinegar, teaspoon butter. Boil until thick, set off until cold and then add to salad with a tablespoon of cream. Serve in lettuce leaves.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. A. K. Jacobs, No. 1816 Mozart street.) Sliced oranges, sliced bananas, shredded pineapple and freshly shredded coconnut. Sprinkle freely with sugar. Chopped walnuts and almonds may be added if desired. For dressing use either of the two following recipes: STRAWBERRY DRESSING—One pint fresh berries, equal quantity pulverized sugar, washed together. Beat stiff the whites of 3 eggs and add gradually to berries. Beat until mixture will stand up high. SWEET SALAD DRESSING—Yolks 2 eggs, beaten until thick, add ½ cup pulverized sugar. Flavor with extract of vanilla. Add 1 cup whipped cream. With this dressing add strawberries to the fruit salad.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. Jules de Cremer, Venice.) Six oranges and 6 bananas, sliced fine, 1 can grated pineapple. Soak ½ box gelatine in 1 cup water for 1 hour, add juice of 1 lemon. Place fruit and gelatine alternately, candied cherries on top and whipped cream over all.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. Flash, general delivery, Glendale.) Three apples, diced, 3 bananas, sliced, 2 stalks celery, sliced, ½ dozen brandied cherries, 3 tablespoons nut meats, mixed with following dressing: One egg, beaten, 2½ tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, dash of red pepper, mixed with ½ cup water, ½ cup of medium strength vinegar. Place on fire and stir until thick, beat until smooth and then to desired consistency with olive oil or canned cream. Enough for four. Serve in lettuce leaves.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. S. A. Conway, No. 721 West Third street, Long Beach.) Slice large navel oranges and large red apples crosswise, pick and wash large fully ripe strawberries, soak shredded coconnut in a little boiling water a few minutes. Lay slice of apple on each slice of orange in saucer, put strawberry on hole in cored apple; sprinkle coconnut over all; squeeze lemon juice over, then white sugar. Serve immediately.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. A. J. Grant, No. 806 South Bonnie Brae street.) Cut into cubes 2 cans pineapples, wiped dry with cloth; and 2 or 3 apples. Seed 1 pound green grapes, cut in halves; add ½ pound pecan meats. Mix all together and put in dish on lettuce leaves. Then take 1 pint cream, whip, and ½ cup fruit salad dressing and put on top. Place candied cherries around on cream. Oranges and bananas may be used in same way.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. E. F. Greeley, No. 616 Bixel street.) Three oranges, 2 apples, 3 bananas, ¼ box strawberries, ½ can pineapple, ½ pound walnuts, ¼ pound candied cherries, celery to suit taste. Dressing: Four tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons sugar, little mustard, salt, pepper, 2 eggs, ½ cup vinegar. Cook until thick, when cold add 1 cup whipped cream. Cut fruit in small dice, do not chop, mix well, pour dressing over all. Serve immediately.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. Lucy E. Fowble, No. 1249 West Forty-seventh street.) Lay 2 or 3 fresh lettuce leaves on each dish. Pile lightly on this 2 heaping tablespoons of chopped apple, celery and walnut meats, mixed. Put a few thin slices of bananas on top. Break sections of ripe orange, from which white fiber has been removed, into small pieces, and put a few on each dish; also 2 or 3 large Muscat grapes, peeled and seeded. Pour one of the following dressings over all. This salad must not stand long or the fruits will turn dark. Serve with crisp wafers. MAYONNAISE DRESSING: Beat yolks of 2 eggs until light, then add a pinch of salt and about 2 ounces of olive oil, drop by drop, beating continually. Thin, when necessary, with lemon juice. When all the oil has been used, thin to desired consistency with lemon juice and add ½ teaspoon sugar. Lemon juice is more delicate for a fruit salad than vinegar. DRESSING WITHOUT OLIVE OIL: One cup sour cream, 1 teaspoon sugar, butter size of a walnut, pinch salt, 1 beaten egg, 1 tablespoon flour, mixed smooth in a little milk, ½ cup vinegar. Put in a double boiler, stir constantly until it thickens.

FRUIT AND NUT SALAD.—(Mrs. F. E. Baker, No. 300 East Fortieth street.) Cut 2 apples in small dice, 6 English walnuts, cut in small pieces, add about ¼ as much celery as apple, cut in very small pieces. Mix with this ¼ of a pint of the following: SALAD DRESSING: Two well-beaten eggs, ½ pint of cream, ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne pepper, ½ teaspoon powdered mustard, ½ cup of vinegar, or juice of 2 lemons, a teaspoon of sugar, add a large teaspoon of corn starch, mix in cold water. Mix all in a bowl; place bowl in hot water and cook until creamy.

FRUIT AND WALNUT SALAD.—(Mrs. George Brown, Corona.) Two cups chopped celery, 1 cup broken English walnuts, 2 oranges and 2 bananas, cut in small pieces. Arrange on lettuce leaves. Add dressing: Two eggs, beaten light, small piece of butter, spoon of sugar and mustard, little salt, dash of black and red pepper, cup vinegar; cook until like custard. Thin with cream.

GOLDEN SALAD DRESSING.—(Mrs. G. E. S., No. 3447 Western avenue.) Four hard-boiled eggs, 3 tablespoons best salad oil, 4 tablespoons of vinegar, yolks of 2 eggs, well beaten, 1 teaspoon powdered sugar, 1 salt spoon salt, and one of pepper, 1 teaspoon made mustard; rub boiled yolks to a powder; add sugar, mustard, salt, pepper; work up well with oil; put in gradually; beat hard; stir in vinegar; strain out all lumps, rubbing mixture to get full strength. Heat almost to boiling; take spoonful at a time from sauce pan, while still on fire, and beat into the whipped raw yolks; when all ingredients are mixed, return to sauce pan; simmer slowly for 3 minutes, stirring all the time. Do not let it boil. Let it get cool, pour over salad. serve on lettuce leaves or cress, if preferred. Lovely for lobster or chicken salad.

GRAPE SALAD.—(Mrs. C. C. Hall, Hollywood.) Cut into dice, white grapes, apples and English walnut meats. Mix with mayonnaise and serve in lettuce hearts.

GRAPE AND ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. Florence Molique, San Gabriel.) Cut oranges in small pieces, and place on a lettuce leaf on plate. Cover with seeded grapes; then sprinkle with 2 or 3 tablespoons of English walnuts cut fine. Pour over it a salad dressing.

GRAPEFRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. G. A. Coffield, Route 4, box 73.) Cut medium-sized grapefruit in thirds, lengthwise. Remove the pulp, drain off some of the juice, and add to the pulp an equal quantity of celery, cut in very fine pieces. Refill the sections with the mixture; mask with mayonnaise dressing and garnish with celery tips. This is a refreshing dinner salad.

HAM SALAD.—(Mrs. J. T. Hanna, No. 1352 West Ninth street, Riverside.) Chop lean, cold boiled ham until the pieces are the size of peas. Chop fine half as much celery or lettuce as ham. Line a dish thickly with lettuce leaves, and fill with the ham and celery. Turn the following dressing over the whole just before serving. Dressing: Half cup of vinegar, 1 small tablespoon of sugar, butter half the size of an egg, and a dash of pepper and mustard. Put over the fire, and when boiling hot stir in ½ teaspon of cornstarch which has been mixed with a tablespoon of cold water. Beat one egg very light and add just before removing from the fire. Add half a cup of thick sweet cream if desired. Cool before using.

HERRING SALAD.—(Miss Rupe, No. 809 East California street, Pasadena.) Four hard-boiled eggs, 4 salt herrings, 4 medium-sized raw apples, 4 large boiled beets, 4 large salt pickled cucumbers and cooked veal in the same proportion. Chop each ingredient separately and fine, mix thoroughly, pour over 6 tablespoons olive oil, mix well: add 2 tablespoons vinegar and salt and pepper to taste; then mix whole thoroughly once more. Put in a glass bowl and garnish with wedge-shaped sections of equal size of following, chopped fine, keeping each separate and alternating: Two sections beets, 2 yolks, 2 whites, 2 parsley. Outline each section with capers.

HICKORY NUT SALAD.—(Mrs. Florence Molique, San Gabriel.) One cup hickory nut kernels, chopped fine; 2 cups apples, chopped fine; cover with mayonnaise; can use a small amount of celery or celery seeds if desired.

HOT STUFF.—(Mrs. W. J. Longley, box 181, Santa Monica.) Two cucumbers, 4 tomatoes, ripe, 1 red pepper, 1 onion, ½ teaspoon ground mustard, 1 teaspoon sugar, and 1-4 cup vinegar: serve in tomato cups.

IMPROMPTU TOMATO SALAD.—(Miss Evelyn Dooly, No. 187 North Soto street.) Take choice ripe tomatoes, fresh or canned, dress liberally with best olive oil and a standard salad dressing, adding vinegar to latter if too thick. Use in proportion of 2 parts oil to one of dressing. Mix to uniform consistency and dispose on crisp lettuce leaves or not. Cold boiled potatoes, beans or spinach, served in like manner are wholesome and delicious.

IRISH SALAD.—(Ida Glascock, No. 2917 Dalton avenue.) Chop together 5 crisp celery sticks, 2 bananas, and 2 apples. Do not chop very fine. For dressing take juice of 2 lemons and thicken with about 1 cup powdered sugar. Mash one banana in this. Serve on lettuce leaves. For four persons.

JAPANESE SALAD.—(Mrs. J. B. Throbeck, No. 4442 South San Pedro street.) Skin and bone one dozen sardines, pick meat from ficient lemon juice to moisten all. Mix in balls, then roll in boiled rice. Heap on shredded lettuce, cover with mayonnaise and garnish with stuffed olives, rings of hard-boiled whites of eggs and one slice lemon.

JELLIED BEET SALAD.—(Mrs. William Harmon, No. 158 North Daly street.) Cook in salted water, until tender, one 5-cent bunch of beets (do not cut off tops too short, as that causes loss of color,) then drop into cold water and rub off skins, cut into eighths, then slice very thin. Cook together, in a granite dish, 1 cup sugar and 1 cup vinegar, thicken with 2 teaspoons corn starch, rubbed smooth with a little water; boil for several minutes, pour over beets while hot, and toss with a fork, until all are covered and look glossy. Serve on lettuce or it is very pretty heaped in a glass dish.

LETTUCE SALAD.—(Mary R. Wood, No. 327 North Beaudry avenue.) Wash and drain lettuce, pile in little dishes. Serve with dip from gravy bowl as follows: One teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 1 tablespoon flour, salt and sugar to taste, 1 egg, beaten, 1 cup good vinegar. Cook till like gravy.

LETTUCE AND TOMATO SALAD.—(Miss R. A. Dorrington, No. 2625 Figueroa street.) Put nice crisp leaves of 2 heads of lettuce and 4 ice cold ripe tomatoes, cut in quarters, in a large salad bowl, and make a dressing of 6 tablespoons olive oil, 3 of vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, dash cayenne, 1 teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon celery salt, 1 teaspoon onion juice, pour over lettuce and tomatoes and mix thoroughly. Serve with crackers and toasted cheese. Enough for 5 persons.

"LOVE APPLES."—(Mary R. Wood, No. 327 North Beaudry avenue.) Select nice colored medium-sized tomatoes. Peel and lay 1 in each dish on nasturtium leaf and add few bits parsley as a border, with single nasturtium bloom. Reserve dressing until ready to serve at once. MAYONNAISE DRESSING: One tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, pinch pepper. Mix and stir until smooth, then add ½ cup vinegar and 1 cup cream. Cook and pour over yolks 2 eggs, well beaten. If too thick, thin with cream or milk.

LOBSTER SALAD.—(J. H. Hoffman, Altadena.) Shred a cold boiled lobster and chop fine, chop a few crisp celery stalks, add to lobster, chop 1 sprig parsley, salt to taste and add a few drops of extract of onion; mix well and add 3 or 4 tablespoons mayonnaise. Arrange in salad bowl lettuce leaves to form shells and drop in each a spoonful of salad. Pour over each a spoonful of dressing and scatter a few capers over each shell. Serve with piece of lemon. Shrimp salad, also, can be made in this way.

MARASCHINO CHERRY SALAD.—(Miss Agusta Wildergren, No. 294 South Grand avenue, Pasadena.) One pint bottle cherries, 1 pint Jordan almonds, ½ cup vinegar, ¾ cup olive oil. Drain cherries well; over them pour vinegar and oil, well mixed. Put on ice for ½ hour. Drain again before using. Have almonds blanched and dried crisp in oven (not brown.) When cold, insert one in each cherry. Put dessert spoon of mayonnaise in each nest of lettuce. Place 5 stuffed cherries on dressing in each nest. Do not mix cherries and dressing.

MAYONNAISE DRESSING.—(Mrs. C. A., Covina.) Yolks of 3 eggs, 1 heaping tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon mixed mustard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper, 1 teacup milk, 1 teacup vinegar. Beat yolks light, add milk and other ingredients, set pan containing it in a vessel of boiling water, stir constantly until it thickens. When cold, pour over the chicken, then garnish.

MEXICAN SALAD.—(Louise Holcombe Warren, No. 204 Rowan avenue.) Half dozen green chili peppers, put in oven 15 minutes, don't let them brown, but soften; take from oven, cover with damp cloth for ½ hour, pull open and throw out seed and core, chop very fine. Take ½ dozen tomatoes, 1 onion and 1 head lettuce, chop fine, add to peppers; salt, pepper and vinegar to taste.

MOCK CHICKEN SALAD.—(Mrs. T. C. Fain, No. 1700 New England street.) Boil until tender in salted water one pound young veal; when cold chop in small pieces. To each cup meat use half as much celery cut fine, two hard boiled eggs cut in small pieces; mix well, using boiled salad dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves. Dressing: One tablespoon butter, small teaspoon mustard, teaspoon sugar, pinch salt and pepper, one-fourth cup vinegar, yolk of one egg, teaspoon flour. Boil and stir until smooth; when cool and one-half cup milk; mix well.

MUSKMELON SALAD.—(Mrs. E. Holyoke-Wilson, No. 1455 Bonnie Brae street.) Pour just enough claret wine over muskmelon cut small to color the juice darker than the melon. Sweeten and serve in salad bowl with little slices of lemon and an edge of asparagus leaves, or in hollowed halves of the melons, as preferred.

NASTURTIUM SALAD.—(S. A. Conway, No. 721 West Third street, Long Beach.) Half gallon nasturtium flowers, one head white crisp lettuce. Dressing: Four spoons best olive oil, two spoons best apple vinegar, one-half spoon Worcestershire sauce, level teaspoon sugar, pinch celery salt. Mix dressing and drop over nasturtiums while stirring them with silver fork. Put five or six flowers on lettuce leaf and serve in individual salad dishes. Must be served quickly after making, though dressing can be made and kept till ready to serve. All must be cold when made and served.

NEIT-AKRIT SALAD.—(Mrs. George R. Coffman, No. 1669 Dacotah street.) Pick cooked fish into flakes, cut cooked beans, carrots and cabbages in small pieces; mix fish with vegetables and lay on bed of endive; pour on two tablespoons vinegar, one of oil, one tablespoon salt, dash paprika. When serving garnish with sliced tomatoes, quarters of hard boiled eggs. To be chilled before serving.

NORMANDY SALAD.—(Mrs. W. Porter Roberts, Glendora.) Three cans peas, four pounds English walnuts. Chop nuts to size of a pea. Wash and drain peas until dry. Dressing: Put one cup vinegar to scald; add piece butter size of an egg; beat yolks of seven eggs light. Put in a cup one-fourth teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon salt; add enough cold water to form a paste; beat quickly into eggs, then stir into vinegar; stir while cooking and do not boil hard. When thick allow it to cool and add half as much whipped cream as dressing. Put all on ice and at moment of serving mix all together, stirring lightly. Serve a spoonful on curly lettuce leaf. Enough for forty-five persons.

NUT SALAD—(Mrs. S. A. Conway, No. 721 West Third street, Long Beach.) Equal parts pecan, English walnut, almond and Brazil nut kernels; blanch almonds, then chop all together coarse. Put big spoonful on crisp white lettuce leaf in small fruit saucers, and pour over each dish a tablespoon of this dressing: Half cup lemon juice, four tablespoons sugar, two spoons best olive oil and a dusting of grated nutmeg; mix and put spoonful on each dish.

NUT SALAD—(F. E. Holmes, Station A, Los Angeles.) Use mixture of pecans, Brazil and hickory nuts chopped, combine with equal quantity crisp celery cut in dice; moisten with mayonnaise. Serve in large green bell pepper shells, one pepper for each individual, with spoonful mayonnaise and whipped cream on top of nut salad.

NUT SALAD—(Mrs. C. A., Covina.) One cup finely chopped walnuts, one cup chopped apples, one cup finely chopped celery, one cup chopped olives, one tablespoon sugar, one-fourth cup sweet cream, and a little salt. Mix all together and chill. Just before serving add some good salad dressing. Garnish with walnut meats and olives.

NUT AND APPLE SALAD—(Mrs. Fred Swift, No. 734 Gladys avenue.) Two tablespoons chopped walnuts, two winesaps or other good apples cut in small dice; some tender stalks of celery chopped fine; a little salt. Have good mayonnaise dressing ready. Mix all well and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

NUT AND CHEESE SALAD.—(Mrs. W. Porter Roberts, Glendora.) One package of Neufchatel cheese and enough heavy cream to form into balls; add salt and Cayenne pepper to taste; put English walnut meat on side of each ball. To serve, place 3 balls and 1 olive with tablespoon of mayonnaise on lettuce leaf. Improved by substituting home-made Dutch cheese for Neufchatel. Season the cheese, having it of consistency to mold into balls.

OKRA AND TOMATO SALAD.—(Miss Augusta Widergren, No. 294 South Grand avenue, Pasadena.) One dozen okra pods, 6 large ripe tomatoes, 2 pods green chili, 2 heads crisp chicory, 1 teaspoon salt, pinch soda, 2 quarts boiling water. Wash okra, use 2-inch piece out of center of pod. Put soda and salt in water; add okra and simmer ½ hour; must be tender but firm; drain; put on ice to chill. Peel and slice tomatoes ¾-inch thick; when thoroughly chilled place tomato on plate and surround with chickory. Place okra pod in center of tomato and fill cavity with mayonnaise; chop chili fine and sprinkle over salad.

ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. H. L. Miller, box 110, R. F. D. No. 1, Los Angeles.) Peel closely with knife, 6 oranges; cut in half and slice thin. Place on plates and to each plate add 1 large tablespoon of chopped walnuts and 2 large tablespoons of following dressing: One egg, well beaten, 1 teaspoon flour, 4 teaspoons sugar, 4 tablespoons vinegar; melted butter, twice size of walnut. Mix well together, place in double boiler and stir constantly until thick. Take from fire and add cream until thin enough to suit taste.

ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. S. J. Morrison, No. 2126¼ West Pico street.) To be served with roast wild duck. Cut peel from 6 oranges, carefully removing all pith, then cut out pieces in each of the natural divisions so that there is no skin or pith taken with the fruit. Sprinkle over these a little finely-chopped green tarragon, a desert spoon salad oil, a desert spoon brandy and a pinch sugar. Serve in a pile on a dish. Should be served very cold, and placed on ice if possible, 1 hour before serving.

ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. C. C. Hall, Hollywood.) Peel and chop 4 oranges, 4 apples; add 4 tablespoons of grated coconnut and ½ cup chopped English walnut meats. Mix all with mayonnaise dressing and serve in orange half shells, set on nasturtium leaves and blossoms.

ORANGE MINT SALAD.—(To serve with lamb.) (Miss Emilia Lundberg, Coronado.) Remove pulp from 6 large oranges, by cutting fruit in halves crosswise, and using a spoon. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons powdered sugar (or more;) all 3 tablespoons finely chopped mint, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Chill, serve in glasses and garnish each with a sprig of mint.

OYSTER SALAD.—Mrs. W. Porter Roberts, Glendora.) One can cove oysters, 1 cup cabbage, chopped fine. Dressing: One egg, well beaten, 1 tablespoon mustard, 1 cup vinegar, piece of butter size of a walnut, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, a pinch of Cayenne pepper; mix and bring to a boil in double-cooker. Pour over oysters and cabbage: mix and serve hot or cold.

OYSTER SALAD.—Southern style

small pieces. Pour lemon juice on pieces and set in a cool place. (It is better to place them in a cloth so as to drain off all juice.) After thoroughly cooled, mix with tender stalks of 1 bunch celery, (chopped fine,) and 1 cup chopped nuts. Season to taste, and pour over salad dressing. Dressing: One cup vinegar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 egg. Beat egg very light. When vinegar and butter boil, remove from stove, and stir in egg. If too thick when cold, thin with sweet cream. Salt to taste.

ELECTRICITY---The Live Wire of Vitality, Manhood and Vigorous Life!

ELECTRICITY---The Great Dissolver of Congestion---The Reliever of Pains and Aches!

ELECTRICITY---The Masterpiece of Nerve Energy---The Dynamo of Circulation!

DR. McLAUGHLIN'S
ELECTRIC BELT
MADE US STRONG

Nature Detests Drugs

Men

old in stamina, vigor and blood, weak from excesses and imprudence, can be renewed and restored—made young by this wonderful and natural cure, equipped by our modern method of special application and our free Electric Suspensory.

Your system would tell as pitiable a story as could ever be related were she able to say what harm and woe has been done through drugs, operations and treatments. The constant pouring of poison into her vitals has depreciated her normal action, has stolen and drained her native power, has brought on congestion—and the numerous pains and aches which now worry and afflict her is the result.

There is only one power of CURE and that is Electricity, applied by our modern motor of life—Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt. This marvelous element brings torrents of new blood into the starved system, fills the tissues with new volume and scatters all foreign matter from the body through the addition of more nerve energy to the organs, making them perform their duty of elimination.

Your complaint and our cure can be summed in two words—CONGESTION AND CIRCULATION. We bring new volume of life into faded and inactive tissue; we restore nerves, worn and weak, to their former tenacious strength; we bring new hope, life and happiness to weak men and women by restoring them where they are weak. We use special attachments for women. We apply our special electric suspensory to men suffering from the follies of early indiscretion; to men who are waning in vitality and power; to men who are daily growing feeble and barren.

Women

Frantic through congestion, worn out through continual pain, nervous and irritable through sensitive disorders will find in this magic power new life, animation, blood and nerve force. It will make your days of pain only memories and restore your vivacity and make you as fascinating as your healthy sister.

Thinks Belt a God-Send

BAKERSFIELD, Cal.

Dr. McLaughlin Co.:

Dear Sirs: Your kind interest in my welfare is certainly appreciated, and I know that your interest in me did not end with my purchase of your belt—few physicians are as interested in their patients as you are in yours. I think it the very least I can do in the way of a return kindness to tell the public of my good fortune in finding your electric belt a positive cure for rheumatism. I do not think that there is any other complaint which will give as much pain as that ailment, and any invention to cure it is certainly a God-send. Wishing you success in your work, I remain, yours very truly.

Insomnia, Heart Pains and Poor Circulation

GARDENA, Cal.

Dr. McLaughlin Co.

Dear Sirs: When I purchased your belt I was suffering greatly from insomnia—often I could not sleep any until morning; other times I would, after sleeping, awaken and not go to sleep again for three or four hours. When I had used your belt for a week, I began to get better and continued to do so, until I am now entirely cured of this complaint, as well as severe pains in the region of the heart that had troubled me for years. Before I had the belt I suffered also from extremely poor circulation in the limbs. Often I would wake up in the night and feel as if they were in cold water, and I would have to get up and bathe them and wrap them in blankets before getting any rest. The troubles have been entirely relieved, and the efficiency and strength of the belt is as good as when I bought it.

MRS. A. O. WHALEY.

If you are only a weakling and want to be that way, don't take our treatment, take drugs.

If you want to be a man of manly power, vigor and vitality use our Belt and our suspensory. Time or tide waits for no man—neither does health and vitality. Act while there is a chance—act now.

RUSSIANS BALK AT BIG FLEET.

MINISTRY OF FINANCE OPPOSES BILLION-DOLLAR SCHEME.

Kokovsoff Authorizes Statement That not Even Alternative Minor Programme Calling for $225,000,000 Estimated Expenditure Can Now Be Considered.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG Feb. 29.—The project for the rebuilding of the Russian fleet has received a setback as a result of the attitude taken by the Ministry of Finance, which sees no possibility under the present circumstances of the country raising the funds needed for the construction of a powerful navy.

The naval project had reached the point where the estimates, amounting to $1,000,000,000 for ten years' construction, had been submitted by the admiralty to the Financial Committee of the Duma.

Minister of Finance Kokovsoff yesterday authorized the statement that neither this extended programme nor the alternative minor programme calling for an estimated expenditure of $225,000,000, could be considered at the present time.

The exact amount of the naval expenditure has not been determined, but pending improvement in the financial conditions of the empire, the Minister of Finance believes that the sums assigned annually for new construction will continue at about $15,500,000 for several years to come. This was the amount originally included in the budget of 1909.

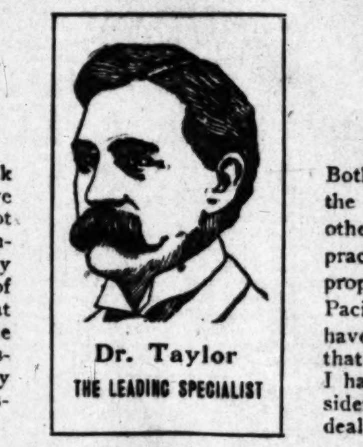
A number of French bankers have sent representatives to St. Petersburg to negotiate a loan of $19,500,000 for the city of St. Petersburg to be expended in various municipal improvements.

Charles Eastman, senior member of the firm of the Eastern Bankers' Agency, was killed by a passenger

My Practice is the Largest Because I Invariably Fullfil My Promises

Men Cured

I never attempt to cure at a risk of injury to the patient. I have found that risky methods are not only painful, dangerous and uncertain, but that they are entirely unnecessary in the treatment of men's diseases. Every result that other physicians strive for by the use of the knife or fiery and poisonous drugs, I accomplish by mild and harmless methods distinctly my own.



Dr. Taylor
THE LEADING SPECIALIST

To Stay Cured

Both the treatment I employ and the cures I effect, are such as no other physician can offer. My practice has grown to its present proportions (the largest in the Pacific Southwest) because I have positively cured the diseases that I claim to cure, and because I have exercised the utmost consideration and fairness in my dealings with patients.

Inability to come to my office for consultation and treatment need not deprive you of my services. My knowledge of men's diseases enables me to treat most cases with absolute success at a distance. Write describing your symptoms in full, and I will advise you free of charge, and tell you whether I can cure you without your calling in person. Consultation and advice free.

Stricture

Surgery is not only harsh, painful and dangerous, but is entirely unnecessary in the treatment of Stricture. I employ a painless method by which the obstructing tissue is dissolved and all the membranes of the organs involved thoroughly cleansed and restored to a healthy state.

Contracted Disorder

I have reduced the time required for curing Contracted Disorders about one-half. This is an important achievement. It replaces danger with safety. It forestalls chronic complications. It removes the infection and inflammation before that vital center, the prostate gland, can become involved. To many men it means the difference between perfect health and a lifetime of misery and functional weakness. My method is mine alone. My treatment is original; in some features it resembles the ordinary. In its chief essentials it is different. In results it is entirely different. It is safe, prompt and thorough.

"Weakness" Only a Symptom

Functional derangements, such as loss of power, etc., are a direct result of inflammation, enlargement or excessive sensitiveness of the prostate gland, brought on by early dissipation or resulting from some improperly-treated Contracted Disorder. These conditions cannot possibly be removed by internal medicines, and any tonic system of treatment that stimulates activity of the functions can but result in aggravation of the real ailment. This is a scientific truth that I have ascertained by careful study and observation in hundreds of cases, and is a truth upon which my own original system of treatment is based. I employ neither tonics, stimulants nor electric belts. I treat by local methods exclusively, and my success in curing even those cases that others have failed to temporarily relieve with their tonics is conclusive evidence that my method affords the only possible means of a complete and radical cure.

Specific Blood Poison

I cure this leprous disease completely. The system is thoroughly cleansed and every poisonous taint removed. The last symptom vanishes to appear no more, and all is accomplished by the use of harmless blood-cleansing remedies.

Varicocele

This most prevalent of all diseases of men is also the most neglected, either through dread of the harsh methods of treatment commonly employed, or through ignorance of the grave dangers that accompany the disease. As Varicocele interferes directly with the circulation and process of waste and repair, throughout the generative organs, the necessity of a prompt and thorough cure cannot be too forcibly emphasized. I cure Varicocele in one week by an absolutely painless process. My cures are thorough and absolutely permanent, and are accomplished without the use of knife or caustic.

WHAT, AGAIN?

ER GROWING COLLECTION.

nother Lawsuit Added to Long Record.

t Mrs. Osborn Has Quietly Vanished as Usual.

oman Is Despair of Deputy Constables.

rs. Kitturia B. Osborn yesterday another lawsuit added to her va- l collection. But she has not been ved with notice of it because, as al, the process server has not been to find her.

here is not a process server in town o does not dread having the as- nment of presenting to Mrs. Osborn opy of the papers in any suit which y be instituted against her. Even most expert detectives have been fled by Mrs. Osborn.

he suit filed yesterday in the Supe- Court is by Harry E. Hall, a rcher of records for an abstract npany. He seeks to quiet title to lot at No. 2627 Magnolia avenue. o really owns the lot remains for court to decide.

is this quieting of title to things ich are claimed by Mrs. Osborn that kept the deputy constable and dep- sheriffs and other law officers on jump from time out of mind. Once y located her in a little outhouse r her home, and besieged her there day. Finally, they tried to upset house, and the self-made prisoner rendered and accepted service.

ore than once the defendant has ricaded her house and defied the uties, who have spent days at a e trying to catch her off her guard g enough to touch her with the fatal ument. In this case it promises to harder than ever, for the informa- given out by her family and nds is that she is in San Francisco. Don't you believe it," say the depu- , with emphasis.

ut apparently she might just as well so far as they are concerned, for y can't locate her.

ecently she wanted to borrow a few usand dollars. But her vacant lot s worth only about $800. Right next r to the lot is a fine two-story house. e lender was steered up against the house and gladly shelled out the ney, and took a mortgage on—the ant lot.

f course, Mrs. Kitturia refused to , and the lender foreclosed the mort- ge. Imagine the lender's—she was a man—surprise and other feelings en she found she owned the lot next r to the fine house.

s for the house on Magnolia avenue, re is a good story about it, which ld not be verified yesterday because , Kitturia B. could not be located s usual.

his story is that the house did not t her anything. She got the ma- al on credit, hired the carpenters, sons and others by the week, and en they did not get their money at end of the week they quit work. Mrs. Osborn had another relay of n ready, and they went to work and t at the end of the week. Finally, last man quit just when the house s completed.

ust what the complication is in re- d to the lot is also a mystery which Southern California Title and Ab- act Company of Temple street does explain. But those who have fol- ed the legal career of Mrs. Kitturia Osborn say they shouldn't wonder if very interesting.

nyway, it's a puzzle for the unlucky ge who tries to untangle the ques- n of ownership. Mrs. Osborn is a nkrupt upon petition of the Board of ade. City Auditor W. C. Mushet s formerly her trustee in bank- ptcy, and is made a defendant in the sent suit.

TO CARRY SUBMARINES.

Collier to Be Fitted for Transporting Torpedo Boats to Philippines for Permanent Defense.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 29.—The United States collier Caesar is at the New York navy yard, having arrived yesterday, where she will be overhauled and fitted to carry to the Philippines two submarine torpedo boats, which are to be a part of the permanent defenses of Manila. The boats which are to go to the Philippines are the Plunger and the Porpoise, both of which are also at the navy yard undergoing extensive repairs.

The officials at the navy yard have not yet decided what changes will be made in the Caesar in order to enable her to safely carry the submarines on the trip half-way around the world. That the boats will be placed on the collier's deck is probable, but the main problem before the officers in charge of the shipment is arranging for the launching of the boats from the collier's deck.

It is planned to arrange a scheme by which the boats can be sent to any place, and it is said to be not unlikely that experiments will be made with launching the boats somewhere in the open sea, and then reloading them on the collier.

It will probably require more than a month to fit the Caesar with the necessary appliances for carrying and launching the submarines.

TAKING FLIGHT.

KING GOING TO BIARRITZ.

BUTTERFLIES OF FASHION TO FLOCK AFTER HIM.

Three American Women, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester, Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Harold Baring, Vieing With Each Other in Their Entertainments.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

BIARRITZ (France) Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] King Edward will leave London on Thursday for Biarritz. That is to say, London high society is about to depart for Southwestern France, where elaborate preparations to entertain His Majesty are making.

Three American women are in friendly rivalry, the Dowager Duchess of Manchester, Mrs. Potter Palmer and Mrs. Harold Baring, who was Miss Marie Churchill of New York. Each is striving to provide the greatest and at the same time the least obtrusive luxury for her entertainments during the King's stay.

The Duchess has rented Milrasol Villa, which has beautiful and extensive grounds. She has sent ahead her chef and numerous servants, with two motor cars, to make everything ready for her arrival; stores of supplies of delicacies are being shipped to the villa from Paris and London. She has sent twelve American rocking-chairs. The King likes the comfortable ease a rocking-chair affords, and, of course, the Duchess's guests must be grouped around him in equal comfort; etiquette orders that every one present follow the King's example.

Mrs. Potter Palmer has engaged the great Villa Etchopardia, famous on that coast. Mrs. Palmer has discovered a chef in Paris, who, she avers, is a true artist, full of that sensitive pride which led "The Great Vatel" to kill himself because the fish he had prepared was not worthy of the royal guest. Mrs. Potter Palmer's chef is already in possession of the villa's kitchen, and has with him a brigade of assistants and servants. The villa is being furnished in the style of Louis XVI, all the furnishings being sent from Paris. The Princess Cantacuzene, Gen. Frederick D. Grant's daughter, and Mrs. Potter Palmer's niece; Mrs. Honore Palmer, Mrs. Palmer's daughter-in-law, and other Americans will make up the house party at the villa.

Mrs. Harold Baring, who has taken the Villa Oceana, is already here to personally superintend the preparations for the season. Like every other man of good taste, King Edward greatly admired Mrs. Baring—her beauty, her witty conversation and her innocent gayety—and he promised to visit her husband and herself this season again.

Mme. Anna Gould is at Biarritz, and is made welcome everywhere. She was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Duke Alexander of Russia at a dinner the other evening, with Prince and Princess Orloff and Count Tallyrand-Perigord.

RUN DOWN BY ENGINE.

Contractor Steps in Path of Switching Locomotive and Injuries May Prove Fatal.

J. M. Bridges, a contractor, who lives at No. 1410 Mission Road, was injured, perhaps fatally, by a Southern Pacific switch engine about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at Moulton avenue and Alameda street. His skull was fractured, his left foot crushed and his body bruised. He underwent an operation at the Receiving Hospital, but there is little hope of his recovery.

According to witnesses, Bridges walked in front of the engine, which was pulling a train of cars. Evidently he did not see the engine until it was almost upon him. When the engineer blew the whistle, Bridges made a desperate effort to leap out of the way. The foot-board struck him, however, and he was hurled several feet. Before the engine could be stopped the tender passed over his body. His left foot was crushed and he was dragged several feet. Bridges has a wife and four children.

BUILDING CONTRACTS LET.

The building contracts let within a week in and about the city of Los Angeles, for all items to cost $1000 and upward, are as follows:

Stein-Reynolds Company to Barber-Bradley Construction Company, one-story brick and frame factory building, 180x120 feet, Lacey avenue, near Avenue 26, $11,150.

Ben Levi to Whiting Thompson, two-story, twenty-eight-room brick apartment-house, East Ninth street, near San Pedro, $7150.

Oscar L. Jones to E. S. Shapland, six-room cottage, Forty-sixth street, near Vermont avenue, $2225.

F. O. Johnson to D. W. Aaron, one-story brick building, 58x100 feet, three storerooms, on Main street, near Sixth, $3455.

Wright & Callender Building Company to Forve-Pettibone Company, electric lighting fixtures, building southwest corner Hill and Fourth streets, $2296.75.

E. D. Pierce to C. F. Crowell, one-story brick building, 62x30 feet, five Charles A. Erickson, one-and-a-half-story, seven-room house, South Pasadena, $2833.

J. P. Richards to Arthur Pefley, two-story, seven-room house, South Pasadena, $2600.

Phoebe Cox to Harry S. Shepard, six-room cottage, Hollywood, $1711.

IN SOUTHERN SECTION.

G. Dimbrouski, manager of the Moneta Avenue Realty Company, reports sales as follows: For Max Endres to May Winning, the five-room bungalow, located at No. 216 West Forty-Eighth street, for $3100. This was bought for a home.

For M. Hailzin to Elenore Czerniski, tract, for $1800 cash. The purchaser will improve at once with a two-story residence. For Max Endres to G. Rodgwell, a five-room uncompleted bungalow at No. 207 West Forty-ninth street, on lot 40x135 feet, for $3100.

ORDER OF PURITANS.

NOW BUY THE TOWN LOTS

In this big and growing country the safest class of investments ever made was the money planted in the new cities. Town property in Riverside, Redlands, San Bernardino, Colton, Corona, Pomona, Covina, Santa Ana, Long Beach, Ocean Park, San Pedro, and a hundred others all made money for its fortunate owners. It will be just the same at Beaumont. History will repeat itself the only difference being that the investors of twenty years ago took some risks, whereas there is no pioneering in Beaumont. The pioneer days are past forever. The city has an established foundation. The railroad is not one in prospect, but there already. The finest fruit land in the State is there. Water is plentiful and more developing every day. The climate is ideal—none other in Southern California surpassing it—and when you say Southern California, you really might say the world. The eagerness with which the country lands are being seized by actual settlers indicates the confidence of the people in the future of Beaumont country. In the midst of such surroundings the town must steadily expand as it has started until it becomes at least as large as Riverside or Redlands. A splendid city water system has just been installed. New stores, new dwellings, new business buildings are constantly going up. One of the handsomest hotels in interior California there, the Hotel Edinburgh. It is a modern $40,000 hostelry, and would be a credit to a city five times the size of Beaumont. The finest mountain scenery in America is visible from its roof and verandas.

Go and See the Lots Yourself—$85 and up

Platted 4 lots to the acre, with broad, graded and oiled streets, wide alleys and beautiful twenty-year shade trees in front. Lots large enough for ordinary family orchards of 120 trees, with finest soil, and in the land that carried off the capital prize for fruit at the World's Columbian Exposition. If you want a real home in the finest climate on earth, where asthma, catarrh, hay fever, and bronchial troubles are unknown. If you have already bought farm or fruit lands at Beaumont and need a site for a town house, or if you have a little money to invest in the Bank of Old Mother Earth, which never yet recorded a failure, see Beaumont and plant a few dollars there before prices go higher.

COME IN AND GET TICKETS FOR THURSDAY'S BIG EXCURSION. Only $1 for the round trip, 162 miles there and back. Regular fare $4.90. Excursion train leaves Arcade Depot at 9 a.m., arriving back at 7:30 p.m. Only 1000 people can go. No tickets given out at the depot. You must call, write or phone this office for them. Train will stop and pick up parties at stations en route, if arrangements are made in advance. Regular excursions every Thursday and Sunday.

THE GREAT FER-DO

Meets With Great Success in Los Angeles. His Enter ments and Lectures Enjoyed by Thousands Nigh The European Medical Experts Prove Themselve Friends of Suffering Humanity.

The Great Fer-Don is, by the excellency of the entertainments he is presenting the people at a low price, and by his lectures, crowding the People's Theater, on Main street, between Fifth and Sixth, every night. There will be two performances today, at 2:45 and 8 p.m. On Sunday the Great Fer-Don does not lecture, but on every week day evening he delivers a short talk and the European Experts make their demonstrations upon the lame and the deaf.

These talks by Fer-Don are to most people the most interesting and instructive part of the evening's program. Fer-Don is not a calamity howler, but one of the most conscientious boosters who ever visited Los Angeles. He preaches health and prosperity. Nor does he neglect to practice that which he preaches. He helps the poor and needy. He gives money and medicine to those who suffer poverty and sickness. At times he throws handfuls of money broadcast; at others he goes quietly into the homes of poverty and distress and by his whole-souled generosity leaves happiness where before sorrow reigned.

In speaking of the work of the European Medical Experts, who have offices at 745 South Main street, the Great Fer-Don last night said: "Their success has been phenomenal. The results they have attained have placed them in the front ranks of the benefactors of mankind. So many owe their renewed health to the European treatments of chronic diseases, that there are thousands who are always glad to testify to their recovery. Rheumatism, deafness, blood, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, nervousness, and in fact many chronic diseases which are pronounced incurable by others are curable by their methods. Naturally their success has brought in its wake many imitators, both in name and in methods. Some claim to have the treatments used by the European Experts, and claim not only to be able to cure chronic diseases, but to remove tumors, cancers and gallstones by their methods.

"In the hands of Edison," continued the Great Fer-Don, "that which we call electricity is a thing by which marvels are performed. In the hands of one ignorant of its use, electricity becomes a monster, dealing death and destruction. So it is with the practice of medicine. With the medical secrets which these European Experts use, disease may be fought and conquered, but put these secrets into hands into which they sometimes fall, there will probably be none but detrimental results. That is why you who are sick should demand that the physician who treats you should understand the uses of the medicines and treatments which you must pay for and take. The European Medical Experts understand their treatments. They have proven this by the marvelous results they have shown. They are always willing to stand investigation, and to give the names of people who have been benefited and cured."

246 Fourth street, Redlands.) One cup sugar, 4 tablespoons water, ½ cup lemon juice. Boil sugar and water five minutes, add lemon juice and pour over the fruit and serve in small dishes, when cold. Banana and strawberries cut in small pieces, or other fruits, can be used.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Miss Grace, box 178, Covina.) Pare and core 3 apples, chop fine; add 3 small bananas, sliced thin, small cup English walnuts, chopped fine, ½ box strawberries, cut in small pieces, save other ½ box whole for top of salad. Dressing: Two eggs and ½ cup sugar, beaten well, add ½ cup water, ½ cup vinegar, teaspoon butter. Boil until thick, set off until cold and then add to salad with a tablespoon of cream. Serve in lettuce leaves.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. A. K. Jacobs, No. 186 Mozart street.) Sliced oranges, sliced bananas, shredded pineapple and freshly shredded coconut. Sprinkle freely with sugar. Chopped walnuts and almonds may be added if desired. For dressing use either of the two following recipes: STRAWBERRY DRESSING—One pint fresh berries, equal quantity pulverized sugar, washed together. Beat stiff the whites of 3 eggs and add gradually to berries. Beat until mixture will stand up high. SWEET SALAD DRESSING—Yolks 2 eggs, beaten until thick, add ½ cup pulverized sugar. Flavor with extract of vanilla. Add 1 cup whipped cream. With this dressing add strawberries to the fruit salad.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. Jules de Cremer, Venice.) Six oranges and 4 bananas, sliced fine, 1 can grated pineapple. Soak ½ box gelatine in 1 cup water for 1 hour, add juice of 1 lemon. Place fruit and gelatine alternately, candied cherries on top and whipped cream over all.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. Flash, general delivery, Glendale.) Three apples, diced, 3 bananas, sliced, 3 stalks celery, sliced, ½ dozen brandied cherries, 3 tablespoons nut meats, mixed with following dressing: One egg, beaten, 2½ tablespoons sugar, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, dash of red pepper, mixed with ½ cup water, ½ cup of medium strength vinegar. Place on fire and stir until thick, beat until smooth and then to desired consistency with olive oil or canned cream. Enough for four. Serve in lettuce leaves.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. S. A. Conway, No. 721 West Third street, Long Beach.) Slice large navel oranges and large red apples crosswise, pick and wash large fully ripe strawberries, soak shredded coconut in a little boiling water a few minutes. Lay slice of apple on each slice of orange in saucer, put strawberry on hole in cored apple; sprinkle coconut over all; squeeze lemon juice over, then white sugar. Serve immediately.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. A. J. Grant, No. 806 South Bonnie Brae street.) Cut into cubes 2 cans pineapples, wiped dry with cloth; and 2 or 3 apples. Seed 1 pound green grapes, cut in halves; add ½ pound pecan meats. Mix all together and put in dish on lettuce leaves. Then take 1 pint cream, whip, and ½ cup fruit salad dressing and put on top. Place candied cherries around on cream. Oranges and bananas may be used in same way.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. E. F. Greeley, No. 618 Bixel street.) Three oranges, 2 apples, 3 bananas, ½ box strawberries, ½ can pineapple, ¼ pound walnuts, ¼ pound candied cherries, celery to suit taste. Dressing: Four tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons sugar, little mustard, salt, pepper, 2 eggs, ½ cup vinegar. Cook until thick, when cold add 1 cup whipped cream. Cut fruit in small dice, do not chop, mix well, pour dressing over all. Serve immediately.

FRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. Lucy E. Fowble, No. 1249 West Forty-seventh street.) Lay 2 or 3 fresh lettuce leaves on each dish. Pile lightly on this 2 heaping tablespoons of chopped apple, celery and walnut meats, mixed. Put a few thin slices of bananas on top. Break sections of ripe orange, from which white fiber has been removed, into small pieces, and put a few on each dish; also 2 or 3 large Muscat grapes, peeled and seeded. Pour one of the following dressings over all. This salad must not stand long or the fruits will turn dark. Serve with crisp wafers. MAYONNAISE DRESSING: Beat yolks of 2 eggs until light, then add a pinch of salt and about 2 ounces of olive oil, drop by drop, beating continually. Thin, when necessary, with lemon juice. When all the oil has been used, thin to desired consistency with lemon juice and add ½ teaspoon sugar. Lemon juice is more delicate for a fruit salad than vinegar. DRESSING WITHOUT OLIVE OIL: One cup sour cream, 1 teaspoon sugar, butter size of a walnut, pinch salt, 1 beaten egg, 2 tablespoons flour, mixed smooth in a little milk, ½ cup vinegar. Put in a double boiler, stir constantly until it thickens.

FRUIT AND NUT SALAD.—(Mrs. F. E. Baker, No. 590 East Fortieth street.) Cut 3 apples in small dice, 6 English walnuts, cut in small pieces, add about ½ as much celery as apple, cut in very small pieces. Mix with this ¼ of a pint of the following: SALAD DRESSING: Two well-beaten eggs, ½ pint of cream, ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of cayenne pepper, ½ teaspoon powdered mustard, ½ cup of vinegar, or juice of 2 lemons, a teaspoon of sugar, add a large teaspoon of corn starch, mix in cold water. Mix all in a bowl; place bowl in hot water and cook until creamy.

FRUIT AND WALNUT SALAD.—(Mrs. George Brown, Corona.) Two cups chopped celery, 1 cup broken English walnuts, 2 oranges and 3 bananas, cut in small pieces. Arrange on lettuce leaves. Add dressing: Two eggs, beaten light, small piece of butter, spoon of sugar and mustard, little salt, dash of black and red pepper, cup vinegar; cook until like custard. Thin with cream.

GOLDEN SALAD DRESSING.—(Mrs. G. E. S., No. 3447 Western avenue.) Four hard-boiled eggs, 3 tablespoons best salad oil, 4 tablespoons of vinegar, yolks of 2 eggs, well beaten, 1 teaspoon powdered sugar, 1 salt spoon salt, and one of pepper, 1 teaspoon made mustard; rub boiled yolks to a powder; add sugar, mustard, salt, pepper; work up well with oil; put in gradually; beat hard; stir in vinegar; strain out all lumps, rubbing mixture to get full strength. Heat almost to boiling; take spoonful at a time from sauce pan, while still on fire, and beat into the whipped raw yolks; when all ingredients are mixed, return to sauce pan; simmer slowly for 3 minutes, stirring all the time. Do not let it boil. Let it get cool, pour over salad, serve on lettuce leaves or cress, if preferred. Lovely for lobster or chicken salad.

GRAPE SALAD.—(Mrs. C. C. Hall, Hollywood.) Cut into dice, white grapes, apples and English walnut meats. Mix with mayonnaise and serve in lettuce hearts.

GRAPE AND ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. Florence Molique, San Gabriel.) Cut oranges in small pieces, and place on a lettuce leaf on plate. Cover with seeded grapes; then sprinkle with 2 or 3 tablespoons of English walnuts cut fine. Pour over it a salad dressing.

GRAPEFRUIT SALAD.—(Mrs. G. A. Coffeld, Route 4, box 78.) Cut medium-sized grapefruit in thirds, lengthwise. Remove the pulp, drain off some of the juice, and add to the pulp an equal quantity of celery, cut in very fine pieces. Refill the sections with the mixture; mask with mayonnaise dressing and garnish with celery tips. This is a refreshing dinner salad.

HAM SALAD.—(Mrs. J. T. Hanna, No. 1352 West Ninth street, Riverside.) Chop lean, cold boiled ham until the pieces are the size of peas. Chop fine half as much celery or lettuce as ham. Line a dish thickly with lettuce leaves, and fill with the ham and celery. Turn the following dressing over the whole just before serving. Dressing: Half cup of vinegar, 1 small tablespoon of sugar, butter half the size of an egg, and a dash of pepper and mustard. Put over the fire, and when boiling hot stir in ¼ teaspoon of cornstarch which has been mixed with a tablespoon of cold water. Beat one egg very light and add just before removing from the fire. Add half a cup of thick sweet cream if desired. Cool before using.

HERRING SALAD.—(Miss Rupe, No. 300 East California street, Pasadena.) Four hard-boiled eggs, 4 salt herrings, 4 medium-sized raw apples, 4 large boiled beets, 4 large salt pickled cucumbers and cooked veal in the same proportion. Chop each ingredient separately and fine, mix thoroughly, pour over 6 tablespoons olive oil, mix well; add 2 tablespoons vinegar and salt and pepper to taste; then mix whole thoroughly once more. Put in a glass bowl and garnish with wedge-shaped sections of equal size of following, chopped fine, keeping each separate and alternating: Two sections beets, 2 yolks, 2 whites, 2 parsley. Outline each section with capers.

HICKORY NUT SALAD.—(Mrs. Florence Molique, San Gabriel.) One cup hickory nut kernels, chopped fine; 2 cups apples, chopped fine; cover with mayonnaise; can use a small amount of celery or celery seeds if desired.

HOT STUFF.—(Mrs. W. J. Longley, box 181, Santa Monica.) Two cucumbers, 4 tomatoes, ripe, 1 red pepper, 1 onion, ½ teaspoon ground mustard, 1 teaspoon sugar, and 1-4 cup vinegar; serve in tomato cups.

IMPROMPTU TOMATO SALAD.—(Miss Evelyn Dooly, No. 187 North Soto street.) Take choice ripe tomatoes, fresh or canned, dress liberally with best olive oil and a standard salad dressing, adding vinegar to latter if too thick. Use in proportion of 2 parts oil to one of dressing. Mix to uniform consistency and dispose on crisp lettuce leaves or not. Cold boiled potatoes, beans or spinach, served in like manner are wholesome and delicious.

IRISH SALAD.—(Ida Glascock, No. 2917 Dalton avenue.) Chop together 5 crisp celery sticks, 2 bananas and 2 apples. Do not chop very fine. For dressing take juice of 2 lemons and thicken with about 1 cup powdered sugar. Mash one banana in this. Serve on lettuce leaves. For four persons.

JAPANESE SALAD.—(Mrs. J. B. Throback, No. 4442 South San Pedro street.) Skin and bone one dozen sardines, pick meat from Scient lemon juice to moisten all. Mix in balls, then roll in boiled rice. Heap on shredded lettuce, cover with mayonnaise and garnish with stuffed olives, rings of hard-boiled whites of eggs and one slice lemon.

JELLIED BEET SALAD.—(Mrs. William Harmon, No. 158 North Daly street.) Cook in salted water, until tender, one 5-cent bunch of beets (do not cut off tops too short, as that causes loss of color,) then drop into cold water and rub off skins, cut into eighths, then slice very thin. Cook together, in a granite dish, 1 cup sugar and 1 cup vinegar, thicken with 2 teaspoons corn starch, rubbed smooth with a little water; boil for several minutes, pour over beets while hot, and toss with a fork, until all are covered and look glossy. Serve on lettuce or it is very pretty heaped in a glass dish.

LETTUCE SALAD.—(Mary R. Wood, No. 327 North Beaudry avenue.) Wash and drain lettuce, pile in little dishes. Serve with dip from gravy bowl as follows: One teaspoon mustard, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 1 tablespoon flour, salt and sugar to taste, 1 egg, beaten, 1 cup good vinegar. Cook till like gravy.

LETTUCE AND TOMATO SALAD.—(Miss R. A. Dorrington, No. 2625 Figueroa street.) Put nice crisp leaves of 2 heads of lettuce and 4 ice cold ripe tomatoes, cut in quarters, in a large salad bowl, and make a dressing of 6 tablespoons olive oil, 2 of vinegar, 1 teaspoon salt, dash cayenne, 1 teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon celery salt, 1 teaspoon onion juice, pour over lettuce and tomatoes and mix thoroughly. Serve with crackers and toasted cheese. Enough for 5 persons.

"LOVE APPLES."—(Mary R. Wood, No. 327 North Beaudry avenue.) Select nice colored medium-sized tomatoes. Peel and lay 1 in each dish on nasturtium leaf and add few bits parsley as a border, with single nasturtium bloom. Reserve dressing until ready to serve at once. MAYONNAISE DRESSING: One tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 tablespoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, pinch pepper. Mix and stir until smooth, then add ½ cup vinegar and 1 cup cream. Cook and pour over yolks 3 eggs, well beaten. If too thick, thin with cream or milk.

LOBSTER SALAD.—(J. H. Hoffman, Altadena.) Shred a cold boiled lobster and chop fine, chop a few crisp celery stalks, add to lobster, chop 1 sprig parsley, salt to taste and add a few drops of extract of onion; mix well and add 3 or 4 tablespoons mayonnaise. Arrange in salad bowl lettuce leaves to form shells and drop in each a spoonful of salad. Pour over each a spoonful of dressing and scatter a few capers over each shell. Serve with piece of lemon. Shrimp salad, also, can be made in this way.

MARASCHINO CHERRY SALAD.—(Miss Agusta Widergren, No. 294 South Grand avenue, Pasadena.) One pint bottle cherries, 1 pint Jordan almonds, ½ cup vinegar, ½ cup olive oil. Drain cherries well; over them pour vinegar and oil, well mixed. Put on ice for ½ hour. Drain again before using. Have almonds blanched and dried crisp in oven (not brown.) When cold, insert one in each cherry. Put dessert spoon of mayonnaise in each nest of lettuce. Place 6 stuffed cherries on dressing in each nest. Do not mix cherries and dressing.

MAYONNAISE DRESSING.—(Mrs. C. A., Covina.) Yolks of 3 eggs, 1 heaping tablespoon butter, 1 tablespoon mixed mustard, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon cayenne pepper, 1 teacup milk, 1 teacup vinegar. Beat yolks light, add milk and other ingredients, set pan containing it in a vessel of boiling water, stir constantly until it thickens. When cold, pour over the chicken, then garnish.

MEXICAN SALAD.—(Louise Holcombe Warren, No. 204 Rowan avenue.) Half dozen green chili peppers, put in oven 15 minutes, don't let them brown, but soften; take from oven, cover with damp cloth for ½ hour, pull open and throw out seed and core, chop very fine. Take ½ dozen tomatoes, 1 onion and 1 head lettuce, chop fine, add to peppers; salt, pepper and vinegar to taste.

MOCK CHICKEN SALAD.—(Mrs. T. C. Fain, No. 1700 New England street.) Boil until tender in salted water one pound young veal; when cold chop in small pieces. To each cup meat use half as much celery cut fine, two hard boiled eggs cut in small pieces; mix well, using boiled salad dressing. Serve on lettuce leaves. Dressing: One tablespoon butter, small teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon sugar, pinch salt and pepper, one-fourth cup vinegar, yolk of one egg, teaspoon flour. Boil and stir until smooth; when cool and one-half cup milk; mix well.

MUSKMELON SALAD.—(Mrs. E. Holyoke-Wilson, No. 1835 Bonnie Brae street.) Pour just enough claret wine over muskmelon cut small to color the juice darker than the melon. Sweeten and serve in salad bowl with little slices of lemon and an edge of asparagus leaves, or in hollowed halves of the melons, as preferred.

NASTURTIUM SALAD.—(S. A. Conway, No. 721 West Third street, Long Beach.) Half gallon nasturtium flowers, one head white crisp lettuce. Dressing: Four spoons best olive oil, two spoons best apple vinegar, one-half spoon Worcestershire sauce, level teaspoon sugar, pinch celery salt. Mix dressing and drop over nasturtiums while stirring them with silver fork. Put five or six flowers on lettuce leaf and serve in individual salad dishes. Must be served quickly after making, though dressing can be made and kept till ready to serve. All must be cold when made and served.

NEIT-AKRIT SALAD.—(Mrs. George R. Coffman, No. 1060 Dacotah street.) Pick cooked fish into flakes, cut cooked beans, carrots and cabbages in small pieces; mix fish with vegetables and lay on bed of endive; pour on two tablespoons vinegar, one of oil, one tablespoon salt, dash paprika. When serving garnish with sliced tomatoes, quarters of hard boiled eggs. To be chilled before serving.

NORMANDY SALAD.—(Mrs. W. Porter Roberts, Glendora.) Three cans peas, four pounds English walnuts. Chop nuts to size of a pea. Wash and drain peas until dry. Dressing: Put one cup vinegar to scald; add piece butter size of an egg; beat yolks of seven eggs light. Put in a cup one-fourth teaspoon mustard, one teaspoon salt; add enough cold water to form a paste; beat quickly into eggs, then stir into vinegar; stir while cooking and do not boil hard. When thick allow it to cool and add half as much whipped cream as dressing. Put all on ice and at moment of serving mix all together, stirring lightly. Serve a spoonful on curly lettuce leaf. Enough for forty-five persons.

NUT SALAD—(Mrs. S. A. Conway, No. 721 West Third street, Long Beach.) Equal parts pecan, English walnut, almond and Brazil nut kernels; blanch almonds, then chop all together coarse. Put big spoonful on crisp white lettuce leaf in small fruit saucers, and pour over each dish a tablespoon of this dressing: Half cup lemon juice, four tablespoons sugar, two spoons best olive oil and a dusting of grated nutmeg; mix and put spoonful on each dish.

NUT SALAD—(F. E. Holmes, Station A, Los Angeles.) Use mixture of pecans, Brazil and hickory nuts chopped, combine with equal quantity crisp celery cut in dice; moisten with mayonnaise. Serve in large green bell pepper shells, one pepper for each individual, with spoonful mayonnaise and whipped cream on top of nut salad.

NUT SALAD—(Mrs. C. A., Covina.) One cup finely chopped walnuts, one cup chopped apples, one cup finely chopped celery, one cup chopped olives, one tablespoon sugar, one-fourth cup sweet cream, and a little salt. Mix all together and chill. Just before serving add some good salad dressing. Garnish with walnut meats and olives.

NUT AND APPLE SALAD—(Mrs. Fred Swift, No. 724 Gladys avenue.) Two tablespoons chopped walnuts, two winesaps or other good apples cut in small dice; some tender stalks of celery chopped fine; a little salt. Have good mayonnaise dressing ready. Mix all well and serve on crisp lettuce leaves.

NUT AND CHEESE SALAD.—(Mrs. W. Porter Roberts, Glendora.) One package of Neufchatel cheese and enough heavy cream to form into balls; add salt and Cayenne pepper to taste; put English walnut meat on side of each ball. To serve, place 3 balls and 1 olive with tablespoon of mayonnaise on lettuce leaf. Improved by substituting home-made Dutch cheese for Neufchatel. Season the cheese, having it of consistency to mold into balls.

OKRA AND TOMATO SALAD.—(Miss Augusta Widergren, No. 294 South Grand avenue, Pasadena.) One dozen okra pods, 6 large ripe tomatoes, 2 pods green chili, 2 heads crisp chicory, 1 teaspoon salt, pinch soda, 2 quarts boiling water. Wash okra, use 2-inch piece out of center of pod. Put soda and salt in water; add okra and simmer ½ hour; must be tender but firm; drain; put on ice to chill. Peel and slice tomatoes ¾-inch thick; when thoroughly chilled place tomato on plate and surround with chickory. Place okra pod in center of tomato and fill cavity with mayonnaise; chop chili fine and sprinkle over salad.

ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. H. L. Miller, box 110, R. F. D. No. 1, Los Angeles.) Peel closely with knife, 6 oranges; cut in half and slice thin. Place on plates and to each plate add 1 large tablespoon of chopped walnuts and 2 large tablespoons of following dressing: One egg, well beaten, 1 teaspoon flour, 4 teaspoons sugar, 4 tablespoons vinegar; melted butter, twice size of walnut. Mix well together, place in double boiler and stir constantly until thick. Take from fire and add cream until thin enough to suit taste.

ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. S. J. Morrison, No. 2126½ West Pico street.) To be served with roast wild duck. Cut peel from 6 oranges, carefully removing all pith, then cut out pieces in each of the natural divisions so that there is no skin or pith taken with the fruit. Sprinkle over these a little finely-chopped green tarragon, a desert spoon salad oil, a desert spoon brandy and a pinch sugar. Serve in a pile on a dish. Should be served very cold, and placed on ice if possible, 1 hour before serving.

ORANGE SALAD.—(Mrs. C. C. Hall, Hollywood.) Peel and chop 4 oranges, 4 apples; add 4 tablespoons of grated coconut and ½ cup chopped English walnut meats. Mix all with mayonnaise dressing and serve in orange half shells, set on nasturtium leaves and blossoms.

ORANGE MINT SALAD.—(To serve with lamb.) (Miss Emilia Lundberg, Coronado.) Remove pulp from 6 large oranges, by cutting fruit in halves crosswise, and using a spoon. Sprinkle with 2 tablespoons powdered sugar (or more;) all 2 tablespoons finely chopped mint, and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Chill, serve in glasses and garnish each with a sprig of mint.

OYSTER SALAD.—Mrs. W. Porter Roberts, Glendora.) One can cove oysters, 1 cup cabbage, chopped fine. Dressing: One egg, well beaten, 1 tablespoon mustard, 1 cup vinegar, piece of butter size of a walnut, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon sugar, a pinch of Cayenne pepper; mix and bring to a boil in double-cooker. Pour over oysters and cabbage; mix and serve hot or cold.

OYSTER SALAD—Southern style (Mrs.

small pieces. Pour lemon juice on pieces and set in a cool place. (It is better to place them in a cloth so as to drain off all juice.) After thoroughly cooled, mix with tender stalks of 1 bunch celery, (chopped fine,) and 1 cup chopped nuts. Season to taste, and pour over salad dressing. Dressing: One cup vinegar, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 egg. Beat egg very light. When vinegar and butter boil, remove from stove, and stir in egg. If too thick when cold, thin with sweet cream. Salt to taste.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—A.M.]

ST. PETERSBURG Feb. 29.—The project for the rebuilding of the Russian fleet has received a setback as a result of the attitude taken by the Ministry of Finance, which sees no possibility under the present circumstances of the country raising the funds needed for the construction of a powerful navy.

The naval project had reached the point where the estimates, amounting to $1,000,000,000 for ten years' construction, had been submitted by the admiralty to the Financial Committee of the Duma.

Minister of Finance Kokovsoff yesterday authorized the statement that neither this extended programme nor the alternative minor programme calling for an estimated expenditure of $225,000,000, could be considered at the present time.

The exact amount of the naval expenditure has not been determined, but pending improvement in the financial conditions of the empire, the Minister of Finance believes that the sums assigned annually for new construction will continue at about $15,500,000 for several years to come. This was the amount originally included in the budget of 1909.

A number of French bankers have sent representatives to St. Petersburg to negotiate a loan of $19,500,000 for the city of St. Petersburg to be expended in various municipal improvements.

ELECTRICITY—The Great Dissolver of Congestion—The Reliever of Pains and Aches!
ELECTRICITY—The Masterpiece of Nerve Energy—The Dynamo of Circulation!

DR. McLAUGHLIN'S
ELECTRIC BELT
MADE US STRONG

Men

old in stamina, vigor and blood, weak from excesses and imprudence, can be renewed and restored—made young by this wonderful and natural cure, equipped by our modern method of special application and our free Electric Suspensory.

Nature Detests Drugs

Your system would tell as pitiable a story as could ever be related were she able to say what harm and woe has been done through drugs, operations and treatments. The constant pouring of poison into her vitals has depreciated her normal action, has stolen and drained her native power, has brought on congestion—and the numerous pains and aches which now worry and afflict her is the result.

There is only one power of CURE and that is Electricity, applied by our modern motor of life—Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt. This marvelous element brings torrents of new blood into the starved system, fills the tissues with new volume and scatters all foreign matter from the body through the addition of more nerve energy to the organs, making them perform their duty of elimination.

Your complaint and our cure can be summed in two words—CONGESTION AND CIRCULATION. We bring new volume of life into faded and inactive tissue; we restore nerves, worn and weak, to their former tenacious strength; we bring new hope, life and happiness to weak men and women by restoring them where they are weak. We use special attachments for women. We apply our special electric suspensory to men suffering from the follies of early indiscretion; to men who are waning in vitality and power; to men who are daily growing feeble and barren.

No Man is Wanted Anywhere Who Is Not a Strong Man. For Success Happiness, Respect and Power a Man Has to be a MAN

Women

Frantic through congestion, worn out through continual pain, nervous and irritable through sensitive disorders will find in this magic power new life, animation, blood and nerve force. It will make your days of pain only memories and restore your vivacity and make you as fascinating as your healthy sister.

Dr. Laughlin Co.;

I have been wearing your Belt long enough now to be able to say that it has completed a cure in my case, and has done more for me than all drugs, cures and specialists' treatments I had taken for years.

Thinks Belt a God-Send

BAKERSFIELD, Cal.

Dr. McLaughlin Co.:

Dear Sirs: Your kind interest in my welfare is certainly appreciated, and I know that your interest in me did not end with my purchase of your belt—few physicians are as interested in their patients as you are in yours. I think it the very least I can do in the way of a return kindness to tell the public of my good fortune in finding your electric belt a positive cure for rheumatism. I do not think that there is any other complaint which will give as much pain as that ailment, and any invention to cure it is certainly a God-send. Wishing you success in your work, I remain, yours very truly.

Insomnia, Heart Pains and Poor Circulation

GARDENA, Cal.

Dr. McLaughlin Co.

Dear Sirs: When I purchased your belt I was suffering greatly from insomnia—often I could not sleep any until morning; other times I would, after sleeping, awaken and not go to sleep again for three or four hours. When I had used your belt for a week, I began to get better and continued to do so, until I am now entirely cured of this complaint, as well as severe pains in the region of the heart that had troubled me for years. Before I had the belt I suffered also from extremely poor circulation in the limbs. Often I would wake up in the night and feel as if they were in cold water, and I would have to get up and bathe them and wrap them in blankets before getting any rest. The troubles have been entirely relieved, and the efficiency and strength of the belt is as good as when I bought it.

MRS. A. O. WHALEY.

If you are only a weakling and want to be that way, don't take our treatment, take drugs.

If you want to be a man of manly power, vigor and vitality use our Belt and our suspensory. Time or tide waits for no man—neither does health and vitality. Act while there is a chance—act now.

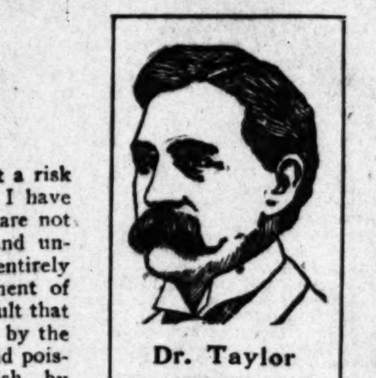
My Practice is the Largest Because I Invariably Fullfil My Promises

Men Cured

I never attempt to cure at a risk of injury to the patient. I have found that risky methods are not only painful, dangerous and uncertain, but that they are entirely unnecessary in the treatment of men's diseases. Every result that other physicians strive for by the use of the knife or fiery and poisonous drugs, I accomplish by mild and harmless methods distinctly my own.



Dr. Taylor
THE LEADING SPECIALIST

To Stay Cured

Both the treatment I employ and the cures I effect, are such as no other physician can offer. My practice has grown to its present proportions (the largest in the Pacific Southwest) because I have positively cured the diseases that I claim to cure, and because I have exercised the utmost consideration and fairness in my dealings with patients.

Inability to come to my office for consultation and treatment need not deprive you of my services. My knowledge of men's diseases enables me to treat most cases with absolute success at a distance. Write describing your symptoms in full, and I will advise you free of charge, and tell you whether I can cure you without your calling in person. Consultation and advice free.

Stricture

Surgery is not only harsh, painful and dangerous, but is entirely unnecessary in the treatment of Stricture. I employ a painless method by which the obstructing tissue is dissolved and all the membranes of the organs involved thoroughly cleansed and restored to a healthy state.

Contracted Disorder

I have reduced the time required for curing Contracted Disorders about one-half. This is an important achievement. It replaces danger with safety. It forestalls chronic complications. It removes the infection and inflammation before that vital center, the prostate gland, can become involved. To many men it means the difference between perfect health and a lifetime of misery and functional weakness. My method is mine alone. My treatment is original; in some features it resembles the ordinary. In its chief essentials it is different. In results it is entirely different. It is safe, prompt and thorough.

"Weakness" Only a Symptom

Functional derangements, such as loss of power, etc., are a direct result of inflammation, enlargement or excessive sensitiveness of the prostate gland, brought on by early dissipation or resulting from some improperly-treated Contracted Disorder. These conditions cannot possibly be removed by internal medicines, and any tonic system of treatment that stimulates activity of the functions can but result in aggravation of the real ailment. This is a scientific truth that I have ascertained by careful study and observation in hundreds of cases, and is a truth upon which my own original system of treatment is based. I employ neither tonics, stimulants nor electric belts. I treat by local methods exclusively, and my success in curing even those cases that others have failed to temporarily relieve with their tonics is conclusive evidence that my method affords the only possible means of a complete and radical cure.

Specific Blood Poison

I cure this leprous disease completely. The system is thoroughly cleansed and every poisonous taint removed. The last symptom vanishes to appear no more, and all is accomplished by the use of harmless blood-cleansing remedies.

Varicocele

This most prevalent of all diseases of men is also the most neglected, either through dread of the harsh methods of treatment commonly employed, or through ignorance of the grave dangers that accompany the disease. As Varicocele interferes directly with the circulation and process of waste and repair, throughout the generative organs, the necessity of a prompt and thorough cure cannot be too forcibly emphasized. I cure Varicocele in one week by an absolutely painless process. My cures are thorough and absolutely permanent, and are accomplished without the use of knife or caustic.

MANY NEW BUILDINGS RISE IN INDUSTRIAL SECTION.

Massive Warehouses and Wholesale Business Blocks Are Being Erected to Keep Pace With Growth of City—Leading Firms Find Extensions and Additions Necessary.

The industrial section of Los Angeles is far more extensive than a casual observer, riding through on a street car, would imagine. On every hand are new buildings, which embrace large floor areas under their roofs. Numerous massive warehouses and wholesale business blocks are being erected to keep pace with the industrial growth.

A group of illustrations of several of the newest of these new buildings in the section east of North Main street, between Aliso street on the north and First street on the south, with Alameda as an eastern boundary, shows the class of structures. That such buildings are needed betokens a decidedly healthful condition. The industrial section is a scene of hustling activity all day, and not infrequently all night.

The building of the Los Angeles Warehouse Company, on Commercial street, just west of Alameda, is one of the modern structures now going up. It is of solid reinforced concrete, of remarkably massive construction. It covers a lot 100x432 feet, and, when the fourth floor is completed, will have a floor area of 432,000 square feet, nearly an acre to each floor. The rear of the building with the forms for casting the walls and floor of the fourth story, are shown in the accompanying illustration. The structure may be carried to a height of six stories, and will cost $250,000 if this is done, making an investment of $350,000, including the cost of the site. It cost $150,000 to the third story. It is one of the most modern warehouse buildings in the city. The equipment consists of elevators and machinery for handling heavy goods on each floor, while a spur track from the Southern Pacific Railroad enters from the rear. The largest span is twenty feet, and is calculated for a factor of safety of 1200 pounds to the square foot. Charles F. Whitlesey is the architect.

M. A. Newmark & Co., the wholesale grocery firm, has built a two-story brick warehouse building on the southeast corner of Alameda and Banning streets. The lot is 100x203 feet, and the whole thing represents an investment of $65,000. There are ample facilities for handling shipments of goods, as spur tracks have been constructed on the Banning-street frontage, making it very convenient for the owners.

Dwight Hart of the Roslyn and Natick hotels owns a new business block on the northeast corner of Alameda and Banning streets. This is two stories high, and was rented almost as soon as completed to small dealers, many Japanese vendors taking the small, well-lighted storerooms. It is about the same size as the Newmark warehouse, and is of similar construction.

ACTIVE DEMAND FOR LOTS.

Sales in Various Sections Shows Improvement in Realty Market. Coachella Valley Lands.

Strong & Dickinson report quite an improvement in the realty market, and a very active demand for residence lots is evidenced by sales during the last few weeks in their various tracts as follows:

In Country Club Park tract, lying just north of Pico street, and extending to Eighth street, and fronting on Western avenue. Phillip N. Parker purchased a corner of Pico and Gramercy Place, lot 70x178, for a consideration of $5600. The buyer will build at once, planning to invest $6500 in a house. William Kaflitz purchased the adjoining lot, 70x178 feet, for $4500, and will build a $7500 house.

In Country Club Park tract, between Eighth and San Marino streets, nine lots were sold, on which houses costing from $3500 to $4500 have been either started or the owners are under agreement to build in the near future as follows: To James R. Haskins, lot 76x125 feet, for $900; to Margaret E. Blythe, lot 60x125 feet, for $1450; to Harry B. Bailey, lot 60x125 feet, for $1500; to Robert Hamerton, lot 76x129 1-3 feet, for $2100; to Nora E. Borton, lot 60x125 feet, for $1400; to Frank Simonds, lot 60x125 feet, for $1250; to Frank Simonds, three lots, each 60x125 feet, for $3600.

In Huntington Boulevard tract, on the Pasadena Short Line, on the Huntington Drive; Dassell M. Crause purchased two lots and a six-room house on Huntington Drive, for $3800; to J. N. Hawley, two lots and a five-room house for $3050; to Frank A. Briggs, lot for $600; to W. J. Pierce, lot for $600; to W. J. Pierce, lot for $600; to Dr. A. J. Scott, five lots for $3000; to B. M. Waid, lot for $500; to Mary M. Yoder, lot for $600; to Jennie Dawson Loly, lot for $550; to Thomas Abram, lot for $550; to J. H. Bradshaw, three lots for $1800; to R. H. Leightbody, lot for $850; to W. B. Frankland, lot for $550; to H. E. Grant, two lots for $1000; to Mrs. Alice Madden, lot for $550; to Harry Chase, lot for $600; to C. O. and Anna M. Vold, lot for $550; to Gertrude W. Block, two lots for $1000; to F. D. Persons, two lots for $1300; to Clara B. Shaffer, lot for $550. The lots vary from 50 to 56 feet in frontage, and all are 150 feet deep.

In the southeast part of the city in the Vermont Avenue Villa tract, between Vermont and Budlong avenues on Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets, the following sales have been made: To Charles W. Ervin, lot for $675; to Bain F. Windsor, lot for $700; to L. A. Blaisdell, lot for $650; to Jesse M. Holden, lot for $625; to P. H. Bartlett of the Globe Iron Works, lot for $650; to S. R. Marlette, lot for $650; to Alfred A. Green, lot for $625; to Robert M. Green, lot for $625; to Mortimer A. Hill, lot for $800. The lots are 40x134 feet each.

In Vermont Heights: To Edward Brewer, a lot with a 119-foot frontage on Southwest Boulevard in the "shoestring strip" district, for $650.

In the northwest, in South Hollywood tract, sales are reported to: A. Lowinsky, lot 35x136¼ feet, for $700; to Mrs. A. F. Tong, lot 50x136 feet, for $700; to George Jeffreys, lot 50x136 feet, for $750. Several other lots recently sold in this tract are now being improved with buildings.

Numerous sales in the Coachella Valley also are reported, this firm having the townsite of Coachella, in Riverside county, and adjoining acreage. Recent sales of about forty lots in the persons. On at least three-fourths of the sales houses either have been started, completed or arranged for. A second schoolhouse, a second church building and business houses are among the new additions to the town. Cabbages and onions are being shipped from there now in carload lots, and the famous cantaloupes are coming on later. The lots are 75x125 feet each, and average $200 in price.

BUSY MONTH IN OLD SAN DIEGO.

BUILDING PERMIT VALUES DO THE HIGH JUMP.

Total Is More Than Double That of January—Big Sum Being Put Into Dwellings at Coronado—Attorney Plans Large Apartment House at First and Grape Streets.

SAN DIEGO, Feb. 29.—Building permits of February total $296,745, as compared with $102,910 for the same number of days last month, a gain of $43,835. The permits for January totaled $117,260.

Attorney Patterson Sprigg has awarded to John Campbell the contract for an apartment house at the corner of First and Grape streets to cost about $16,658. C. W. Fox will build a $6000 residence on Brant street, between Redwood and Spruce streets, while George W. Marsh will erect a $5000 residence on Sixteenth, between E and F streets. Emelia Schafer will build a cottage on the corner of Third and Pennsylvania which will cost $3750. J. D. Raymond will build a residence on Thirteenth street, between Polk and Lincoln streets.

D. L. Murray, of Arizona, will erect a $3500 cottage in the Hillcrest addition upon a lot on Third street, north of Washington street, for which he paid $2000. A lot, 100x140 feet, on Upas street between Seventh street and Park avenue, has been sold for $8000. Assistant City Attorney, J. W. Puterbaugh will build upon the lot he has bought on Third street, between University avenue and Washington street. Henry Neale has bought 166 feet of frontage on University boulevard, south of Campus avenue for $4500. W. M. Mason has bought 2700 acres of land in the Cuyamaca Mountains, near Descanso.

A. D. Haight has closed a deal with Charles H. Abernethey for the sale of the southeast corner of Front and Fir streets, for $5000. The property will be improved.

Unusual building activity is reported at Coronado, there being no less than $92,000 worth of buildings, chiefly dwellings, in process of construction.

Sales of the week include the purchase by G. W. Cotton from Jerome C. Ford, the lot and two-story dwelling at the corner of Albatross and Juniper streets, the lot being 100x100 feet, for $9000. The Land and Town Company has sold to J. Reed, of Seattle, four lots and a two-story house on Irving avenue for $4800. The Hillcrest Company has sold to Mrs. Margaret Boyes, forty feet of frontage on Third street, north of Washington street, for $1920.

Dr. S. F. Holt has bought the F. C. Gild place on the Terrace, in National City, for his brother, Frank Holt, a banker, from Oklahoma, who will reside there. The property is improved with a ten-room house. The consideration was $12,500.

MAKES SEVERAL EXCHANGES.

G. E. Delavan reports the following exchanges: A three-story brick block in Estherville, Iowa, owned by William Bartlett, and valued at $25,000, for a twenty-one-and-a-half-acre orange grove at Riverside, valued at $25,000. The grove was owned by W. D. Merikel. It is improved with a handsome residence, and other buildings. The buyer gets the crop.

C. W. Overton has exchanged a five-and-a-half-acre ranch at Altadena for a residence property, 50x175 feet, improved with an eight-room house, at Hollywood, owned by Frances M. Garriott. Each was valued at $5500.

Mike Polich has exchanged 340 acres in Alameda county, valued at $11,000, for a 320-acre farm in Garfield county, Nebraska, owned by W. T. Halliday, and held at $12,000.

George W. Henkel has exchanged a 200-acre farm in the Red River Valley, Minnesota, held at $8000 valuation, for a lot 40x135 feet, improved with a seven-room residence in Pasadena and four lots in San Diego, owned by Joseph Mankiewicz and valued at $8000.

SELLS WATER-BEARING LANDS.

The San Diego Flume Company has transferred to the La Mesa Development Company, 1400 acres of land adjoining La Mesa townsite, San Diego county. The purchase includes the Pine Valley reservoir site and adjacent water-bearing lands. The consideration was $155,000.

TRANSFER RANCHES.

Jesse Masquad has transferred to W. H. Gafford his eighty-acre hill ranch and a twenty-acre orange ranch at Glendora for $12,500 cash, and twenty-eight acres of hill land in Eagle Rock Valley. The deal was through

SKYSCRAPER BIDS ASKED.

Foundation Work to Be Begun on Consolidated Realty Building—Anaheim Library Plans.

Much work is being planned for the remainder of the year by the local architects and designers. Out-of-town architects also are busy, as the following details, clipped from the columns of the Builder and Contractor, will show:

Harrison Albright has prepared the working drawings for the substructure of the large building to be erected at Sixth and Hill streets, for the Consolidated Realty Company, and bids for the construction of concrete retaining walls for the building are now taken. All the proposed work is calculated on the basis of a ten-story structure, and will be massive in proportions, as it is fully intended to carry the work to the extreme limit should matters adjust themselves before the time arrives for lay the roof. The building will cover a floor area of 150 feet on Hill street and 126 feet of Sixth street. The basement will be divided into three sections—62x85 feet, 77x77 feet and 64x140 feet.

John C. Austin has completed the plans for the proposed public library building to be erected at Anaheim. It will be one story, with high basement, 50x70 feet, and constructed of brick on a concrete foundation, with a pressed-brick facing.

Skilling & Neher have taken bids for the superstructure of the eight-story hotel and apartment building now being erected on the northeast corner of Fourth and Grand avenue for Miss Mira Hershey. The concrete foundation work was completed several weeks ago.

Edward J. Borgemeyer is drawing plans for a two-story brick building, 40x80 feet, to be built on East Ninth street, near San Pedro street, for Charles Nemethi. It will be used for light manufacturing purposes.

The design submitted by Miss Alice H. Arnold of the Arts and Crafts Gallery, for a new electric theater, to be built at Venice, has been accepted by Abbot Kinney.

Frank M. Tyler is drawing plans for a two-story eight-room frame residence to be erected on New Hampshire street, near San Marino avenue, for E. E. Jones. It will have artificial stone front porch and trimmings, hardwood floors, beams, paneled walls, furnace, gas, electricity and other first-class conveniences.

Myron Hunt and Elmer Grey will prepare the plans of the proposed Throop Institute buildings, which are to be erected at the corner of California street and Wilson avenue, Pasadena.

A. F. Rosenheim is preparing plans of the store fixtures and interior woodwork for the Hamburger department store building at Eighth and Broadway. He will also start work Monday morning, directing the remodeling of the first floor of the Grant building at Fourth and Broadway, which is to be occupied by Montgomery Bros., jewelers. The ornamental iron store fronts have arrived from Chicago, and as soon as practicable the installation of the store fixtures will be begun. These fixtures were manufactured in the East, at a cost of $52,500.

Franklin P. Burnham has prepared plans for a bank building to be erected at Hemet for the Bank of Hemet. It will be 30x80 feet, with the pressed brick exterior and artificial stone trim, plate-glass windows and composition roofing. It will be equipped with the necessary vaults, safes, etc. and up-to-date bank fixtures. The same architect has prepared plans for a six-room bungalow to be built at Oneonta Park for W. B. White of Chicago. It will have cobblestone foundation walls, hardwood floors and all modern conveniences. He is also making plans for an addition to the public library at Riverside. It will be built of brick, on [illegible] the capacity of the stockroom, children's and reference rooms, and will cost about $10,500.

G. H. Ashby has drawn plans for a one-story brick bungalow to be built on Eagle Rock avenue, near Strickland Road, for William McFarland. It will have hardwood floors, beam ceilings in parlor and dining-room, two clinker-brick mantels, and a mission buffet.

Arthur B. Benton has prepared plans of a conveniently arranged dwelling for Mrs. Willis E. Hutchason, to be built at the corner of West Twenty-fourth and Romeo streets. The extreme dimensions are 45x66 feet, with an open court 13x31 feet. It will be of frame construction, with shingled exterior, cobblestone porch walls, etc. It will contain eight rooms on the first floor, and billiard room in the attic story. There will be a large cobblestone fireplace, hardwood floors and trim, built-in sideboard and detail work; two bathrooms, furnace, plate-glass windows, and gas and electricity.

B. Cooper Corbett is taking bids for a modern residence to be built at Fifth and Commonwealth avenue, for Daniel G. Grant. It will cover a ground space 38x50 feet.

C. C. Rittenhouse has prepared plans for a one and one-half-story eight-room frame residence to be constructed on Third avenue, near Pico street, for J. A. Dunham. He has also made plans for the remodeling of the Bryson Mausoleum, which will be removed from Rosedale to Inglewood Cemetery. The floor and roof will be reinforced concrete, the outside walls of Italian marble. The same architect has also drawn plans for a one-story frame hospital building to be constructed at El Centro, Imperial county, for Dr. Virgil McCombs. It will be 50x80 feet in size, and will contain twelve rooms. The entire building will be encircled by a screen porch.

Paul C. Pape has prepared plans for a malt house for the Los Angeles Brewing Company, to be built at the corner of Moulton avenue. It is irregular in shape, of brick construction, with steel beams and columns, comprising a building one, four and six stories in height. The one-story portion will contain pneumatic drums, manufactured in Milwaukee, Wis. The four-story portion will be for the still house and steep tanks, the six-story portion will contain grain and malt bins; also three grain lifts, and one passenger elevator. A tower with stairway also will be built in connection. It will be 11.8 feet square and have a tile roof. The six-story portion will be 95.8x65.8 feet; the four-story, 126.4x25 feet and the one-story 100x62 feet. A concrete floor will extend over all.

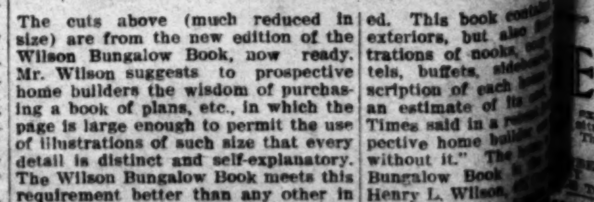
SELLS LEASE FOR CASH.

The H. Jerome Toy Hotel Brokerage Company reports the sale of the lease and furnishings of the Stanford Hotel at the corner of Hill and Fourth streets, owned by E. E. Withrow, to F. Iremonger of Denver, Colo., for $3800 cash.



The cuts above (much reduced in size) are from the new edition of the Wilson Bungalow Book, now ready. Mr. Wilson suggests to prospective home builders the wisdom of purchasing a book of plans, etc., in which the page is large enough to permit the use of illustrations of such size that every detail is distinct and self-explanatory. The Wilson Bungalow Book meets this requirement better than any other in the field, and yet its price (one dollar) is no more than that of the miniature books with which the market is flooded. GOSSIP OF THE FOREIGN STAGE.

BY HAYDEN CHURCH.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 27.—In Paris, of late, it has become the fashion for theatrical managements to invite playgoers to record their opinions on different subjects by means of the ballot. M. Gemier, the astute actor-manager of the Theater Antoine, started this practice by asking his patrons how they should like him to "make up" as Sherlock Holmes, and the almost universal verdict was that the great detective should be represented as his creator had described him, which, of course, was only common sense. Accordingly, M. Gemier is as English in the part as it is possible for a Frenchman to be, and even carries realism so far as to light his pipe with British wax vestas instead of lucifers as made in France. Thanks, perhaps, in part to this policy, the Gillette drama, which has been changed only slightly for French use, is the biggest of successes, and promises to crowd the Antoine until the robins nest again.

Meanwhile, patrons of the Paris "Vaudeville" are about to be asked to adjudicate on the question, "Is Divorce a Failure?" which query is put by Paul Bourget in his piece, "Un Divorce," at the playhouse mentioned. Beginning next Monday, every person in the audience will receive a paper to be filled up and placed in a ballot box in the hall of the theater. This paper asks whether the voter favors (1) Indissolubility of marriage; (2) the status quo; (3) divorce by mutual agreement; (4) divorce by the wish of only one party, or (5) free love.

In Bourget's play (which is, of course, a dramatization of his novel,) three of the characters, a priest, a grandmother and the latter's daughter-in-law believe in the indissolubility of marriage. The old lady's son, a freethinking doctor, holds for divorce. The young hero, who is the doctor's stepson, and a young doctress plump boldly for free love. The dramatist is obviously of the first opinion. But at the "repetition general" (which corresponds to our first-night performance) the free lovers got rather more applause than the champions of marriages made in heaven or the commonsense doctor who does not think that marriage is a failure on principle, but believes, with a few other people, that when a union is a distinct failure, the best course all round is to dissolve it. First nighters, however, are inclined to judge a play merely as a play, and to applaud the best bits of a play merely because they are the best, no matter what the purpose—at least that is the opinion of M. Bourget, and the manager who stages his piece. The general public may take a greater interest in the "purpose" and a delight in recording votes. This the ballot boxes will show, and the verdict will be almost as interesting as that regarding the personal appearance of Sherlock Holmes.

A sojourner in Paris last week, I saw the Bourget piece (which is not for Anglo-Saxon audiences) and also a new comedy at the Gymnase that is to be done into English, though whether it will duplicate the success of "My Wife" and "Her Father"—biggest of hits at the London Haymarket—is another matter. Paris, however, has given a warm welcome to "The Happiness of Jacquelin," and it may prove as successful when adopted as "The Marriage of Kitty" and "The Freedom of Suzanne," which its title calls to mind. It would suit Forbes Robertson, for example, in case the latter's new piece by Henry James fails to score, or any American actor whose "long suit" is disinterested devotion.

The real hero of the Gymnase play (whose author is M. Gavault) is Fernand Ravenels, who watches over "The Happiness of Jacquelin" though to rather small purpose. He is thirty-six and looks fifty, and in the beginning we find Jacquelin engaged to him, but she soon transfers her affection to Henri Lignieres, who is younger and vastly better looking. As a matter of fact, the girl has engaged herself to Fernand (whose family have adopted her) largely because he asked her to, and she now asks if he would be very much hurt at renouncing the idea that they should marry. Fernand, who is a noble creature, with a tendency to priggishness, says "No," which is not true, of course, but little Jacquelin believes him and runs along to the other man. Here the curtain of the first act leaves us.

The disinterested watcher over Jacquelin's happiness soon enough has matter to occupy him. The latter's young husband proves to be a philanderer, and his doings are revealed by a character who is rather a novelty in stage types. This is an inveterate diarist, a sort of authentic Miss Robinson of Druce fame, in the person of one Pointillon. He is always finding scandal to be put down in his diary, and the worst of it is that he has a reserved reputation for accuracy. Through Pointillon, Jacquelin learns that her husband and an American widow are carrying on a violent flirtation—if not worse—at a tiny seaside resort, and the young wife is broken-hearted at the discovery. It is an occasion for Fernand, and he plays the part of comforter, again speaking noble untruths with the best intentions. The husband is not unfaithful, he says, merely busy about Jacquelin's money affairs. He even declares that the lady in question is his own affair, and undertakes to fight a duel with a third man who also claims first call on the widow's affections. (Here, as at other points in the piece, the adapter into English will have his difficulties.)

In the third and last act Jacquelin learns the truth, and the house of cards that Fernand has erected in honor of her happiness comes tumbling to the ground. After a "scene" with her husband—who tells her not to be a silly little bourgeoise; they do that sort of thing in his world—she leaves him. She refuses, moreover, to return, and finally throws herself into the arms of Fernand, who, nobly lying as usual, says at first that it is too late. But he does not mean it a bit, and we are left to infer that, despite Paul Bourget, the divorce court will be set to work, and that it will be "the happiness of Fernand" thereafter. At the Gymnase Mlle. Regnier is Jacquelin, and Abel Tarride, Fernand, and both play excellently. In French it is not a half-bad evening's amusement, but, in English, we "hae our doots!" According to report, however, the American rights already are disposed of, and for the English ones negotiations are pending. Evidently the spell of recent French winners is strong upon Anglo-Saxon managements.

That weird genius, Beerbohm Tree, has found a part that suits him in Locke's "Beloved Vagabond." It is who will present in Los Angeles this week her new play, "Glorious Betsy," a pretty romance with a basis of American history as its fundamental factor. Miss Mannering has not appeared in this city for some years.

comes the real Paragot. Of course, no one who is as fond of a novel as most readers are of "The Beloved Vagabond" will ever be satisfied with any dramatization of that novel, but Mr. Locke has at least made what promises to be a successful play out of this book by dint of laying stress on the story which in the book amounts to little, and giving us a minimum of the atmosphere, which made most of the charm of his novel.

A successful American playwright observed to the writer yesterday that whenever he undertook to dramatize a novel, he carefully abstained from reading that novel, but had some one else read it and then tell him the story. Then he went to work and wrote the play. After that, he read the novel to see if there was anything in it that would be of any use to the play. Apparently this is what Mr. Locke did, so far as he could, with his own novel, remembering only the slight plot and forgetting pretty much all else, except what would be of special use to the character actor for whom the play was being written. It is a pity to quarrel with the result, for with all its failure to convey across the footlights more than a tithe of the charm of the novel, it has more imagination, character and charm than nine out of every ten plays London sees.

In the first act we find Gaston de Nerac as a Parisian of fashion and promising genius, about to wed the daughter of an English nobleman, who has become involved in a bank scandal. To get the funds needed to save the father, Gaston signs an agreement with a rich and villainous French Count to leave Paris without a word of explanation to his bride-to-be. He does it so Quixotically and paradoxically and epigrammatically that the audience tries to forget what a silly thing it is to do.

In the next act we find the noble Gaston become the houseless, thirsty, dirty, occasionally joyous and always sentimental philosopher Paragot. And here he is at his best. For the delast act between the partially besotted Paragot and the lady of his dreams. In the book, the philosopher weds the waif, Blanquette, whom he had befriended on his wanderings; but in the play, as a mistaken concession to theatrical traditions, he is restored to the arms of the gracious lady whom he had surrendered to the villainous and fortunately moribund French Count. The enthusiasm of the first-night audience, which was unrestrained at the end of the second act, was so much cooled by this third act that perhaps Mr. Tree will see the error of his ways and permit Mr. Locke to change the ending.

Marion Tiffany, a young actress well-known on the local stage, is making a success in stock at the Isis Theater of San Diego. Both she and her husband, Gerald Harcourt, are residents of Los Angeles. Mr. Harcourt is at present filling an engagement in Stockton.

REMARKABLE PLAYER.

Versatility and Dramatic Intelligence of Florence Stone Lead to Hopes for Better Things Next Year.

Florence Stone, who concluded her engagement here last night—as did the rest of the Ferris' company—has appeared in a remarkable number of roles in the past two seasons—and roles extremely diverse.

She has played Mary Magdalene, in "The Holy City;" the sprightly little Lady Kitty Bristol, in "The Marriage of William Ashe;" sedate Kate Shannon, in the play of that name; the sinuous Cleopatra and the country heroine of "Eagle Tavern," the Empress Theodora, beautiful Tosca—and a negro cabin boy in "Under the Polar Star," not to mention an Indian maiden, a young Roman girl and an English woman, beside a variety of other parts.

Florence Stone is one of the most remarkable leading women who has ever appeared in this city, and local audidramatic importance.

Will Mr. Ferris grant us that chance next year?

ACTRESS ON COINS.

Mary Mannering's Face Serves Government Designer as Model for New Ten-Dollar Pieces.

Mary Mannering's head will be the model for the artist's design on the new issue of $10 pieces, which it is said will soon replace that other new issue which has come in for such general criticism.

The artist who has been commissioned to make the design for the new coins communicated with the Treasury Department, and a government photographer was sent last week from Washington to San Antonio, Tex., to take the actress's head in many positions.

Henry Hering, sculptor, who has been an assistant of Saint-Gaudens for a number of years, made the selection of Miss Mannering for the model, and the government officials will probably ratify his choice within a few days.

If the Coinage Committtee issues the new coins with Miss Mannering as the subject, as it is believed they will, she will be one of three American women whose faces have been duplicated on United States money.

THE LOCAL WEEK.

Mary Mannering and her company will be seen at the Mason Operahouse this week in "Glorious Betsy," her new play, by Rida Johnson Young, author of "Brown of Harvard."

The actress will impersonate Elizabeth Patterson of Baltimore, a lovely and high-spirited young woman, who married Lieut. Jerôme Bonaparte, brother of the French Emperor, during the former's visit to this country on official business connected with the sale of Louisiana to the United States.

"If I Were King" will be given an elaborate revival today at the Bur-notable successes at the last presentation.

Mr. Desmond will be seen as François Villon, Mr. Mestayer as King Louis XI, Maude Gilbert as Huguette and Blanche Hall as Catherine de Vaucelles.

Florence Roberts, returning East over the southern route, will again spend a week at the Los Angeles Theater, commencing today, and presenting Elmer Harris's play, "Sham."

Paul Armstrong's colorful and well-known western play, "The Heir to the Hoorah," is to be given its first western stock production tomorrow night at the Belasco Theater. Lewis Stone will appear in the leading role, and it is promised that the varied character parts will be well taken.

William Hawtrey, formerly of the Frohman forces and best known as the original "Man from Mars," is to appear at the Orpheum this week in "Compromise," a one-act play, by Louis Joseph Vance. Hawtrey will initiate the new Monday matinées tomorrow.

A novelty act is supplied by Alice Norton, who makes what she claims are genuine rubies and sapphires in full view of the audience, afterward distributing her uncut gems.

Violet Dale, well-known comedienne, is booked for a week. The Four Amatis will be heard in a musical number.

Fred Walton remains another week with his "Silent Soldier," and other holdovers are the Picchianis, the Clarkes and Czinka Panna.

The Elleford company will present "Beacon Lights" at the Grand for the week commencing with this afternoon's performance. "Beacon Lights" is laid in New Mexico, and is said to be a melodrama of high-class features.

Los Angeles Public Library

Bessie Tannehill, Miss Nellie Montgomery, Richard Kipling and George Morrell are included in the cast.

Dramagraphs.

Burr McIntosh has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, showing an indebtedness of $12,871, and assets of $1775.

Marie Doro will appear in London next summer in a new play by W. J. Locke, author of "The Morals of Marcus."

The title of Henrietta Crosman's new play has been changed from "The Smoke and the Fire" to "The New Mrs. Loring."

Amelia Bingham is planning to revive "The Climbers," "The Frisky Mrs. Johnson" and "The Modern Magdalen" for a spring tour.

"Masks and Faces," one of Ben Greet's new plays this season, was a great favorite with the late Augustine Daly. Ada Rehan's Peg Woffington was considered one of her best impersonations.

Adeline Genee, it is reported, has signed a contract to appear in America for a number of years. A new production is being arranged for her next season.

J. Austin Strong's play, "The Toymaker of Nuremberg," is to be produced in London, probably with Albert Chevalier in the title role. The third act has been rewritten.

Maude Adams and her company have begun rehearsals of "The Taming of the Shrew," the play selected for Miss Adams's appearance at Harvard University next June.

It was announced last week that Virginia Harned would not be under the management of the Shuberts next season. Her projected tour in "Camille" was abandoned two or three weeks ago.

Edna May has been discovered at Biaritz, whre she has taken up golf. She told an American friend who was visiting this resort that she never expected to appear upon the stage again.

Julia Hay, daughter of the late Col. Edwin T. Hay, became a member of "The Witching Hour" company at the Hackett Theater, in New York, last Monday, succeeding Madeline Louis in the role of Viola.

Gabriele d'Annunzio has four new plays under way. They are "Amaranta," "Nero," "Tristan and Isolde" and "Ninna Pompillo." His latest play, "La Naye," will be produced in London, and probably in New York.

An opera called "The Merry Kiddo," written by Arthur K. Stern, had a production in Philadelphia the other evening by some amateurs, and there was enough merit in the work to promise it a hearing on the professional stage.

Charles Frohman has already placed the order for costumes for Ethel Barrymore and her company, who will appear next September in a revival of "As You Like It." It will be remembered that Miss Barrymore personally designed all of the costumes.

Though Mme. Schumann-Heink had decided not to sing at Bayreuth this year, it is now likely that the popular German contralto will participate in both the Bayreuth and Munich Wagner festivals, in July and August, contracts having been offered her, which she is considering and will probably accept.

Emmy Destinn, the Bohemian prima donna at the Royal Opera, Berlin, who comes to the Metropolitan next fall, has added to her literary achievements, which have already won her distinction in a sphere apart from her professional activities. She has completed a drama of Ghetto life in Prague, and rehearsals have already commenced for its premiere at the National Theater, in Prague.

Margaret Anglin retired from Henry Miller's company at the conclusion of the engagement of "The Great Divide," at the Majestic Theater in Boston, last Saturday night. She is now rehearsing "The Awakening of Helena Richie," which will be brought out in Providence. Mr. Miller is playing an engagement at the Providence Operahouse, and Edith Wynne Matthison is now playing the part of Ruth Jordan.

Mme. Olive Fremstad, of the Metropolitan Operahouse, has received by cable an offer asking her to appear at two performances of "Parsifal" in Amsterdam, in which work she sings Kundry. The performances are to take place in the summer. This artist has also been invited to sing Salomé in Strauss's music drama of like name, which work is to be performed in Cologne, and is to be one of a series of festival performances.

An enterprising manager in New Orleans, in order to put on a play in a realistic fashion, advertised for some rattlesnakes, with the expectation that there would be no answers. The next day a half-dozen men appeared at the stage door with reptiles securely fastened in boxes, and the manager had to take them for a play called "Through Death Valley." They were only used for one performance, and then the company rebelled. It was a sort of realism not appreciated.

William Faversham will sever his connection with Liebler & Co. at the end of the season. He has contracted for three new plays, to be produced under his own management, following the lines of James K. Hackett. One of them is called "The Explorers," written by Langdon Mitchell, dealing with army life in India. Another is a drama on New York society life, the work of Martha Morton. He will also use "The World and His Wife," written by Charles F. Nirdlinger.

Will M. Cressy, who is starring with Blanche Dayne in his new comedy, "A Village Lawyer," has for the past eight years been a most prominent figure in vaudeville as a player in his own sketches and as the author of 108 successful vaudeville playlets. As he has received from $500 to $1000 for every sketch that he has written, it will be seen that his earnings as a vaudeville playwright have been considerable. Today Mr. Cressy is generally regarded as the best player of "Down East" roles on the American stage.

Mme. Kommisarzhoffskaya (Countess Muravieff,) the most prominent Russian actress, has left St. Petersburg with her company of twenty, en route for the United States, where she will appear in a repertoire of plays by Russian and modern European writers. She will sail from Cherbourg on the Kaiser Wilhelm II, the company following on the steamer Koeln from Bremen. She will open March 15 in Ibsen's "Nora;" other presentations including Leonid Andrieff's symbolic drama, "The Life of a Man," and Sholom Aash's Jewish play, "The God of Revenge."

Jessie Busley, who recently signed a contract to star under the management of Charles Frohman next season, will spend the remainder of this season in vaudeville, offering a one-act play called "The Agitator," that is said to have made a great success in London. The piece was intended to be used by Maude Adams as a curtain raiser to "The Jesters," but as the latter piece was found to be long enough without it, "The Agitator" was turned over to Miss Busley, who has engaged a company of five people, and will begin a tour of the Keith and Proctor houses in the near future.

Arrangements have been concluded by which Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts will be starred jointly for a term of years under Klaw & Erlanger's management. William H. Crane and Stuart Robson found such a plan a financial, as well as an artistic, success, and every one remembers how well the work of those two actors balanced in plays like "The Henrietta." Messrs. Standing and Roberts will continue in "The Right of Way" for a few months, during the early part of next season. They will then present one or more new plays that provide them suitable roles. At present they are having two written for them. One will be from the pen of George Broadhurst and the other is now being written by Edmund Day, author of "The Round Up."

Claude Debussy's lyric setting of Maeterlinck's "Pelléas et Mélisande" was given for the first time in America at the Manhattan Operahouse last Wednesday. Such was the interest manifested in the production that every seat in the house was sold out early in the week. Many professional musicians and critics from other cities came to New York especially for the occasion. The audience received the novelty in a manner encouraging to Mr. Hammerstein. Mary Garden as Mélisande, Jean Perier as Pelléas, Hector Dufranne as Golaud and Jeanne Gerville-Réache as Génevieve sang the roles they created in the premiere of the work at the opera comique. The other parts were taken by Miss Sigrist and Mm. Crabbé and Arimondi.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

"Why," asks a contemporary musical writer, "is so little perfect vocal art manifest in these times of ours, even when every possible care seems to have been taken by students in the selection of instructors?"

To every observer of present conditions, the answer must be plainly apparent; the art of singing, like all other arts, has been gravely affected by the hurry of our day, the intense rush to "be somebody," the volcanic passion to win fame and name.

Intrinsically, I doubt not that voices are as good as ever; perhaps at no period of the world has there been a larger supply of promising material.

An apt little story is related of one of the great Italian tenors of fifty years ago, a man whose command over the powers of his own throat was little short of marvelous. Discovering that he possessed a naturally good voice, he took some indifferent preliminary instruction, and at last went to a famous teacher, confident that he would be perfected and "polished off" in the course of a few months, and be prepared to make a triumphal entry into the ranks of the celebrities.

After testing his voice in a number of ways, the music-master sat down and with his pen carefully filled a sheet of foolscap with certain exercises. "These," he said, handing the paper to the young man, will occupy our attention for two years, during which time you must sing nothing else."

Determined to do or die, the student acquiesced, and stuck to his text for two years. At the expiration of that period the master supplemented the list with another sheet and sent him back for two years more.

At the conclusion of the fourth year the student, already poor in purse and weary with the waiting, begged to be allowed to make a public appearance, but the master refused to assist him, or even to acknowledge him as his pupil. So he continued his studies with a very meager variation from the routine until the sixth year had been completed.

Then he came back to the teacher in despair, and, throwing his books and papers on the floor, declared, "I will never sing again, for art is to me nothing but misery."

The other smiled. "Now learn an opera," he said. "There is no greater singer in the world than yourself."

The student acquiesced, made his entry to the stage, and in a month was the sensation of Europe.

An Italian traveler, who is also a musical student, told me recently that the Occidental topsy-turvy hurry is seriously affecting vocal art in Europe, and that even in the most sacred temples of "bel canto" young men and women are neglecting the traditions, and are rushing to the front with half-finished method—and, of course, in the majority of cases disappearing from the little end of the horn within a few years.

One may travel across the continent nowadays, searching diligently, and yet not hear such exquisite vocal perfection as was manifested here a few months ago by Mme. Padovani. Padovani is not a young woman; in fact, she was older than members of her surrounding organization whose voices are already melancholy ruins. Yet her tones are as pure, as perfectly rounded and even as thrilling as in youth, although lacking somewhat in volume and qualified at moments by a certain readiness.

Wagner has been blamed by the unthinking for much of the vocal monstrosity now foisted on the operatic public. Such insinuations, however, are the basest slander. Both Wagner and his redoubtable wife championed true lyric art, and it is said that Frau Wagner told Jean de Reszke that she had never realized the innate possibilities of Tristan until she heard him sing it.

It is true, though, that the heavier and declamatory German opera has put false notions into the minds of many young men and women. Melodramatic shouting has been mistaken for true dramatic power, and each year many a singer, coming to the brink of catastrophe, hurls maledictions at the memory of the master who had no such evil intentions as this victim of self imagines.

The modern orchestration is also responsible for vocal disaster to the unwary. These heedless ones fear that nothing short of a laryngic explosion will carry over the increased volume of instrumental sound—forgetting that a pure tone, rightly placed, pierces an orchestral tutti like a shaft of light cutting a heavy wall of darkness.

The main trouble—laying aside pedagogic quackery and incompetent instruction—is hurry, hurry, hurry. The beginner pursues his or her studies arduously for a few months, and then, at the first gleam of realization, lays down the burden of toil, and forgets all in the pursuit of fame—or money.

Ignace Paderewski, the pianist, is expected to arrive tomorrow. His single recital will be given at the Auditorium on Tuesday evening, and indications point to a very large and fashionable audience.

His programme will include a Fugue and Variations of his own, played for the first time here; the Beethoven sonata Op. 27, No. 1; three Schubert-Liszt arrangements, including "The Erkling;" Nocturne in F Sharp Major, Etudes 10 and 5 from Op. 10, and scherzo in B Flat Minor, Chopin; "Chant d'Amour," Stojowski, and Liszt's Thirteenth Rhapsodie.

No less welcome a visitor than Mr. Paderewski will be Fritz Kreisler, the young Austrian violinist, who enraptured local audiences here a year or two ago.

He will play at Simpson Auditorium on Friday night, and without doubt his old virility of interpretations and masculine magnificence of tone will again be the dominating factor of his interpretations.

His programme is an ample one, including a Handel sonata, the Bach sonata in G Minor for violin alone, minor compositions by Martini, Francoeur, Couperin, Porpora and Tartini, and concluding studies by Dvorak, Wieniawski and Paganini.

The fifth symphony concert of this season will take place at the Auditorium Friday afternoon, Bruce Gordon Kingsley being the soloist. Mr. Kingsley will play, upon the great auditorium organ, the Handel concerto in G Minor.

The symphony will be Beethoven's sixth, and lesser orchestral numbers are Mendelssohn's "Trompeten" overture and Sibelius's "Finlandia" tone-poem.

Archibald Sessions's weekly Christ Church concert will be given on Wednesday evening, at which time he will be assisted by Carolyn von Benzon, soprano; Mrs. Von Benzon will sing Allitsen's "Song of Thanksgiving" and Nevin's "Love Divine."

Mr. Sessions will offer Guilmant's "Dreams," Lemaire's "Barcarolle" and the toccata from Widor's Fifth Symphony.

Interest is unanimous among all classes of theatergoers as far as con-ville performance for the Working Boys' Home, which will be given at the Auditorium a week from next Friday night.

The feature number will probably be Mrs. Elmer F. Woodbury's new musical play, in which she herself will appear as a queen of the ancient Incas.

Other strong local attractions will be Judge Curtis D. Wilbur and his inimitable "Bear Stories;" John Lindy Phillips, reader; Nuncia Sabini Bittiman, contralto; the unrivaled "Bank Clerks' Minstrels;" the Y.M.C.A. athletic section, in typical demonstrations; T. H. Wright's trained horse, St. Jordan; a violin solo by Marie Aspiroz; Scheck and Aldro, in an athletic act; monologue, by Miriam Eskridge; Nanno Woods, in Irish songs and dances; sketch and solos by Maude Nichols Lynn and her Teddy Bears; costume ballads, by Louise Nixon Hill; selections, by Carolyn von Benzon, soprano.

Mrs. Woodbury's supporting company will include A. Sheldon Balinger, Charles Bowes and Mrs. Von Benzon.

RUSSIA'S MAD PIANIST.

Vladimir Boujukli, New Celebrity in the Musical World, Has Remarkable Talent.

"Genius is to madness close allied," says The Times European correspondent, writing from St. Petersburg, but seldom has the conjunction been so marked as in the case of Vladimir Boujukli, a pianist so talented that he fairly bewitches his audiences, and so eccentric that lunacy appears to offer the only possible explanation of his conduct. The father of this new celebrity, who has been dubbed "the mad pianist," is a Russian, and his mother, a Greek. He has been shut up in more than one lunatic asylum, carries a murderous knife in his boot, lives nobody knows where and never goes to bed till broad daylight. With all this he plays superbly and improvises, and when in the mood sits at the piano for twelve hours at a stretch.

Not unlike Ignace Paderewski in looks, his eccentricities are immeasurably greater. They are the joy of the unmusical public and the despair of concert givers. Boujukli can never be depended upon to appear at a fixed time for a concert. Not long ago he was engaged to play at the Warsaw Philmarnvic Society. The hall was crowded from roof to ceiling. One or two things were played by the orchestra and M. Boujukli's turn came. He was not in the artists' room. He was not in his hotel, where he hires a room, but is never to be found. The manager of the Philmarnvic, M. Rajchman, took a sledge and began to run over the town for Boujukli. At last somebody said he was at the opera. So he was. But no sooner did he see M. Rajchman from afar when he came out of the building, haled a sledge and drove off. M. Rajchman followed him but had slower horses so that it was some time before he could even get within earshot. Boujukli, hearing shouts behind him, urged his driver to more speed and shaking his fists at Rajchman threatened to run his knife through him if he dared come near.

There was nothing to do but go back and apologize to the audience, who had awaited the pianist in vain for over an hour. As his playing is very much appreciated this was no light task. Nothing was seen or heard of Boujukli for two or three days. Then he appeared at his hotel and telephoned to Rajchman, saying that he had seen a woman who pleased him very much at the opera that night and who had, therefore, put him out of humor with concerts and audiences. He promised to make up for his desertion by playing the next day and kept his word so well that he enchanted the audience till 1 o'clock in the morning.

While performing in Warsaw he has taken a lodging just outside the town in a suburb called the Wola, a most dangerous quarter, inhabited only by thieves, bandits and other desperate characters. Nobody but his bosom friend, an operatic singer called Metaxian, knows the exact whereabouts of this abode and, as Metaxian has been sworn to secrecy, there is not much chance that it will be found out.

He says, he keeps a knife for self-protection when returning home late at night. It is a long-bladed weapon, and can be seen stuck in his boot when he plays. When he performed with an orchestra a few days back, he ran off the platform in a towering passion, and threatened to stick the knife in the first person who came near him because the conductor kept bad time. The artists' room was cleared in less than a second. His rage soon passed, however, and he went to the Artists' Club, after the concert, where he played in the most delightful way till 3 o'clock in the morning.

His pupils speak most highly of him, and say that he is as patient as possible. But at evening parties his conduct is peculiar, to say the least of it. One night he was invited to a rich general's house. A large party was there to hear him. He played his best and, tired with his exertions, went to a small room and flung himself upon a sofa. People crowded after him to offer their congratulations; but were met in an unexpected way. The genius, instead of receiving them with smiles, spat upon them! But to show that he bore them no malice he soon returned to the piano and played till 4 o'clock in the morning. In spite of his peculiarities, Vladimir Boujukli is so highly gifted as a performer, possesses such temperament, feeling and technique that he ought to make a career, not only in Russia and Europe, but throughout the civilized world.

Saint Gaudens's Coins.

If one be familiar with Greek coinage, has mastered its technique and acquired its standards, the two coins Saint Gaudens modeled become inevitable, says a writer in the International Studio. Our usual coins put an indifferent picture on a flat disk. The Greek coiner treated the coin as a whole, filled its space with sense of composition, was careless of imitation, conventionalized natural objects, and gained "color" by high relief. This norm Saint Gaudens followed. The eagle of his $10 piece is suggested by familiar and beautiful coins of great vigor and force of Ptolemy Philadelphus and Eurgetes. The $20 piece has a soaring eagle of his own model. Both are medals, rather than coins.

Both are too high for the working of modern machinery. Neither appeals to those schooled to our flat coins. To those trained by earlier models, the designs of Saint Gaudens are the only ones in our day above the mere draughtsman's level. Little more depressing has occurred in our day than the baiting these coins have had from newspaper and sciolist. No application of art to familiar objects is possible where men are wedded to their preconceptions and are ignorant of the succession of art. These coins had precisely the reception which a great portrait would receive in a land where no man had ever looked on aught but a village photograph.

Sketches by Mr. Conner.

Beginning next week and continuing for several months, Albert Clinton Conner will hold an exhibition and sale of his latest landscape sketches, to the number of a hundred or more, at his studio at No. 232 South Griffin avenue. Mr. Conner is contemplating the building of a home and studio at Manhattan Beach. This move will be very much to his advantage, for the artist loves the sea, and has long desired to

Art and Artists

BY ANTONY E. ANDERSON.

Pictures by Marion K. Wachtel.

Two of the most notable art events of the year in Los Angeles—the exhibitions of pictures by Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel and Elmer Wachtel—are very near at hand. Mrs. Wachtel's recent water colors, about twenty-five of them, will be shown at Steckel's gallery for two weeks, beginning tomorrow. Mr. Wachtel's oils will be exhibited at Blanchard's gallery about the fifteenth of this month.

Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel's superlative gifts as a painter did not come to her by chance. They are an inheritance. Her grandfather was an artist of distinction, and her mother was the well-known water colorist of Milwaukee. Her good luck has continued, for she is married to one of the most distinguished of our western painters.

Marion Kavanaugh (now Mrs. Wachtel) had already won a name as an artist when she came to Los Angeles. This was only a few years ago, but since then her reputation has grown with amazing rapidity. To my mind, she is one of the strongest, most unique, most original water-color painters that America—or any other country—as yet produced. This is high praise, but her work, as exhibited at Steckel's this week, will bear me out in my opinion, I think. Nor do I stand alone. Others have felt as I do about her pictures, and have had the courage to say so.

She is still at an age which, for most painters, would be the very beginning of their art career. She has actually "arrived" at a period of life when others are only starting into the race. One is left to wonder as to what almost impossible heights of achievement she will reach, if the jealous Fates do not interfere.

Already she has done in water colors what has not been done so well by anybody before her. With absolute sincerity, simplicity and directness, and with pure transparent washes only, she has painted pictures that for strength and solidity bear comparison with the canvases painted in the opaque medium of oil colors. She has the wizard's touch, apparently, and yet there is no necromancy about it. She simply paints from absolute knowledge—and knows how to do it without a single superfluous or uncertain touch. In other words, she is a master of her craft.

There are those who would contend that a water color has no business to be mistaken for an oil, even at a casual glance, when seen at some distance away. But why not? Is a wishy-washy effect so to be desired that one must not ask for more on a piece of paper? Are quality and texture crimes in water-color painting? If not, why not get them if you can? Most dabblers in aqua pura can't get them, so they set up a hue and cry against them. They call them trickeries. They say that those rare painters who do get them are benighted imitators of the painters in oils.

Such criticism is as puerile as it is ignorant. The nearer a water color approaches nature in its representation—the more it has that quality known as truth—the more it will resemble an oil at first glance, if the oil is also true. The painter in oils and the painter in water colors have met and shaken hands on a very high level—because both have surmounted difficulties common to both. Neither tried to imitate the other, but both kept on mounting, each from his own chosen side of Parnassus—and thus they finally met. Canvas or paper—colors ground in water or in oil—the true artist, looking to nature only for his inspiration, will make the one serve exactly as well as the other. In fact, he will forget all about his medium as soon as he begins to work. His business is with matters of much more importance

Details of the marriage of Miss Ellen Rowena Meyer Blossom, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Blossom, formerly of No. 844 Fifth avenue, New York, but now of Pasadena, to John Vischer Eliot of Pasadena, which is scheduled to take place in All Saints' Church on Tuesday, have been fully decided upon. The ceremony will be performed in the afternoon and will be followed by a reception at "The Blossoms," the handsome estate of Mr. and Mrs. Blossom, on Orange Grove avenue. Miss Blossom will be attended by a matron of honor, Mrs. John Kingsley Macomber, Jr., of this city, and a maid of honor, Miss Marguerite Arkell of Pasadena and four maids. The last named will be Miss Nina Jones, daughter of Mrs. Milo M. Potter of Los Angeles; Miss Elizabeth Drake, daughter of Charles Rivers Drake of South Hoover street; Miss Cordelia Stimson and Miss Laura Eliot of Pasadena. Mr. Eliot will be supported by his brother, Edward Luddington Eliot, and the ushers will be Roy Bradley Wheeler, Reginald Johnson, Marshall Watkyns, Cloyd Guyer, Max Blankenhorn and C. Wellsley Roberts.

Anderson-Selbie Nuptials.

The wedding, Friday evening, of Miss Elise Anderson and Lieut. William Eliot Selbie, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Anderson of Shatton Place, was among the season's most fashionable events. Miss Anderson has lived in Los Angeles nearly her whole life, and has a wide circle of friends. She is especially popular with the younger set, who regret that the wedding will necessitate her leaving Los Angeles for the Philippines, where Lieut. Selbie will be stationed. Although Miss Anderson offers no hope for her immediate return, society is hoping that the fates will be kind and that the lieutenant will be ordered to a nearer post. A handsome gown of white messaline, lace trimmed, was worn by the bride and she carried a shower of lilies of the valley. The matron, Mrs. John Henry Saunders, was gowned in a lace robe with garnitures of pink and carried pink rosebuds. The maids, Miss Juana Creighton, Miss Nora Dickenson, Miss Rie Anderson of San Diego and Miss Jessie du Bose of San Francisco, were attired in pretty pink creations and carried arm bouquets of Enchantress carnations. Little Laura and Eleanor Anderson, in pink and white frocks, assisted as ribbon bearers, and Virginia Anderson, in a fluffy dress of white, scattered rose petals along the path of the bridal party. Lieut. James Gordon Steese of San Diego was best man and the groomsmen were S. H. Moise, Rembert Anderson, the bride's brother, Cecil Borden and Harry Borden. Music was furnished by Arend. The decorations, in charge of Miss Waite, were artistic. In the living-room, where the ceremony was performed, almond blossoms and Woodwardia ferns formed a veritable bower. Bishop Johnson officiated beneath a large shaded light, on either side being tall shaded candelabra. Pink tulle and ribbon also added to the attractiveness of this room. The hall was a mass of greenery, asparagus plumosus being caught lightly to the beams. The stairway was entwined with greenery and at the first landing a great mass of Easter lilies were arranged. Pink Enchantress carnations were used in the library and the dining-room glowed with pink stock and hyacinths. Over head a canopy of asparagus plumosus was erected and directly over the table, suspended by streamers of gauze ribbon, hung a satin wedding ring. On the table were a low Dutch basket, filled with fragrant pink blossoms, and pink-shaded candelabra. The buffet and mantel were banked with wild maidenhair ferns.

Silver Threads

Among the gold! What a story they tell of fast passing years, and youth and strength. It is woman's duty, for her own sake, and for her husband's and family's sake, to retain her youthful appearance. Her influence, happiness, courage, and health depend very largely upon her personal appearance.

It gives us great pleasure to know that happiness has been restored to many homes by our timely assistance.

You need not fear the "silver threads." Nature has kindly provided a simple, cleanly, and perfectly harmless method of restoring gray hair to its beautiful natural color.

MRS. NETTIE HARRISON'S
Four-Day Hair Restorer

Is a harmless preparation that restores gray or faded hair to its natural color without any inconvenience or disagreeable after effects. Not a dye, cleanly to use; free from sediment or sticky matter. Price, $1 a bottle. All druggists.

If you have any defects of skin, scalp or general health, write me. Correspondence solicited.

Petticoats

A Sale Samples

A representative of one of the largest petticoat concerns in the country finished his trip here in Los Angeles last week, and, rather than ship his samples back to New York, turned them over to us at a mere fraction of their true worth. Tomorrow, if you're punctual, you may pick from the entire lot of more than two hunhundred, at a third or more less than the identical garments are selling for in our own regular stock. Styles, of course, are the very newest.

Black Sateen, Percaline, Heatherbloom, Moreen and Gingham skirts; tailor finished styles; flounced, ruffled and shirring trimmed modes. No two alike.

$1.00 Skirts 65c. $1.25 Skirts 85c. $1.50 Skirts $1.00.
$1.75 Skirts $1.25. $2.00 Skirts $1.65. $3.00 Skirts $2.00.
And at a like ratio throughout the entire line.

White Petticoats 1-3 Less

Another lot of samples listed for tomorrow embraces ten or twelve dozen white longcloth and cambric petticoats, and they are of a class that will pay any woman to look over and invest in.

Majority of them are of the better, finer grades, beautifully made and decorated.

Tomorrow's prices range from $22.50 on down to $1.00 and less.

Third Floor.

Popular Prices

We wish to thank our patrons, new and old, for their generous response to our spring announcement of Popular Prices. So timely was this announcement and so generous has been the response, that we have concluded to maintain these prices—from $35 up—until further notice.

We cordially invite inspection of our new spring stock, comprising over 1800 styles and patterns, including the latest importations from Paris. It cannot be duplicated in Los Angeles.

Our location carries comparatively low rent, enabling us to quote prices that cannot be met, always maintaining our high standard for material and workmanship. Our customers are our best references. Call and let us show how much we can give for a very moderate sum.

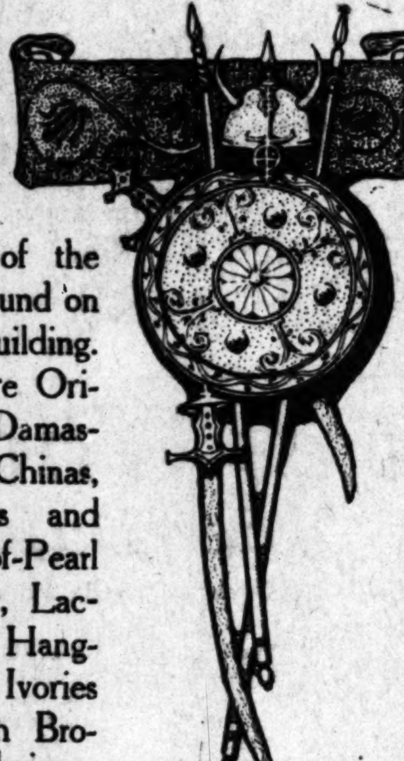
Art Wares From the Orient

The best that the artisans of the Orient have to offer will be found on the second floor of our new building. The choicest collection of rare Oriental Jewelry, Enamels and Damascenes; decorated Porcelains, Chinas, Cloisonne, Lacquer, Brasses and Bronzes; exquisite Mother-of-Pearl Inlaid Work on Silver, Ivory, Lacquer and Gold; rich Oriental Hangings and Draperies; Carved Ivories and Woods; wondrously rich Brocades, Tapestries and Embroideries.



$30 to $40 Oriental Rugs $20

Instead of an extravagance it is a real economy to buy these Oriental Rugs at $20—their wearing qualities are so far superior to any domestic rug.

Shirvan, Daghestan, Mosoul, and Ganges rugs of the class generally sold at $30, $35 and $40 are buyable here at $20.

And there are dozens of decidedly attractive patterns in sizes 3x5 ft. to 4x8 ft.

(Third Floor.)

The spring stocks of Val. laces are ready. No worthy kind missing from this collection.

Domestic Rug

We know of no other store selling 9x12 ft. Rugs of the best grade of Bigelow Wilton, in new desirable patterns, under $45.

Until the present supply is exhausted our price will be $35.

$32.50 for the same kind in the next smaller size—8¼x10½ feet.

19x37-inch hemstitched linen Huck Towels—firm, heavy quality of huck—cut from 35c to 25c each.

Bedding

Plenty of warm bedding needed all the year around in this climate.

Chances to make such money-saving purchases as these should not be allowed to pass by, in the hope that the need for such things will soon end.

$4.50 heavy white wool blankets in ten-quarter size, with wide silk binding, at $3.50 a pair.

Extra heavy white wool blankets in eleven-quarter size, with two-inch silk binding—pink or blue borders—at $4 instead of $5.50.

Eleven-quarter blankets of pure white wool—except 5 per cent. cotton in the warp, with button-hole stitched ends, pink or blue borders—at $5 instead of $6.50.

Full size eiderdown comforters covered with best quality sateen; $8 grade at $6; the $9 grade at $7, and the $10 grade at $8.

Slumber robes of Italian silk—white grounds with red, blue, green and salmon stripes—rare values at $1.50 and $2 each.

Eleven-quarter blankets of exceptionally soft, thick and fluffy white wool, with button-hole stitched ends, pink and blue borders—at $6 instead of $8.

Full size cotton comforters, filled with one sheet of carded cotton and covered with good silkoline—one dollar.

St. Louis, Mo., June 3, 1907.
Willard White Company, Chicago, Ill.:

Gentlemen—I wish to thank you for what Vaucaire Galega Tablets have done for me. I began taking them early last fall and weighed but 117 pounds; was very sallow and had blotches on my face. I have taken in all one dozen boxes and weigh 149 pounds. My complexion is clear, cheeks rosy, eyes bright and my bust measure has increased four inches. I noticed that my general health began to improve from the time I had taken half of my first box of your tablets. Very truly,
MARGARET NESBIT.

SOUTH BROADWAY

The New Belts

ONE of the popular fancies for the present season is elastic belts, in plain and steel-studded effects; all colors. The price range is from 75c up to $20.00.

A complete line of kid belts in all desirable shades of brown, blue, green, gray and red; also black; from 75c up to $6.00.

THE Millinery Department has been enlarged. Trimmed hats will have nearly twice as much space as formerly. This expansion is due to trade conditions—heavy purchases, and the fact that we expect to double last season's business—by featuring Dressy Hats, at moderate prices: four-fifty, five, six-fifty, seven-fifty, nine-fifty, twelve-fifty and fifteen dollars.

THE new Spring Hats show marked departures from former seasons' styles—one of the radical changes being the tendency to give the crown of the hat a more conspicuous place than heretofore. The height will be still further accentuated, in most cases, by the manner in which the trimmings are disposed. You are invited to inspect the new styles here tomorrow.

COMPELLING TRADE ATTRACTIONS TOMORROW

THE NEW YORK STORE believes in honest merchandise and honest merchandising. While an establishment may thrive, for a time, through questionable methods—its policy will sooner or later be found out. By keeping faith with the public; by purveying to popular tastes—constantly showing the newest styles, at the lowest prices at which it is possible to sell goods and remain in business—this house has built up a large and lucrative trade. Today's special offerings further emphasize its leadership in Los Angeles. Satisfied customers all over Southern California have learned to look to this establishment as headquarters for everything in the line of Women's Wearables.

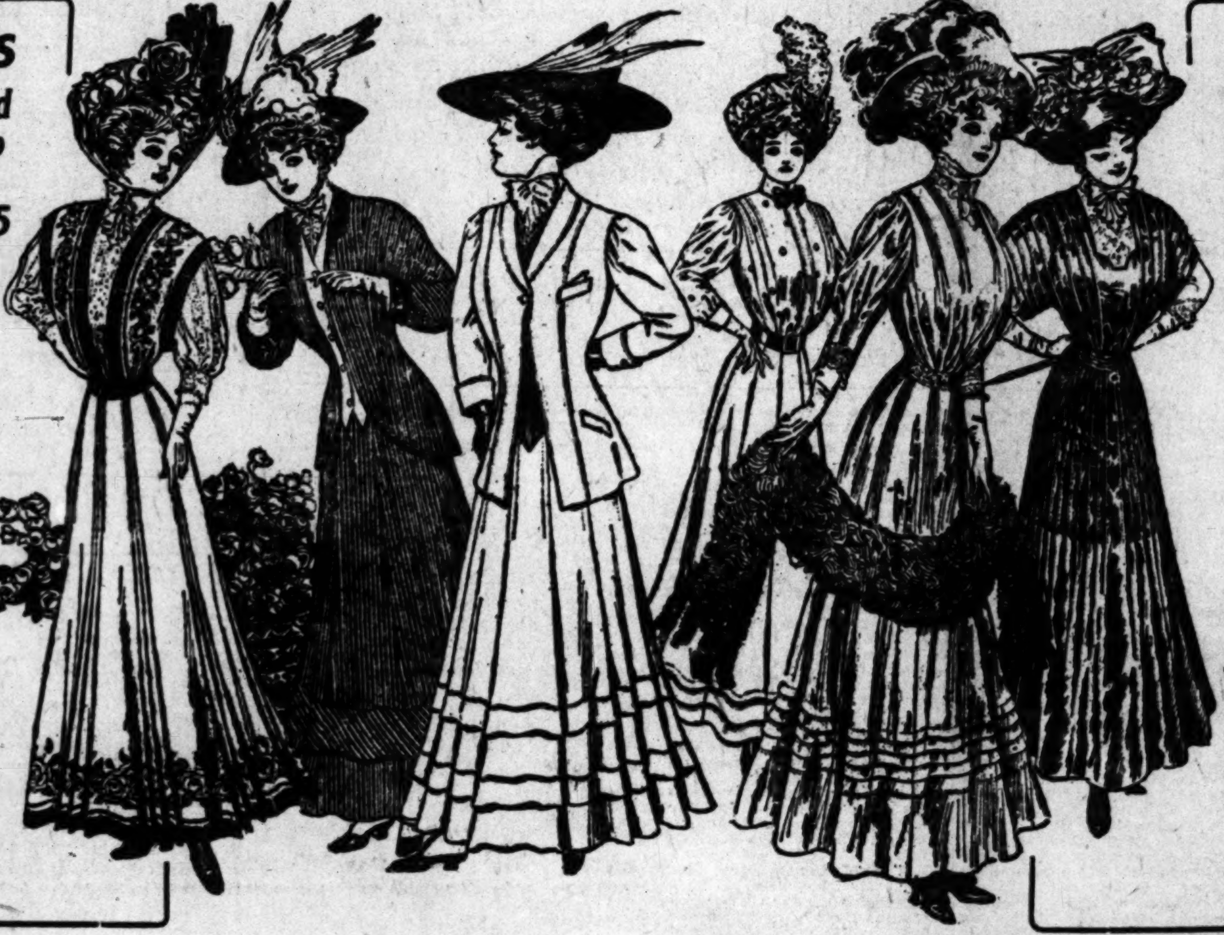
Tailored Suits

$19.50 And Up to $75

THE best makers of America—and that means of the world—have contributed to this showing of Spring Suits. Styles were never handsomer—nor assortments more satisfying. We now have on our floors nearly Eight Hundred New suits. We emphasize "New"—because there isn't an old suit in the entire showing.

Suits $19.50 to $75

THIS price range includes the most exclusive styles in silk and cloth suits—$19.50, $25.00, $29.00, $35.00, $45.00, $60.00 and $75.00—panamas, serges, herringbone stripes, voiles, etamines, taffetas and Rajahs. Every popular color is here—plain and fancy. The Prince Chap and the 30-inch fitted coat suits seem to be in the lead. Skirts are gored, pleated, paneled—whatever is considered correct. They are all here.



Late Styles in $20 Silk Suits at $12.50

THE first three figures of the cut show the one-piece silk Shirtwaist suits we offer for tomorrow's selling at $12.50. They are of Taffeta, Pongee, Rajah and other rough silks—trimmed with folds and pipings of the same materials, in contrasting colors. Choose between Champagne, russet, navy, azure blue, lavender and black. Skirts are full pleated and gored effects—falling loosely from the waist line. Straight $20.00 values—at $12.50 for choice.

Dresses from $15 to $65

EXQUISITE styles in one and two-piece dresses, which will be in popular favor this season. These are of taffeta, Rajah and pongee—many of them quite elaborate. Trimmed with laces, Persian braids, and bands of chiffon and other soft materials. The color range is particularly complete—in both plains and fancies. Prices range $15.00, $20.00, $25.00, $30.00, $35.00 and up to $65.00—splendidly good values.

SINNER AND SAINT REJECT FORTUNES

STRANGE CHOICE OF YOUNG WOMAN OF GENTLE BIRTH.

Refuses to Accept Legacy of $80,000 Left Her on Condition That She Abandon Her Dissolute Life and Return to Her Home—Young Man Turns His Back on $150,000.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Human nature abounds in startling contrasts, but seldom are its contrasts so strikingly revealed as in two cases which have just come to light simultaneously. In each of them the person concerned has rejected a considerable fortune, but for reasons which are as wide apart as the poles. In the one instance a young woman of gentle birth and breeding and good education has refused to accept a legacy of $80,000. In the other, a young man who enjoyed equal advantages in his youth has turned his back on $150,000.

The young woman has rejected her legacy because the condition attached to it is that she shall abandon her dissolute life and return to her father. The wages of sin have not brought her ease and luxuries. She lives in sordid poverty and the vilest of her sex. But the prospects of affluence do not tempt her, because she has a stronger motive to gratify—revenge. "I have been driven to what I am," she says, in effect, "through the faults of others. If my relations grieve for me, they deserve to grieve. That my dishonor may also be their dishonor I shall remain an impenitent and unreformed Magdalene. In no other way can I be avenged on them."

The young man has rejected his legacy because the condition attached to it is that within ten years he shall return to the religious faith in which he was brought up. He says he prefers the satisfaction of being true to his conscience—of following the "inward light"—to all the good things that riches might buy for him. He refuses to abandon his principles to escape poverty. What a sermon moralists might preach on the difference between the sacrifice made by the sinner and that made by the saint!

Four years ago the young woman, whose case presents such a curious psychological puzzle, was one of the belles of her native Welsh county. Dowered with rare beauty, tall, graceful and accomplished,, she had scores of admirers. The suitor whom she preferred turned out to be a scoundrel. He won her heart only to play her false. Her family did what respectable families usually do in such circumstances. They made things just as hard for her as they could. The man is probably still one of the pets of society. If he isn't, it isn't because of the episode which has wrecked a woman's life. Embittered and rebellious, the girl left her home and plunged into the depths. Too late her relations re-little while ago her mother died and in her will bequeathed her $80,000, subject to the conditions which I have stated. Her broken-hearted father, a retired colonel in the British army, was more than willing to take her back. Time and sorrow that have whitened his hair and softened his stubborn pride.

It took some time to find the girl. It was discovered that she was living in Cardiff, in Mary Ann street, a loathsome thoroughfare of moral lazar-houses. Despite the life she has led, disgrace's effacing fingers have not wholly swept away "the lines where beauty lingers." Her slum women associates speak of her with frank admiration as "Lil the Lady." The police, too, say that even in her most abandoned hours, when she is giving them the most trouble, it is easy to see that she is not like the rest.

How different was shown by her reception of the message which told her of the fortune which was hers to claim; of the home where she would be gladly welcomed back. "I don't want the money; it comes too late to do me any good. My heart was broken; let theirs break, too. Money cannot compensate me; let them keep it. I shall drink my cup of bitterness to the dregs; so shall they. Revenge is all I have left to live for."

Surely, not even in the pages of fiction, did a woman ever adopt a stranger method of revenge. She sacrifices a fortune and elects to lead a life of un-

Suit Sale.... Extraordinary

A sale with a reason behind it. A sale that offers you an opportunity to secure a stylish high-grade suit right at the beginning of the season, for about the same price you'd expect to pay at a clearance sale.

New York garment makers with whom we placed our orders have been shipping ahead of time, consequently we have more stock on hand than we can take care of conveniently. In order to sell out a lot of suits quickly, we inaugurate this big special sale beginning tomorrow morning. Be on hand early to secure the swellest suits.

Suits Worth $30 and $35 at $22.50

A great variety of suits in plain and fancy Panamas, wool, Rajah, plain serges and novelty stripes and checks; semi-fitting jackets, tight-fitting jackets, butterfly suits, dip front effects—a collection that includes all the really desirable new styles for spring wear. None but high-class garments in the lot, carefully tailored and faultless in fit and finish. Jackets are all silk lined and trimmed in the very latest styles. Suits that can't be duplicated anywhere for less than $30 and $35, go at $22.50.

Suits Worth $25 at $15

Another lot of suits, mostly semi-fitting effects in plain and fancy Panamas, stripes, checks and fancy novelties; jackets are full silk lined; skirts are either gored or pleated with folds on bottom. Suits bought to sell at $25, will be sacrificed for a few days at $15.

over the masculine, and that they understand human nature much better. The bachelors are sternly kept away from the softer sex, they are punished if found transgressing, and consequently forbidden fruit seems sweet, while the maids have made pleasure and amicable intercourse between the sexes the ostensible object of their club, most astutely arguing that the men are easier caught in their hours of ease and relaxation. So there are dances, card parties and music of all sorts, etc., among the members, the girls refusing their company outside the club, thus obliging the men to join. The president is Assunta Bessi, about 22 years old, who is aided and abetted by 150 maids, but their number is constantly growing.

The rules clearly show the real object of the society. The young men read them, of course, but probably not until their heads have already been turned and they are blind to their danger.

The first rule runs: "All girls over 16 years of age may join." The ages in the majority of cases run from 16 to 22.

Rule 2 establishes that "the entrance fee is two lire (40 cents,) and the monthly subscription one lire, which may be paid weekly, if the maid finds it more convenient." Fancy a husband for 20 cents a month! What an attraction to all unmarried women!

Rule 3. "The aim of the Good Hope Society is mutual help." The form is left purposely vague to be brought out more clearly in another rule.

Rule 4. "If one of the maids becomes engaged outside the club, she is permitted to introduce her fiancé, who thus becomes a member and subject to the rules."

Rule 5. "All the maids belonging to the society will pay a small sum into a fund set aside to aid the maids who are about to marry in the necessary expenses."

THE CLOVEN FOOT.

Rule 6. "The betrothed of a maid-member assumes a moral responsibility before the whole society, and should he fail in his word his case becomes the affair of the society." Here we see the first sign of the cloven foot.

Rule 7. "If the fiancé of a maid-member is unfaithful or breaks his word, all the other members are bound to revenge her."

Rule 8. "In the case of a maid having been deceived, it is the duty of the members to try and find her another husband."

Rule 9. "If a maid-member marries, the club is not to lose sight of her, and will aid her if the necessity arises."

Rule 10. "A man may spontaneously ask to be made a member, even if he does not know any of the maids, provided he is animated by the right sentiment, and if after one week he chooses a member as his fiancée."

This rule might as well be omitted, as no man has availed himself of it.

It will have been noticed that the terrors reserved for the culprit who goes back on his plighted word are not specified, and for that reason are probably all the more dreadful to the masculine imagination, but, after all, what can be done other than to cast him forth into the outer darkness?

This has happened practically only once in the three years since the "Good Hope" was formed. The young man who fell from grace was hauled up before the entire club and made to give his reasons, but as he pleaded youth (he was only 18) nothing was done except expel him with contumely. Another case was patched up within the club. A man transferred his affection, but as it was to another member, and as the brother of the faithless one offered to take his place, the peace was not broken; there was merely an amicable arrangement.

Thus even yet the punishment for faithless man has not been specialized; faithless woman apparently goes unscathed.

CALIFORNIAS HOLD UP BEST.

ORANGE MARKET WEAK, BUT OUTLOOK IS PROMISING.

Holiday Influences and Excessive Cold Combine to Lower Prices in Gotham, but Effect Is Only Temporary—Black Eye for Floridas and Porto Ricans.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Holiday influences and unsettled weather reduced the demand for oranges during the week just closed and sales have been rather weak and at somewhat lower prices. Floridas, in some instances have been disposed of below the cost of production. In fact, they have been the hardest hit of any variety offered.

Porto Ricos are nearly out of the market. Small supplies are still coming, but they cut little figure in the trade.

Buyers are not taking hold as freely as they might. This is particularly true of the retailers. Street men, however, have been operating actively and their carts are piled high with tempting fruit. Floridas are no longer offered by these peddlers as the Californias are so much better in appearance and in selling qualities.

Unquestionably the market centers wants to attract trade will invariably display this product.

The orange trade has been somewhat affected during the past week by the influx of apples, which are arriving in larger quantities than at any previous time this season. Strawberries are coming more freely, too, and the price is falling. Cranberries are all gone, which will help the orange trade to some extent, though the competition since the last season opened has been less severe than in past yars.

The outlook is very favorable and after the unpleasant weather conditions pass, the trade will settle down to the activity which receivers and dealers have predicted ever since the bine to give the California fruit even more prestige than it has already achieved.

Some of the southern crop has arrived in poor condition, as the effect of the cold. Some Floridas are almost entirely without juice because they were frozen in transit, or chilled on the tree. Dealers make a mistake in offering such fruit. It injures their business by creating an unfavorable impression among consumers. Some New York retailers, unfortunately, are unscrupulous and would sell anything that yielded a profit. Happily the inspectors of the Board of Health are active and this sort of dealing is frowned upon so severely that it has to be done

American cities have been discarded in all the important cities of Europe as being a menace rather than a protection to life and limb. In Berlin and in most other large European cities the "Liverpool fender" is in general use. This Liverpool fender is an unpatented device invented by Mr. Bellamy, the Liverpool tramway manager. Since its introduction 415 persons have been pushed off the track without a single failure and seldom with any injury. It consists simply of boards completely boxing in the truck, with belting below the bottom edge and rubber hose on the rounded ends of the long plows. It is called the "plow wheel guard," and simply RACING.

MARVELOUS TIME ON AUTO HILL-CLIMB.

Many Motors Make Record Runs up Pasadena-Altadena Grade in Presence of Large Crowd—Apperson Jackrabbit Furnishes Sensation.

WONDERFULLY fast tmie, a good course, and exceptionally capable management of the events marked the third annual Pasadena-Altadena hill-climb, held yesterday afternoon under the auspices of the Automobile Dealers' Association of Southern California. P. J. Q. Derkum, who broke world's motorcycle records at the meet of the Los Angeles Motorcycle Club, furnished one of the sensations of the day when he shot up the hill in the marvelous time of 1:17. This is at the rate of sixty-five miles an hour, over a course that rises from 3 to a 14 per cent. grade, and contains three turns.

The other sensation was the driving of Edgar Apperson, and the performance of his car. According to the official time, he drove both the ninth and tenth events in 1:36¼. This is at the rate of 52½ miles an hour, by far the fastest speed ever made up the course, and a speed that no one expects to see duplicated in the near future. Rounding the last turn, where the grade is the steepest, the rear wheels of the flying cream-colored Apperson hardly seemed to touch the ground for a hundred yards. But Apperson held his car steady around the turn, and although the flying gravel spurted into machines lined up in the neighboring fields, the rushing speed marvel hardly wavered. Every one thought that in the ninth event he had accomplished a feat that could not be repeated, but when he rushed over the course in exactly the same time in the tenth event, admiration was divided between the performance of the car and Apperson's consistent driving.

The course was in excellent condition, and probably five seconds faster than at previous contests. The work of the Altadena Improvement Association was manifest, and the chuckholes were conspicuous by their absence. That bugbear of former contests, the electric railway crossing, was bridged by a wooden platform, which allowed the cars to cross at top speed without bounding off the ground, as they formerly did. This was the greatest single improvement in the course, and it did more to promote consistent running of the cars than anything else.

It was not only in faster time and better course that the third meet surpassed the two former ones. The management of the events was most excellent. The ten classes scheduled on the programme were run off without a hitch, and the expedition of the starting may be judged from the fact that they were disposed of in one hour and thirty-five minutes. Only one car withdrew, and only one failed to complete the course after starting. In addition, the course was well patrolled, and the crowds were much more efficiently handled than last year, when Bert Dingley had to drive with one hand and shove the people back with the other.

The crowd was estimated at between 5000 and 6000 people, slightly larger than last year. About 400 machines were driven out to the course.

Members of the Los Angeles Driving Club did the timing. They were A. I. Stewart, secretary of the club, John W. Nickerson, Elbert Beffebach and W. S. McGiffert.

Two cars were protested before the start of the races, the protestants as required by the rules depositing $100 to be forfeited if the protest failed. H. O. Harrison protested the entry of the Stearns car, on the ground that the firm entering it was not a member of the Dealers' Association thirty days before the closing of the entries, as required, and was not even a member of the association when the entries closed. The protest was overruled, and Mr. Harrison withdrew the entry of his Peerless car in the event. It is stated that the William J. Batchelder Company was made a member of the association after the entry list closed, and that the committee suspended its ruling in his case.

The Auto Vehicle Company protested the Buick car, on the ground of its not conforming to catalogue in cylinder dimension. The protest was not allowed, was made under a misconception of rules, the $100 deposited was not forfeited.

Machines came to the scratch on time. The course was cleared, and the crowd, which was prone to edge forward as close as possible to the racers, was kept back by the police and by ropes which enclosed the space directly in front of the starting line. There was only one entrant in the first event, a two-cylinder Reo in the $1000 class. This race was declared off:

Paul J. Q. Derkum and W. G. Collins, on Indian motorcycles, were the first attraction. The crowd already knew what the two speedy racers had

WHITE SOX START WEST.

Chicago Ball Team Party on Way to Coast.

Almost Fifty Persons Are in Special Train.

Due to Reach Los Angeles Wednesday Morning.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

CHICAGO, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] With the cheers of their own rooters' association, swelled by the voices of several hundred unorganized, but not disorganized, admirers, the White Sox left the Rock Island station tonight on what is, in many ways, the most remarkable training trip ever undertaken by a baseball team.

A special train, composed of five cars, carried the big party, which included twenty-six players and nearly as many more fans, officials, players' wives and war correspondents.

Two Pullman sleepers, a combination compartment, buffet and observation car, a baggage and library car and a private diner composed the equipment provided for the White Sox and their friends. It will carry them without charge and without worry as to connections or delays direct to Los Angeles, and the schedule allows plenty of time to inspect the scenery along the route.

Four nights and three days will be spent on the road, the arrival in Los Angeles being timed for 7 o'clock next Wednesday morning. The date was changed from 7 o'clock Tuesday evening. Almost immediately the Sox will split out into two squads, the regulars remaining in Los Angeles, where they are scheduled for their first practice game on Friday.

Manager Jones will meet the first team at that point, and take charge of it. The second squad, under the guidance of President Comiskey, will leave for San Francisco on Thursday and is scheduled to play the San Francisco club three games, beginning on GOOD ROADS.

INLAND ROUTE HAS CHARMS.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-MILE DRIVE IS ATTRACTIVE.

Motorists Tour to San Diego and Find Going Good—Mountain Grade and Stream Are Kind to Men Who Drive to Southern City in Fast Roadster.

Next to the run from Los Angeles to Riverside, the 180-mile tour from this city to San Diego is the most available all the year. Two weeks ago P. A. Renton, with his new Smith roadster, succeeded in lowering the elapsed time record between Los Angeles and San Diego, over the inland route, exactly two hours.

Charles Fuller Gates accompanied Mr. Renton in the interest of The Times, to see what condition the roads were in on this route, many unsatisfactory reports having been made as to an alleged marsh or slough at Bonsalo, adobe near Rincon, and the fords. Believeing that the previous record of eleven hours made by a Pierce Arrow belonging to W. M. Garland, could be lowered, even with the present bad roads, the Great Smith left The Times office for the try. Reaching San Diego on Sunday, with the Morning Union office closed, the car was halted at the Hotel Brewster, and the finishing time scored there by Manager C. B. Daggett.

All the mountain grades, Temescal, Red Mountain, Las Pensasquitas and La Jolla, Rainbow Pass and Fox Cañon, all are in good shape, and so well marked by the emblematic road signs of the Automobile Club of Southern California, that a stranger could not err.

At Bonsall bridge a small stream, which only runs when winter rains feed it, flows into the San Luis Rey River and during the heavy rains recently this stream contained much water, and bothered some cars with low caburetor but is so shallow now that none need worry about it. Along the river there are some mud holes, but none where chains were needed.

Fearing that the river ford in Mission Valley might bother, the Great Smith was turned towards the coast at the great Miramar ranch of E. W. Scripps, the famous road builder, and the new Scripps road to La Jolla followed. It was here that a touring car, driven by an ambitious motorist measured speed with the Great Smith for a few rods, but Mr. Fenton had his Scotch blood up and had already brushed with two or three big cars on the road, and the race was of short duration.

While there are a few heavy spots, where clay is the base of the road, the inland route, taken as a whole, is always open, except at times of prolonged and heavy rains. Just at present the average automobile travel on this route is about ten motor cars a day.

On this record run of the Great Smith, the car left The Times office at 7:40 a.m., and was at Hotel Brewster, San Diego at 4:40, adometer measured exactly 185 miles, and the gasoline consumption was between 11 and 12 gallons, fuel testing 58 and being bought under the name of naptha at a cost of 12 cents a gallon, wholesale. Less than half a quart of lubricating oil was used. Engine was not stopped during trip and was cool as usual at finish. At one point, where two wheels went off the side of a small sluice the front springs slid forward slightly on the front axle. Average speed all way, 20½ miles, fuel con., 16 miles to gallon.

SIMPLE AUTO RULES.

Motorist Might Be Good If Deprived of Their Cars for a Stated Time.

The following simple ordinance for the governing of automobile driving has been suggested by an eastern authority, who has given the matter much thought:

First—No one shall be allowed to operate an automobile on the public streets and highways until his or her ability has been tested, and said driver has been licensed by the government.

Second—All former speed limits shall be abolished and each automobile driver shall be held to strict accountability for all reckless driving and the court shall decide in each case whether the driving has been reckless, or not.

Third—In case of purposely violating the law the automobile shall be impounded for fixed times, according to the offense, so that the owner or owners shall be deprived of its use, no bail for automobile being acceptable.

This is a simple form to supercede all the automobile laws, except that of registration and the German law is very much like this, especially the second rule, and accidents are few in Germany, though driving is fast.

GREAT ENTRY LIST.

Forty-five Cars Named to Contest in Grand Prix in July, and More for Voiturette Cup.

With the closing of entries at the regular fees, forty-five cars, from six countries, have been named for the Grand Prix race of the Automobile Club of France, which will be run next July on the Dieppe circuit. Of these entries, twenty-one cars will represent France, nine have been named from Germany, six from Italy, six from Great Britain, two from Belgium and one, a Thomas, from America.

The entries for the voiturette prize, the race for small cars, which is to be run over the Dieppe course the day before the Grand Prix, exceed those received for the big race. For the small-car event, fifty-eight cars were entered at the regular fee, fifty-two being French machines, three Italian and three Swiss. From now on the entry fees are to be doubled.

Stringent Measures.

The Scranton Automobile Association is stirring up the road supervisors and constables of Lackawanna county, Pa., to a realization of their duty regarding the conditions of the highways. For the last two months members and agents of the association have been quietly but thoroughly inspecting every road in the county. Missing sign boards at crossroads and forks, loose stones, choked-up ditches, unrepaired washouts and all other defects have been carefully noted. Then the association, through Hugh B. Andrews, its attorney, notified the road supervisors and constables that if they do not have things remedied at once they will be proceeded against for neglect and compelled to pay fines, as provided for by several acts of the State Legislature.

Indianapolis Show.

In connection with the show at Indianapolis, March 16 to 21, a local newspaper has offered a prize for the city or club having the largest number of automobiles in line in a parade which is to precede the opening of the

FRAYER-MILLER WINS.

Long Island Automobile Club Holds Economy Contest from Brooklyn to Amagansett.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK, February 27.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] The Contest Committee of the Long Island Automobile Club announced the results today of the club's economy test from Brooklyn to Amagansett and return on Tuesday, Harry H. Knepper of New York being declared the winner with a twenty-four-horse-power H. W. Frayer-Miller. The club will run another contest of the same character when the roads are in perfect condition. Russell A. Field, the club secretary, said tonight the next event would probably be run some time next June. The winning car carried five passengers, and used thirteen gallons of gasoline, at a cost per passeng r of 71 1-5 cents. They trailed all the day down to a six-cylinder Acme that used 30.375 gallons at $2.13¼ for each of its four passengers.

HORSE HELPS ON MOTOR TRIP.

CAR GLIDES THROUGH RIVER AT END OF LONG ROPE.

Eventful Journey Is Made to Mexican Line by Party of Angelenos Who Race Night and Day to Make Record Trip—Car Keeps Going in Spite of Broken Spring.

In California motorists seem to go when they please, and where they please, rain or shine, roads or no roads. Last week George L. McKeeby, a local lawyer, was suddenly called to the Mexican line, east of San Diego, on urgent business, and left Los Angeles in his White steamer about noon of a rainy day, accompanied by one friend, two interpreters, and his trusty driver, B. P. Frazier, for the 200-mile drive over roads that he knew would be both muddy and slippery. Near Elsinore, when making fast time one spring was broken, and several hours waste of time resulted.

San Diego was reached at 5 o'clock the next morning, after successfully fording the San Diego River in Mission Valley. The whole party put in part of that day sleeping at San Diego before starting for the Mexican border.

A side trip had to be made to a camp in the mountains back of the Cajon Valley, and the next morning, with the rain partly over, the White steamer was turned toward Jamul, on the Mexican line. At Cottonwood Creek, a raging river, was found and though Driver Frazier made a run at the ford, in mid-stream a deep channel and quicksand was found, the steamer dropped half out of sight. All had to plunge into the water and wade ashore. A man in a wagon came along, and from him a rope was secured. This was tied to a tree, and then the other end was wound around one of the rear wheels and the engine started, on the stored-up steam, the fire having been put out by the water. The rear wheels revolved, but the rope was not strong enough, and broke. Then the party walked to a ranch-house, some distance away, and secured the aid of another rancher. This man had but one horse, but with a good rope and tackle he got McKeeeby's machine out of the water.

On the return trip that evening Driver Frazier stored up over 1200 rounds of steam, and made a hard run at the Cottonwood ford, with all sitting tight, and got over the deep channel without sticking, but broke two leaves of a front spring, which finally gave out when the rest of the spring broke near Riverside on the return trip at another flying jump. McKeeby says that sailing in a White steamer may be all right for those who like it, but he prefers the asphalt pavement, and the Pasadena boulevard for his pleasure trips.

Glidden Tour for July.

It can be regarded as certain that the 1908 A.A.A. tour and Glidden contest will be started from Buffalo during the week beginning July 6, probably on Wednesday or Thursday, the 8th or 9th. It will end somewhere in New England. There is to be a national good roads and legislative convention held at Buffalo by the American Automobile Association for two days prior to the start of the tour. This is in accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the A.A.A. Executive Committee, held at Chicago, December 6. The Automobile Club of Buffalo has raised a subscription fund of $3000 for the convention, and tours will be promoted from various points to the Bison City for the occasion. There will be a varied programme of speechmaking and entertainment along the lines of the convention held at Springfield, only national in scope and more elaborate in every way.

Ice-Scooter Versus Motor Car.

In order to decide a personal argument, a unique race will be held in the near future on the ice at Southampton Bay over the triangular regatta course, which is nine miles around. Frederick Grant of New York City with his thirty-horse-power Studebaker runabout, is confident of beating Capt. Dennison of the Westampton Yacht Club in his famous ice scooter. The motor car will be equipped with specially made tire treads in order to get good traction on the ice and to avoid skidding at the short turns at the corners of the triangular course. The scooter, being a form of iceboat, is dependent entirely on the wind for propulsion, and Capt. Dennison asserts that with a stiff breeze he will make it very interesting for the automobile. As

TO RESCUE OF CHILD.

Motor Car Plays Part in Real Life Melodrama, Carrying Armed Men to Gypsy Camp.

The automobile has frequently figured as an instrument of justice in fiction, and occasionally does in real life. One of these episodes sufficiently dramatic to be featured in a melodrama, recently fell to the lot of G. E. Messer and R. D. Herzog, who, while touring from Harvard, Neb., to Carlton, in a Franklin motor car, took part in the rescue of a white child from a camp of gypsies.

The tourists were first brought into the affair when they were asked for a lift by a group of armed men who were trudging along the road south of Carlton. Filling the machine, Messer and Herzog carried their passengers to the corral, where the gypsies, fourteen in number, were surrounded by a cordon of men armed with rifles, pitchforks and a medley of other weapons. The father of the child was expected to come from Grand Island, and, after conferring with some of the leaders of the posse, Messer and Herzog raced back to Harvard, returning with the Sheriff, as it was feared that if the child was identified violence would follow. Then the auto was sent back again for the supposed father of the child, who had been delayed. As they returned with him, the excitement became great, and the armed mob could hardly be restrained. The cowering gypsies protested their innocence, and the man failed to identify the child as his, but as the little girl admitted that she would like to leave the camp, it was decided to take her to Carlton and get her a home. Once more the auto was brought into service and the child was taken to town in state. Then, as the mob dispersed, the tour was resumed.

New Fifty-Mile Record.

Charles Jarrott of London, an English racing automobilist, drove fifty miles on the Brooklands motordrome at Weybridge, England, on February 5, in 36m., 5.76s., according to the electrical timing apparatus at the track. He drove a 120-horse-power Lorraine-Dietrich, which was built to compete in the 1907 Grand Prix race of the Automobile club of France. His average speed was more than eighty-three miles an hour. The former record for the distance on the track was 37m., 45.9s., and was held by H. C. Tryon. Jarrott intended to keep on in an effort to secure the record for 100 miles and one hour, but a tire blew up before he had gone seventy-five

FIND PLEASURE EVEN IN RAIN.

COAST ROADS ON INLAND ROUTE IN GOOD SHAPE.

Motorists Enjoy Delights of Three-Days' Journey Over Good Thoroughfares Where Mud Does not Interfere With Going—Santa Maria River Crossed Without Mishap.

It is, indeed, pleasing to motorists to know that the coast route between this city and San Francisco is open at present, for at this time last winter and for weeks before and after this delightful 500-mile run could not be made. In fact, in Gaviota and Casitas districts wagons could not get through on account of numerous washouts and landslides.

A party of Spokane people, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Graves and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strahorn, in a White steamer, with Allen E. Ebey of San Francisco driving, have just come over the road, much of the way in the rain, and report all of the road fair, while most of it is in excellent condition, the low-grade road being between Gaviota Pass and the western suburbs of Santa Barbara, and part of Casitas Pass. Chains were used most of the way north of Ventura, as the rain made the roads slippery, and Driver Ebey was not taking any chances with the big car, which carried much baggage, in addition to the five people.

San Francisco was left on February 14, late in the day, and the easy run to San José covered. The next day the delightful run down the Santa Clara Valley and over the San Juan Pass brought the Washington motorists to old Monterey, where the great Del Monte Hotel and the world-famous seventeen-mile drive delighted them for three days, and, after the sights of the old State capital and mission town were visited, the car started on again in the rain for Paso Robles. The rain was light, and with cape top, the big car was as comfortable as a Pullman, so the run down the Salinas Valley was enjoyed.

Paso Robles was another delightful stopping place. At noon the big White was started south again in the rain, but though the roads were greasy, yet the run over Casco Pass to San Luis Obispo and on into the Santa Maria Valley was again enjoyed by the visitors from the rainy country. Santa Maria River, which is too wide to bridge, had about eighteen inches of water, and looked dangerous, but the big car, with stored-up steam, plowed through the half-mile of water and deep sand, where in summer many a car has to be pulled out of the sand.

Staying over night at Santa Maria, the run on February 21 was the ninety-five miles on to Santa Barbara. Lunch being carried, there was no stop except in Gaviota Pass, where lunch was finished, and all got out for a little exercise, after the fifty-mile ride down the great valley and through Foxin Cañon.

The ups and downs of the Gaviota road, south of Gaviota Pass, made going slow, and at times shook up the passengers, but Santa Barbara was at last reached, and fine weather coming again, five days were spent in and about the beautiful old mission city.

Contrary to reports, Driver Ebey found the 110-mile drive south from Santa Barbara last Wednesday an easy run, and all that could be desired. Only two real muddy places were found, and those in Casitas Pass, where good drainage would do away with them. Lunch was gotten at a cottage in Camarillo, where a sign told about "home cooking." Here chains were taken off for the last time. Leaving Santa Barbara ta 9 o'clock in the morning, the big White pulled up in front of the Hotel Alexandria at 4:30 in the afternoon, with all all the passengers feeling free from any weariness.

INDIANA HARNESS RACES.

Annual State Fair Officials Plan Big Events With Twenty Thousand in Purses.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

RICHMOND (Ind.) Feb. 24.—The management of the Indiana State fair has determined to offer more money in purses for the races of 1908 than in many years, the object being to make the racing as high-class as possible. The programme of races will cover five days, there will be a total of nineteen events, and the purses offered aggregate $20,400. This does not include the Western Horseman Futurity, which will add a considerable sum for both trotters and pacers. The half-mile track, which has not been used for many years, will again be made use of, and the colt races will be over this instead of the mile track. The programme as prepared for the week is as follows:

Monday, September 7—2:13 pace, $800; 2:14 trot, stake $2000; 2:07 pace, $800; 2:26 trot, over half-mile track, $800.

Tuesday—Three-year-old trotting stake, eligible 2:30 class, $800; 2:25 pace, stake, $2000; 2:20 trot, $800; free-for-all trot, $1500.

Wednesday—2:30 trot, stake $2000; three-year-old pacing stake, eligible to 2:25 class, $800; 2:17 trot, $800; 2:19 pace, $800.

Thursday—2:11 trot, $800; 2:10 pace, stake $2000; 2:23 trot, $800; 2:22 pace over half-mile track, $800.

Friday—Free-for-all pace, $1500; 2:08 trot, $800; 2:16 pace, $800.

Gets Full Use of Car.

Beside using his car traveling to and from work, Edward O. Belden, a farmer of Suffield, Ct., blocks it up and connects a belt to the wheels for power. With it he has baled over 300 tons of hay, sawed 100 cords of wood and cut tons of tobacco stalks and

WRESTLING TOURNAMENT.

Dates Set for Early in April in Armory Hall—Contests Under Rules of A.A.U.

The date of the A.A.U. wrestling tournament for the championships of Southern California has been tentatively set for April 3 and 4, at Armory Hall. Chairman O. S. Lowsley of the committee, which is arranging the tournament has named this date, with the understanding that the Coast championships are to be held in San Francisco on May 2. In case this date is earlier, the local matches will be moved up accordingly.

Entries will close at 5 o'clock March 28. All candidates are required to register in the P.A.A. with George W. Braden of the Pasadena Y.M.C.A. Entries will be received by John M. Brewer of Polytechnic High School.

A.A.U. rules will govern the wrestling contests, which will be in the regular classes, with gold, silver, and bronze medals for the three place winners in each. Applicants for entry should state their weight and the organization they will represent.

Rough Going in Idaho.

A trip to Priest Lake in Northwestern Idaho, never before made without the aid of horses, recently was accomplished by a party of five motorists. So narrow were some trails that fenders were torn from the car by bushes. At one point the descent was so steep that it was necessary to let the car down by tackle attached to a tree, while on several occasions stumps had to be uprooted to allow clearance for the car.

A Tip from the Cotton-Tail.

The suggestion of a rear light for bicycles, which should tend to obviate accidents arising from the overtaking of cyclists, has brought forth a substitute in the shape of a white patent-leather tool box, to be worn on the rear of the saddle. It is claimed that this can be readily seen on the darkest night, while a second light would be troublesome, and requires observation from time to time to make sure that it was attending to business.

English Drivers' Organization.

The general committee of the Royal Automobile Club of England has decided to organize an association to be made up of automobile drivers and mechanics. The club already has issued about 2000 certificates of character and efficiency to chauffeurs, and it was suggested that all holders of these certificates should be eligible for membership in the association to be formed.

Dieppe Circuit Chosen.

The Dieppe circuit, which in 1907 was the scene of the highest rate of prolonged travel ever witnessed on a road, has again been selected for the Grand Prix of the Automobile Club of France. Ten thousand dollars will be paid by the city of Dieppe for the privilege, and the authorities probably will spend $6000 additional, putting forty-eight miles of roadway in perfect condition.

Significant Decrease.

A decrease of over $1,000,000 in American imports of automobiles is the most conspicuous feature of the world's statistics for the last financial year. This fact, coupled with the gains in the sale of domestic machines, clearly shows the increased favor in which home-manufactured cars are held.

Auto Comes, Horse Goes.

A phase of the automobile invasion of Britain is the great reduction of horseflesh. Farmers have stopped breeding, even though the South African war depleted the stock, with the result that there are now 12,312 fewer horses in the United Kingdom than a year ago.

Tenth event—Special for four fastest cars in any of the first nine events:

Stearns, W. J. Batchelder Co. 1:54¼
Franklin, R. C. Hamlin..1:57¾
Packard, Western Motor Car Co. 2:12

a bullet in the fastest time made by a motor car on the course, and had established a new record for the Pasadena-Altadena course.

The Stearns made an excellent showing, and flew over the grade in fast time. The handsome little car was a factor in the race for first place for a few seconds after the start, but the time was not made in as fast time as the Apperson, and the best the Stearns could hope for after reaching the bridge was second place, which it annexed in 1 minute and 58 seconds.

Ralph Hamlin drove the Franklin roadster into third place. This car gave a good account of itself on the climb, and was handled skillfully by the one-time crack bicycle rider. The Packard, driven by Earle Anthony, swung into fourth place in 2 minutes 9¾ seconds. The Pope-Toledo was fifth, and the Haynes a tail-ender.

Four cars qualified for the last event, the speedy Apperson, the Stearns, the Franklin and the Packard. These four fastest cars of the day furnished one of the speediest events of the afternoon's card, and at the same time gave the crowd a chance to see the four fastest roadsters in the West tried out in the finals.

Again the Apperson went away first, and repeated its former marvelous performance. Apperson drove to the turn in exactly the same time, flew over the bridge at the same pace and finished to a fraction of a second in the same mark as the race he won at first. The Stearns was a trifle faster in the last race, finishing in 1 minute 54¼ seconds. The Franklin took third place in 1 minute 59 seconds, and the Packard fourth in 2 minutes 12 seconds.

To Defeat Wheel Tax.

Chicago automobile associations which have united against the wheel tax ordinance are confident they can prove the law unconstitutional before the date, May 1, set for it to go into effect. A similar attempt to tax bicycles failed, and the motorists will fight their battle on similar grounds.

Police Auto Hard Worked.

An automobile owned by the Boston police department has been driven nearly 40,000 miles in a little over two years. During 1907 it went to eighteen fires, quelled nine incipient riots, carried many injured persons to hospitals and warned numerous motorists that they were breaking the law.

A Scotch Decision.

A Scotch court recently dismissed a suit against a motorist by the owner of a team of horses which had been frightened at his car standing by the side of the road. Although an old law seemed to cover the case, the court practically said that the motorist was not to blame because the horses were

THREE FAVORITES FIRST.

Two Feature Events of the Long Arcadia Card, Taken by Nags at Good Prices.

Four favorites out of seven won at the Arcadia race track yesterday, but the "wise" sports did not bring home any money with them, because they persisted in playing so many nags in each race. The card was a fair one, and there were two "feature" races. The first was a handicap at one mile, which was won by the second choice, Wexford, from the favorite, Col. Jack, and the other feature was the Woodland Stakes for 2-year-olds, which went to the 6-to-1 shot, Aunt Aggie. A fair-sized crowd of sports saw the events. Results:

Five furlongs, purse: Senator Barrett, 107 (Schilling,) 7 to 5, won; Burt G. Lewis, 104 (Preston,) 8 to 1, second; Halaca, 107 (McIntyre,) 30 to 1, third; time, 1:01. Brawney Lad, Dr. Matthews, Albion H., Cardinal, Aquiline, Ed B., Kopek and Raleigh also ran. Feb. G. and Taraban scratched.

Mile, purse: Dredger, 97½ (Preston,) 7 to 5, won; Fisher Boy, 107 (Hayes,) 4 to 1, second; Ampedo, 107 (Finn,) 3 to 2, third; time, 1:40. By Play and Montanes also ran.

Mile, handicap: Wexford, 104 (Schilling,) 3 to 1, won; Col. Jack, 100 (Hayes,) 8 to 5, second; Early Tide, 97½ (Preston,) 4 to 1, third; time, 1:38 3-5. Chalfonte, Ed T. Fryer and Orilene also ran.

Four furlongs, Woodland Stakes: Aunt Aggie, 115 (Schilling,) 6 to 1, won; Lee Rose, 120 (Hayes,) 5 to 2, second; Horace H., 115 (Preston,) 15 to 1, third; time, 0:47 3-5. Duke of Milan, Ocean Maid, William F. Herrin, Copper Princess, Foreguard, Bright Skies, Queen Grove, Cull Holland and Bell of Brass also ran. Madeline Musgrave scratched.

Mile and three-sixteenths, selling: Merlingo, 105 (Schilling,) 3 to 5, won; Avontellus, 109 (Preston,) 5 to 1, second; Elie, 104 (Ross,) 10 to 1, third; time, 2:00 3-5. Uncle Henry, Nadzu and Woodsman also ran.

Six furlongs, selling: Hidden hand, 97½ (Preston,) 5 to 1, won; Pal, 107 (Burns, 18 to 5, second; Harvel, 93 (Martin,) 2 to 1, third; time, 1:13 2-5. Taylor George, Adelbert Belle, Waldorf Belle, Pacific Electric and Senator W. Stone also ran.

Five and one-half furlongs, selling: Halton, 98 (Martin,) 13 to 10, won; Korosliany, 98 (Goldstein,) 5 to 1, second; Jilette, 92 (Nelson,) 9 to 2, third; time, 1:07. Lackfoot, Jimalong, Bemay, Nun's Veiling, Willie Gregg, Andoche, Ruscimo and Bauble also ran. Escamado, Wisteria, John C. Graus, Prolific and Laudable scratched.

RACING AT OAKLAND.

TONY FAUST WINS FEATURE.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 29.—At Emeryville today Sam Hildreth captured another rich event, when his brown horse, Tony Faust, took the Waterhouse Cup at two and a quarter miles from Jack Keene's Red Leaf. So close was the finish that the public had to await the judges' decision before they knew positively who won the event. In the running, Fairy Street set the pace for a mile, closely followed by the favorite, Tony Faust, when the former tired.

Hildreth's crack entry moved up fast entering the stretch, and in the final quarter he looked a winner. Red Leaf, was called upon and responded in good style, overhauling the favorite.

Both jockeys rode hard from the paddock home, and as they flashed past the wire Tony Faust just nodded in first. Third money went to the added starter, Graphite, who managed to stall off Big Bow. The others were strung out. Results:

Six furlongs, selling: Dick Wilson, 112 (Butwell,) 6 to 1, won; Nappa, 110 (W. Miller,) 6 to 1, second; St. Edgar, 110 (Keogh,) 7 to 1, third; time, 1:15. Zelina, J. W. O'Neill, Phil Igoe, El Cazador, Metlakatla, Niter and Royal N. finished as named.

Mile and twenty yards, selling: Boloman, 102 (Charboneau,) 7 to 1, won; Steel Blue, 92 (Gilbert,) 10 to 1, second; Funnyside, 101 (Mentry,) 5 to 1, third; time, 1:44 1-5. Lucian, Senator Warner, Lassen, Western, Captain Hale, Silver Wedding and Zick Abrams finished as named.

Mile and a sixteenth, Piedmont Handicap: Light Wool, 110 (Dugan,) 3 to 1, won; Rubric, 112 (W. Miller,) 8 to 5, second; Massa, 98 (Gilbert,), 9 to 2, third; time, 1:48. Tavora and Fred Bent finished as named.

Two and a quarter miles, Waterhouse Cup: Tony Faust, 114 (E. Dugan.) 13 to 10, won; Red Leaf, 103 (W. Miller,) 18 to 5, second; (x) Graphite, 97 (F. Hildebrand,)16 to 1, third; (x) added starter; time, 4:03. Big Bow, Miss Rillie, Treasure Seeker, Fairy Street and Janeta finished as named Mile and twenty yards, selling: Dorado, 108 (W. Kelly,) 11 to 2, won; The Mighty, 106 (W. Miller,) 5 to 1, second; Shenandoah, 115 (Knapp,) 13 to 5, third; time, 1:44 2-5. Eduardo, Maxtress, The Captain and Fulleta finished as named.

Six furlongs: Lord Nelson, 109 (Buxton,) 3 to 1, won; Andrew B. Cook, 115 (Knapp,) 13 to 5, second; Triumphant, 115 (W. Miller,) 4 to 1, third; time, 1:14 4-5. Belle Kinney, Ruth W., Seven Full and Galvanic finished as named.

STUDIES IN CHESS.

D. Janowski, champion of France, recently defeated the American champion, F. J. Marshall, by a score of 5 games to 2, and 3 drawn, in a quickly played match. This was the second match between these masters, the first having resulted in favor of the American.

The score of the first game follows:

Resigns.

(a) This form of the opening is not now common in match play.

(b) A strong development move.

(c) No power now remains in White's attack.

(d) As no draw can be forced, this experiment against the queen side is useless.

The play of chess by correspondence affords the contestants opportunities for a study of the deeper tactics affecting their games, and also for thorough analysis of the positions. The game given herewith, played by a Los Angeles student against two of the leading players of Santa Barbara, has been mentioned as an instructive illustration of the value of time and of position against superior forces. The cogwheel-like accuracy essential to the winning of White's game is unusual, and leads to an interesting mate:

announced mate in four moves.

(a) At Black's last move the books have pronounced the game in his favor. White, by this new move, invites the advance of Black's KP, with a view of gaining a move in development meanwhile.

(b) At this point the Allies observed that they "had established a very formidable-looking row of pawns"—but the pawns accomplished nothing further.

(c) Commenting upon this move after the game, the Allies stated that they had "taken a lesson on QBP which would last a lifetime."

(d) Apparently intending a later discovered attack on the Q. But this gives White an opportunity for the key move of a winning position.

(e) Retreating Kt would be safer. The opening of the file in front of the K is rapid and decisive.

(f) Further opening the ambush and cutting off retreat of the K. Nothing can now save the game.

(g) Only by moving the R, preferably to B sq., could the impending mate be averted.

CHESS NOTES.

Dr. Lasker is playing England and Scotland, en tour.

of the United States, is said to be desirous of returning to active chess in a match with Marshall.

The Rice Gambit correspondence tournament has just ended, with the following prize-winners, in order of mention: Dr. P. G. Keeney, G. H. Walcott, J. A. Kaiser, Eugene Delmar, W. E. Fowler, W. E. Griffin, James McClure and T. C. McIlwaine.

The next international cable match between America and Great Britain for the Newnes trophy will be played March 13 and 14.

Thomas E. Lyons, champion of Texas, died February 16.

The career of the famous chess journal, La Strategie, of Paris, is likely to end on account of the recent death of its editor, M. Numa Preti.

NEVER BEATEN.

ALFRED SHRUBB GREAT RUNNER.

BELIEVED TO BE BEST WHO EVER RAN IN DISTANCES.

Englishman Says Success Lies in Careful Living and Training—Runs at Top Speed When Working Out. Ambition Is to Meet Longboat, the Indian Athlete.

Alfred Shrubb is a running marvel—the greatest, so far as is known by records—that ever lived. He holds all the world's records from 2000 yards to eleven miles, and seems to be able to repeat any of his performances at very short notice. Shrubb is 29 years old, stands 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighs in condition about 118 pounds. He has been running for ten years, and seems to be now at his best. He attributes his success as an athlete to hard training and a clean life.

"I never train unless I feel like it," says Shrubb. "There is where many men who do train hard make a mistake. They go out and work when they are not feeling just right, and the work does them more harm than good. When I do train I work just as hard as though I were in a race. Six miles is what I generally take for a workout. I never jog, as some of the runners here do. I run, and run hard."

Shrubb failed to get on a match with the Indian runner, Longboat, the only man in this country thougnt to be good enough to give Shrubb a race. Longboat declined to meet Shrubb for the reason that he still hopes to be allowed to run as an amateur at the Olympic games in England the coming summer. Shrubb is now a professional, having graduated from the amateur ranks some years ago. He was led to believe that he could get a match with Longboat at the time the Indian's amateur standing was under a cloud. But the Canadian amateur authorities, after disqualifying the Indian, reinstated him again and Longboat still aspires to winning the great Marathon race of the Olympian games.

Shrubb did considerable running during his stay here, but has always been forced to handicap himself, either by running against a relay team of from two to six men or by giving his opponent a start in time.

In spite of these handicaps he has won every race in which he has started in America, barring one with John D. Marsh of St. Norbert, at Winnipeg, in which his ankle gave out and compelled him to retire from the race, after having overcome a handicap of two minutes and taken a two-lap lead on Marsh. The ankle gave out in the thirteenth mile of a fifteen-mile race, and Marsh finished alone. Shrubb subsequently beat Marsh in another race.

Shrubb has lost but one other race out of about 1500 in which he has contested, most of them in Great Britain, and that one defeat was in a fifteen-mile match, in which his ankle g out like it did in his race with Mar Shrubb's best distance is ten mi which he has done in 50:40. He has r eleven miles 1137 yards in one ho His other world's records include following performances:

2000 yards	5:07
1¼ miles	5:40
1½ miles	5:47
2 miles	9.09
3 miles	14:17
4 miles	19:23
5 miles	24:33
6 miles	29:50
7 miles	35.04
8 miles	40:16
9 miles	45:27
10 miles	50:40
11 miles	56:23

Shrubb, while he looks an athl being clean-limbed and active, sho no signs of the wonderful stay powers which he possesses. He neither deep chested nor strongly mu cled. But there is lightness and gr in every move, and his many recor prove that he has muscles of steel. H average stride when at speed is abo 5 feet 2 inches, which is a remarkal long stride for a man of his inches. has little knee action, running with apparent effort and always keeping feet near the ground.

Like Father, Like Son.

Rev. Dr. Somers was in the habit addressing Sarah, his wife, in po syllables when he wished the childr to leave the room. He never dream that they understood, until nine-ye old Jack, recovering from measles, w one day enjoying the dear privilege hearing his mother read aloud.

The doctor ventured in and beg softly, "Sarah——"

Up rose Master Jack in bed. "Sara quoth he, "eliminate the obnoxious el ment!"—[Lippincott's Magazine.

WHEW!

AINTS DEFEAT NORTHERNERS.

tanford Is Unable to Solve Ybarrando's Curves.

heile Unable to Stem Tide of Safe Drives.

ardinals Mutter Vengeance Against St. Vincent's.

St. Vincent's reversed things with anford yesterday and won a shut-out ame, 4 to 0. Theile, who was supposed to be Stanfords' strongest twirr, was landed on for ten safe hits, hile Tommy Ybarrando, the idol of . Vincent's, kept the Cardinal batters own to a total of five, two of which ere made in the ninth inning, too late do any good.

Stanford's weak place again appeared behind the bat. Mow Mitchell d a hard time holding Theile's fast lls, and Ybarrando got in with St. incent's first run, in the third inning, hen Mitchell let a pitched ball go by m. To Mitchell, however, must be ven the credit of making two of the ardinal hits which preceded the final ning, when Fenton and Sampson al- found Ybarrando. Wirt got a hit the second, Lamer attempting a fficult chance and failing to stop the ll. Stanford left the field murmurg darkly of what would happen to St. incent's when the team goes North. There was a very much aggrieved of players who had stood up bere the swarthy little Ybarrando's dery, holding his pitching in connpt, yet failing to connect at any ge of the game. For the first three nings it was merely a case with tanford of "wait till the next inning." t the "next" frame, in which the ardinal players expected to run St incent's off its feet, did not come, alough Stanford continued to look for long after their opponents had piled e score of 4 to 0 against them.

Ybarrando not only distinguished imself as a pitcher, but smashed out he hit which scored three St. Vincent's uns in the fourth inning. The bases ere full when the little phenomenon watted the first ball into right field, long drive. McGregor juggled the all around, and let it get away from im, while Callahan, O'Rourke and rannen hot-footed it around the ases. They all scored, and Ybarrando ery nearly did also, a moment later, hen he tried to steal home with heile's arm as Corbin swung at the all. Mitchell tagged him at the late.

Theile's work for Stanford proved isappointing. There was nothing in is manner of delivery or the speed of is ball which looked any different rom his form last year, when he was he best pitcher the Cardinal had. Yet e was easy to hit. Lamer and Flick oth got hits in the first inning, noody was greatly surprised, because it vas to be expected of the two veterans f Hempel's team. But to have two omparatively inexperienced players ike Callahan and O'Rourke slam them ut, at first caused the bleachers to asp, but soon it became the regular hing to snake a safe one off the big ardinal twirler.

Theile accepted the beating with a ood grace, and grinned broadly for very bingle. The trouble seemed to e that he regarded himself as invincible to the local batters, and thought hat at each hit they had reached the nd of their rope. He woke up too ate, and although he kept the hits own to one after the fifth inning, the amage had already been done.

Very much in contrast to the game f Friday, in which St. Vincent's layed raggedly, and seemed to be in state of terror at the line-up of the orthern players, the nine yesterday ut up an errorless game. Lamer's ttempt to stop Wirt's hit in the second, when he got his glove on the ball, but failed to stop it, was the nearest St. Vincent's came to making a misplay. The team worked with lots of ginger, and won on determination as much as by anything else.

STUDENTS TO CELEBRATE.

Occidental Athletes to Engage in Games in Honor of President Baer's Birthday.

Tomorrow is President Baer's birthday, and Occidental College will close at noon to devote the remainder of the day to a big "jolly-up."

At 2 o'clock a college circus will be given on the athletic field, under the auspices of the Apes, a fraternal organization of the college. At 3 o'clock the seniors and members of the faculty will engage in a baseball game. Both teams have been practicing daily for the fray, and the students are looking forward to a lively time when the two factions get together.

The faculty played a practice game with a picked team from the academy yesterday, and succeeded in playing the "preps" to a standstill in four innings.

The teams will line up as follows:

Faculty.		Seniors.
Goheen	catcher	Burt
Moore	pitcher	B. Merrill
Archibald	first base	Spring
Esterly (c)	second base	Gordon
Handley	third base	Bachtell
Miller	shortstop	Macy
Test	left field	Demaree
Allen, Beals	center field	Highstreet
Anderson, Westcott	right field	Berry

Umpire—Rev. Gantz, Highland Park Presbyterian Church.

WINTER LEAGUE.

SEASON TO CLOSE HERE.

Angeles. The schedule does not end until April 1, but the rest of the games will be played on out-of-town diamonds.

The Hoegee team has been strengthened by the return of the players who went to the Imperial Valley League. The Christophers also have a strengthened aggregation. Whitridge will pitch his last game, as he leaves tonight to join the Seals.

The schedule for today follows:

COLTON DEFEATED.

LOCAL HIGH SCHOOL WINS.

Los Angeles High defeated Colton High School, at Colton, yesterday, in the second baseball game between the two teams this season, by the score of 5 to 2. Los Angeles High made but one error and secured nine hits. The score stood a tie in the fourth inning and again in the sixth. In the seventh Los Angeles High, by a succession of bunts, scored three runs. Beamer pitched a strong game for the local team.

The players who made the trip were: Capt. Beamer, pitcher; Stan Mitchell, catcher; Halbriter, first base; Winget', second base; Perry Howard, shortstop; Wilson, third base; and Cass, Sefton and Jack Howard, fielders.

WHITTIER SHUT OUT.

STOLL TWIRLS FINE GAME.

Harvard School defeated Whittier today in the opening of the County League baseball series, at Harvard, by the score of 4 to 0. Stoll, Harvard's pitcher, allowed but two hits and was made a home run in the seventh, which also brought in Cornejo. Sharpe made a sensational catch in right field and spoiled Whittier's only chance to score. Harvard secured seven hits and made three errors. Whittier's errors were five.

The line-up was:

Harvard.		Whittier.
Stoll	pitcher	Haskell
Newman	catcher	Hatch, Scott
Dodson	first base	McNees
McAulay	second base	Teal
Thorpe	third base	Cole
Cornejo	shortstop	E. Gilman

Long Beach High School Baseball Team, which yesterday defeated the Los Angeles Polytechnic High School team in County League championship series.

BEACH COMBERS FIRST.

Polytechnic Ball Team Beaten by Long Beach—Pitcher Pierce Is Hit Twelve Times.

Long Beach defeated Polytechnic at Praeger Park yesterday morning, in the first baseball game of the County League series, by the score of 14 to 9. The Polytechnic nine has been badly crippled by the inroads of the faculty of the school, which has ordered several of the regular players off the team on account of poor scholarship. The loss of pitcher Sam Lafferty also proved a big handicap.

Pierce, who pitched for Poly, was safely hit twelve times. Doyle, the beach twirler, had a bad inning in the sixth, when four runs came in from hits secured off his delivery. Coughran, of Long Beach, got four hits out of five times up, and Adams made a three-bagger. The game was umpired by Fitzwilliams.

Following was the line-up:

Long Beach.		Polytechnic.
Doyle	pitcher	Pierce
H. Frazer	catcher	Malone
Young	first base	Strang
P. Frazer	second base	Amos
Davis	shortstop	Harlan
Adams	third base	Rickerhauser
Coughran	left field	Finkle

SCHEDULE CHANGED.

NEW DATES FOR POMONA.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, Feb. 29.—Owing to a recent ruling made by the Faculty Athletic Committee, the Pomona baseball schedule has been entirely revised.

"No Saturday games away from college" is the dictum which has gone forth. Owing to the college session on Saturdays and holidays on Mondays at Claremont and an adverse order at Whittier and Occidental, the matter of league games becomes complicated. Whenever teams play away from home on Saturday it necessitates the missing of several recitations, and interferes with the work in general, so that the faculty decided the team must do its outside playing on Mondays, the regular Pomona holiday.

By this action, a revision of the entire schedule was made necessary, as follows:

April 22—Pomona and Whittier at Whittier.

May 2—Pomona and Occidental at Claremont.

May 9—Open date.

May 16—Pomona and Whittier at Claremont.

May 25—Pomona and Occidental, at Highland Park.

A game with the Sherman Indians is now being arranged for April 20 at Claremont.

BASEBALL DOPE.

Clifford Cravath, the Los Angeles ball club's right fielder, who was sold to the Boston American league team, left last evening for Little Rock, Ark., where the team is supposed to do its spring training. There is every reason to believe that he will make good, for he hit .303 and fielded .973 in the Pacific Coast League last season and was high up in the list for stolen bases, having made fifty in 182 games. Carlisle started the first of the week, but it is not known yet whether or not Pitcher Burns will go on to join the team, or jump to the Fresno outlaw State League team.

George Wheeler, last year's utility man for the San Francisco team, came up from the beach yesterday and is now waiting to see whether Manager Long intends to send him a contract. Long has until Monday to send the paper and if he does not, Wheeler will consider that he is free to play with any club. He has taken off considerable flesh in the past three months and looks ready to play ball. He is not particularly anxious to play with the Seals this year, as the climate of San Francisco does not agree with him.

Manager Berry expects to line up his pennant winners on Monday morning for their first regular practice and he thinks that all of his men will be on hand, with the exception of Eager and Oakes. Eager is sick in San Francisco and Oakes is not expected to arrive before Wednesday.

Frary will be one of the umpires in the Northwest League this season, as he gave good satisfaction last year.

McCredie of the Portland team has almost all of his men signed for this season. His pitchers are Pernoll, Groom, Bloomfield, Johnson, Lakaff, Fi[illegible] and Marshall; catchers base, Olsen; outfielders, Raftery, Bassey and McCredie.

The Oakland team, which is to train in San Diego, expects at least one practice game with one of the White Sox teams, which will probably be Wednesday, March 11.

The local fans should remember that the price of admission to the Los Angeles-Chicago games will be fifty cents, which is the sum that was charged heretofore for similar games.

The schedule for this year's games of the Coast League will be released for publication next Sunday. Each team will have the same number of games it had last year, but Los Angeles will have shorter trips away from home and there will be no more periods of six weeks without baseball.

CRACK PITCHER ILL.

JOHNSON VERY SICK BOY.

Walter Johnson, the phenom twirler of the Washington team who has been wintering at his home in Olinda, was operated upon in a hospital at Fullerton for acute mastoiditis, Thursday, and the physicians say he will not be out for a month. A piece of bone was removed from an abcess back of Johnson's right ear and to perform the operation it was necessary to put him under the influence of anesthetics, from which he did not awaken until near noon Friday. He is a little better today and has been able to eat some and recognizes members of his family.

Johnson kept to his bed for nearly two weeks before the operation and his condition grew steadily worse until the surgeons decided that the abcess had to be removed, and with it came a piece of the skull bone. The injury is practically the same from which Thomas A. Edison, the inventor, is suffering, and Johnson came very near to fatal illness as a result. He put off the operation, hoping that the abcess might be cured otherwise so that he could join the Washington team on its training trip, but the injury kept getting worse.

It is not yet certain that the operation is a success, but the attending surgeons say that they believe the sick man will pull through all right.

Johnson has been pitching semi-professional ball all winter, mostly on Saturdays and Sundays, and it is believed these games did him no good, as he has been feeling badly most of the time, say his friends. It is thought that the abcess was the result of being hit by a pitched ball, but Johnson is too ill to confirm it and his family is non-committal.

Johnson's pitching has not always been of the best, as he has either been careless or not in good condition to twirl a fine game, but at times his work has been of that brilliant nature which made him a star in his first season in the American League.

Johnson's illness has been kept secret as much as possible by his relatives and near friends. Most of them did not realize its seriousness until he took to his bed and the operation was decided upon. The nature of the injury makes it necessary that Johnson remain in bed for some time and at best he will only be able to sit up or hobble about with great caution. It is believed that this will so weaken him that it will take weeks for him to get into pitching form, even after he is able to be out.

H. C. Hersey will train a four-year-old and a two-year-old this year by Dan Patch, 1:55 1-4, out of Casonda, 2:05 3-4, by Allentell.

Miss Bertha Hill,

WHITE SOX.

Friday. A stay of two weeks on the Coast is provided for the regulars, in which they will make another distance jump, from San Francisco to New Orleans, without stop, and complete their exhibition schedule in the conventional training trip cities up through the Mississippi Valley.

The second squad will remain in California for three weeks and put in the additional week playing a series of games with the University of California team at Berkeley. Then a long jump is on the books for them, their next game being scheduled for Hutchinson, Kan., to be followed by a fortnight of one-night stands through Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois baseball centers. The week of barnstorming in Arizona and Texas, originally scheduled for the week of March 15-22, has been wiped off the list.

HOW THEY LINE UP.

The make-up of the party, which numbers sixty-one adults, is as follows:

Team No. 1—Sullivan, Walsh, Smith, Donohue, Davis, Parent, Tannehill, Dougherty, Hahn, Altrock, Owen, Shaw, White, Atz and Secretary Fredericks.

Team No. 2—Hart, Armbruster, Freeman, Most, Anderson, Osteen, Lejeune, O'Neill, Purtell, Fiene, Manuel, Quillan, Olmstead, Weaver and Louis Comiskey.

In addition to Mrs. Sullivan, Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Owen, the others in the party are President and Mrs. Comiskey, Mr. and Mrs. John Burns and Miss Burns, Mr. and Mrs. R. Cantwell, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Rice, Mrs. Bernoudy of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Campion and daughter, C. Redpath, G. Axelson, John O'Neill, John Todd, John Agnew, Dan Walsh, James Moran and Joseph Farrell. Two members of the Portland team, Malloy and Walsh, who will join their team at Santa Barbara, are with the Sox.

SPORTING NOTES.

Seattle is to have an auto school.

The Eastern baseball league will play 140 games.

Vicksburg citizens will run the baseball club of that town.

There are nearly 100 baseball players already at Hot Springs.

Ty Cobb will coach the University of Georgia baseball squad this spring.

Milwaukee will lay out twelve baseball diamonds in public parks for amateurs.

The winning five-man bowling team at Cincinnati will receive about $1000.

Columbus expects to award $100,000 in prizes at their Grand Circuit races.

The annual boat race between Oxford and Cambridge, the English universities, will take place on the afternoon of April 4.

Barney Oldfield will drive a 110-horsepower automobile in the thirty-four-mile Briarcliff trophy race for Harland S. Whipple April 24.

Columbia has adopted the graduate system of coaching in baseball, and this reform is likely to spread more and more among the colleges.

George C. Kelly, secretary of the Narragansett Boat Club of Providence, says his city cannot think of competing for the national rowing regatta.

Money for Pendo Team.

At a meeting of the Midwinter Baseball League Friday night, the Pendo No. 1 team was formally awarded first honors and given the sweepstakes of $80, for winning the pennant. The last games of the league will be played tomorrow, and the league will be disbanded.

Benefit Ball Game.

The Hoegees and the Dyas-Cline ball teams will play this afternoon at Chutes Park and Manager Henry Berry, whose lease of the park begins today, has decided to donate his share of the receipts to the "unemployed fund." As this game is for a worthy object, the fans should turn out.

The Woodbury Business College won from the Title Guarantee and Trust baseball team by the score of 2 to 1, at Joy Park yesterday afternoon. Both sides played good ball. The business college team secured four hits, and the trust company players five. The batteries were Black and Hoff for the business college, and Hawkins and Rowell for the T. G. & T. nine.

The 'varsity captain has a habit of rarely running to his true form unless under provocation, and a victory over the northern long-winders would not be surprising.

The two-mile should go to Stanford in one-two-three order, as Garbutt, the best long-distance candidate of the 'varsity, is inexperienced and comparatively slow.

Should Lennox decide to enter the hurdles he should win at least one race, and if his strength holds out, might take a first in the low hurdles. Burek has a good oppportunity to snatch third in either of the stick numbers.

In the hammer-throw Richardson should beat Youker. Last year Charlie took the long throw from Crawford with ease. A reversal in form for Richardson—who thus far has been erratic—may lose the event.

Horton is conceded the shot, with Richardson and Trotter on the short end. Trotter still has a week to recover strength in his injured arm, and may do better than now expected.

The high jump should be close, as Richardson is gaining spring every day, and apparently has not yet reached his limit. The broad jump should also be close.

The vault promises to be the big event of the meet, and with three athletes doing 11ft. 6 in. or better, a royal battle is looked for Capt. Lanagan and Bellah of the northern team have both cleared 11ft. 9in. in practice meets, and Lanagan is generally conceded the event. Richardson cleared the bar at 11ft. 4 in. against Poly without any competition. He is vaulting in far better form this year, is not quite as heavy, and has confidence to attempt the limit.

The relay, while last on the programme, gives promise of being a whirlwind race, with Stanford a favorite. With Lennox out of the running, and Newmire away below form, the 'varsity has little hopes of winning against such cracks as Brown Miller, Reed and others of the northern team. Nordahl and Shute are sure of representing the Methodists in the four-man event, and the remaining two will be selected from Trotter, Cooper, Reid and Hall.

OCCIDENTAL EASILY BEATS THE CROWN CITY TEAM.

Capt. Bird Again Beaten in Hundred-Yard Dash, but Runs Fast Quarter—Carver Does Fast Half. Estoppey Dropped Out of Distance Run After Three Laps.

Pasadena Y.M.C.A. failed to make the expected showing in the track meet with Occidental College yesterday afternoon, on the Highland Park field, and the Presbyterians carried off the day by the score of 97 to 84. The track events were fast and closely contested.

Estoppey, the former U.S.C. two-miler, who was counted upon as a sure winner in his event, was in no shape, and dropped out on the third lap. Comstock, also a former Methodist star, failed to make good in the high-hurdle event, although he did show up well in the pole vault, tying with Carus for first place, at 10ft., 6in. Hendricks, who, from his performances last year, promised to make a wholesale clean-up in the weight events, failed to place in the hammer throw and discus toss, and only landed second place in the shot put.

Capt. Bird was again beaten in the 100-yard dash, on account of getting a bad start. Brower carried off the century event, as well as the furlong race, and established himself as a consistent sprinter, who will make good in fast company. Bird amply redeemed himself by winning the 440-yard race in 53s., which is the best time made in the South this year.

The surprise of the day was the failure of any Pasadena man to place in the discus throw, an event which was included in the meet at their suggestion. Occidentalites, with but a few days' practice, landed all the places.

Carver ran a fast 880-yard race, approaching within one-fifth second of the college record, in 2m., 7 1-5s. Millsap pressed him hard for the first lap, and took second from Spring, in a close finish.

Occidental made a runaway match of the relay, covering the distance in fast time, with no close competition. Rush secured a long lead on the first lap, and Bonner, Blee and Bird opened the gap, until at the finish the Pasadenans were far behind.

Silver and bronze medals were awarded to first and second place winners, and the winners received a large banner. The presentation of prizes was made by Miss Bertha Boal, vice-president of the associated student body.

Before the meet, a group of juvenile tumblers from the Y.M.C.A. gave an exhibition in front of the bleachers, that was received with applause.

The results:

The 120-yard hurdle race—Won by Thomson (O.;) Wieman (O.,) second; Comstock (P.,) third; time, 16 4-5s.

SHOOTING TOURNAMENT.

Coronado Plans Trap Shoot of National Scope Similar to Big Pinehurst Shoot.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CORONADO, Feb. 29.—Coronado is perfecting arrangements for a huge trap shooting tournament to occupy three days, commencing March 22. The tourney will be held under the auspices of the Coronado Country Club and will be similar to the big shoot held recently at Pinehurst, N. C.

Invitations some weeks back went out to all the crack marksmen of the country and already acceptances from the East and North have begun to come in. It will be the greatest shooting event ever held at the resort. Trap shooting hitherto has been of little more than local importance. The one planned for the end of March is national in its scope. Many of the marksmen who competed at Pinehurst are expected to be on hand, together with western cracks, particularly from Southern California.

Light conditions are splendid at Coronado and experts declare that the contour of the traps at the Coronado Country Club is far above the average. Consequently, some record smashing may be looked for in this approaching shoot. The programme has not been definitely decided upon, but two days will probably be devoted to blue rock shooting and a third to live bird marks.

GOLF PROGRAMME.

Various Contests Have Been Fixed Upon for Each Saturday in the Present Month.

The Green Committee of the Los Angeles Country Club has made arrangements to have some fixed golf event at the club every Saturday until the hot weather period and from the programme fixed for March, there will be play to suit all classes. There was an informal tournament yesterday in which about twenty men entered.

Next Saturday there will be a "backward" tourney, in which the course will be played over backwards, the first hole to be No. 17. On Friday, March 13, there will be a mixed foursome at eighteen holes and the day following, handicap medal play has been decided upon. Saturday, March 21, there will be a four-ball foursome handicap against bogey and for March 28, there is handicap match play of eighteen holes against bogey, with a one-ball sweepstakes.

Baseball Challenge.

The Baltimores, a baseball nine of Polytechnic School, challenge any team of Los Angeles county averaging 16 years of age. The boys are after a game for Wednesday or Saturday.

New York to Paris Race

Note: A Studebaker "30" bearing dispatches from Gen. Grant to the commandant of Fort Leavenworth, left New York City Feby 18th, six days later than the New York to Paris racers, but has already (Feby 24) overtaken them, and is now forcing its way through the awful snow drifts of Northern Indiana and bids fair to beat the bunch to Chicago.

Later: The Studebaker "30" did arrive in Chicago 20 minutes ahead of the Thomas, the leading car in the New York to Paris race, and did not think it necessary to hire a brass band to celebrate the event or to lay up two days for repairs. On the contrary, the Studebaker went right on, and by the time the other cars are ready to leave Chicago the Studebaker car will doubtless have delivered its dispatches to the commandant of Fort Leavenworth Kan.

This is a regular stock car, an exact duplicate of the ones you can see on the floor of our New Salesroom 1231-3 S. Main St. any day.

COAST RECORD IN HIGH JUMP.

Munger of Pomona Clears Bar at Six Feet Three.

Spurgeon Comes Close to the Mark in Low Hurdles.

Mills Wins the Mile and Only Firsts for Whittier.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

POMONA, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Munger of Pomona established a new Coast record in the high jump in the track meet with Whittier today, clearing the bar at 6 feet 3 inches. The former record was 6 feet 2 and 34-100 inches, held by Channing Hall of the Oakland High School. Munger went the same height in practice a few days ago.

Pomona overwhelmingly defeated Whittier by cleaning up 107 points against the Quaker's 15.

Spurgeon in the low hurdles went close to the Coast record by climbing the sticks in 25 1-5 seconds, leaving every hurdle in place.

The half-mile was a close contest between Mills and Himrod. The two captains fought every inch of the last eighth, the Quaker runner finally winning out.

Pomona had everything her own way in field events. Not a Whittier man placed, while the Claremonters hogged nine points in every field event as well as in the high hurdles.

Two firsts by Mills in the half and the mile, and four thirds were the most Thompson's aggregation could draw.

Several surprises came during the meet. Sloane won from Rogers in the New Century sprint, while Palmer unexpectedly took a close second to Spurgeon in the obstacle run.

Leeke and Jones ran a dead heat in the two-mile. Jones, with a long lead, was finishing easy, when Leeke, coming up behind with a terrific sprint, made him split honors for first place.

Sloane's work was especially brilliant for a new prospect. The new Pomonan promises to give Bird, the Presbyterian, a hot race in both the 100-yard dash and quarter-mile, since he took both without an effort today.

Rogers showed up well in the 220-yard dash, but was not pushed in the broad jump, and contented himself with 21ft. The relay was not run.

The complete results were:

The 120-yard hurdles—Won by Spurgeon (P.;) Merriam (P.) second; McKee (P.) third; time, 16s. flat.

The 100-yard dash—Won by Sloane (P.;) Rogers (P.,) second; Wilder (W.,) third; time, 10 2-5s.

Mile run—Won by Mills (W.;) Lorbeer (P.,) second; Rau (P.,) third; time, 4m., 55s.

The 440-yard dash—Won by Sloane (P.;) McKee (P.,) second; Blair, (W.,) third; time, 53 3-5s.

The 220-yard dash—Won by Rogers (P.;) Parker, (P.,) second; Wilder (W.,) third; time, 23 3-5s.

The 220-yard low hurdles—Won by Spurgeon (P.;) Palmer (P.,) second; Renneker (W.,) third; time, 25 1-5s.

The 880-yard run—Won by Mills (W.;) Himrod (P.,) second; Queen (P.,) third; time, 2m., 6s.

Two-mile run—Jones and Leeke tied for first; White (W.,) third; time, 10m., 21s.

Pole vault—Won by Birdsall (P.;) Merriam (P.,) second; Holley (P.,) third; height, 10ft.

High jump—Won by Munger (P.;) Merriam (P.,) second; Tangeman (P.,) third; height, 6ft., 3in.

Broad jump—Won by Rogers (P.;) Birdsall (P.,) second; Holley (P.,) third; distance, 21ft., ¼in.

Hammer throw — Won by Metcalf (P.;) Bryant (P.,) second; Barnes (P.,) third; distance, 120ft.

Shot put—Won by Davenport (P.;) Metcalf (P.,) second; Ranney (P.,) third; distance, 37ft., 1in.

Relay race forfeited to Pomona by Whittier.

RANGERS AND THISTLES.

Play in Soccer Football League in Which Silver Cup and Medals Have Been Offered.

The Rangers and Thistles will play the third game of the Southern California Association Football League this afternoon at Fiesta Park. The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock, with McCoomb acting as referee.

The Rangers will use the same line-up as in their last game. Two new players will be tried out on the Scotch team, and Maxwell has been shifted to left halfback. The new members of the eleven are Loman, left fullback, and Clarke, right halfback. Loman is a former St. Louis player, and Clarke formerly played in Glasgow and Philadelphia.

A silver cup has been offered to the team winning the series. Medals have been promised for the members of the best eleven.

The line-up this afternoon will be:

Thistles.		Rangers.
McFarlane	goal	Peterson
Higgins	right back	Todd
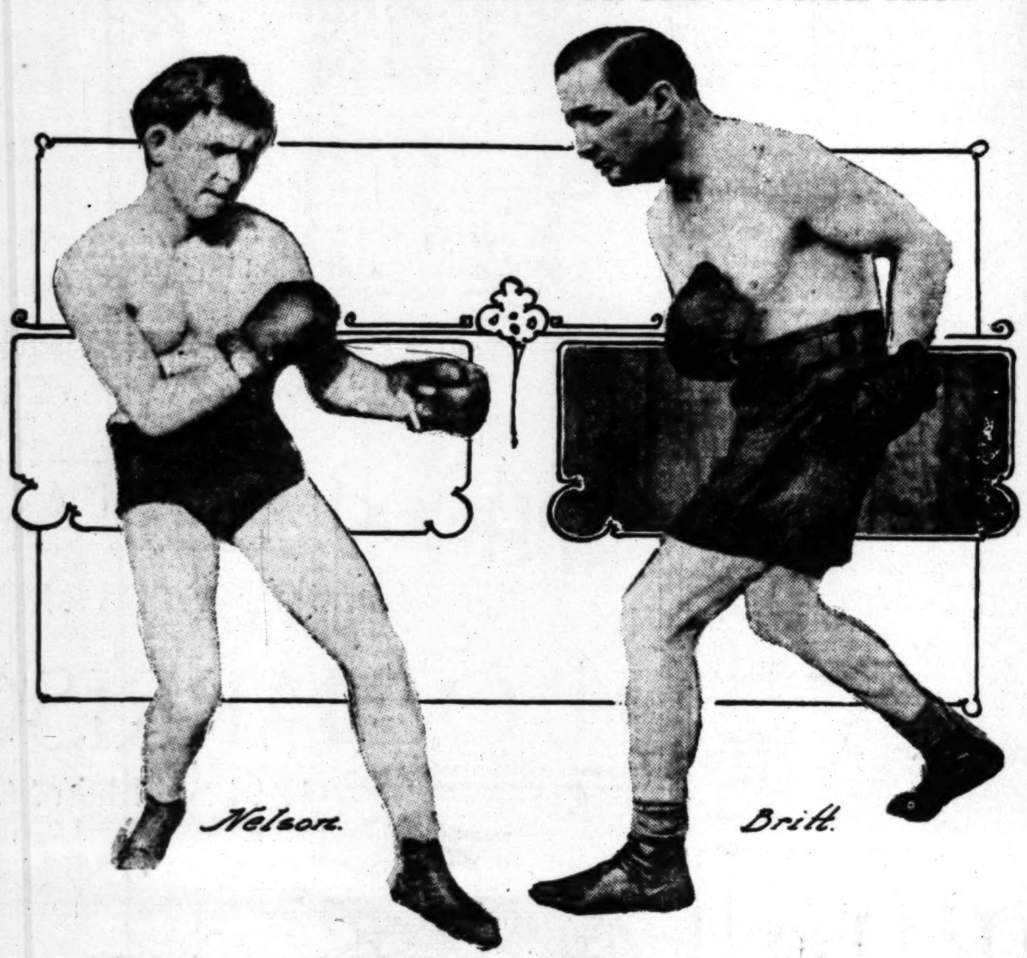
Maxwell	left half	Humphreys
Rheinhold	center	Gerrard (c)
Clarke	right field	Kelly
Gove	outside right	Low
Mitchell	inside right	McCubbin

BOXERS WHO ARE TO MEET FOR THE FOURTH TIME.



Battling Nelson and Jimmy Britt, old-time opponents, who are not yet satisfied as to who is the better man.

AT THE POST.

LAST DAY OF FIGHTERS' WORK.

NELSON WILL TAKE LIFE EASY ALL DAY MONDAY.

Bat Is Below Weight, While Jimmy Is Just One Pound Above—Britt Is to Do His Road Running Tomorrow Morning—Bunch of Sports to Come from San Francisco.

Local fight bugs who desire to see Bat Nelson and Jimmy Britt in action before their fight Tuesday night, should avail themselves of the chance today, for this is their last training day. Tomorrow Britt will do nothing but a little road work in the morning, while Nelson will rest and lay around his training quarters. Both went through their regular stunts yesterday and late in the afternoon, Britt said his weight was 134 pounds. Nelson declared he was down to 131½ and never felt better in his life.

The battle on Tuesday night will be a very important one for the winner, for he will fight Boer Unholz here in May for what will probably be the biggest house in the history of local fightdom, owing to the presence of the battleship fleet. The winner of that fight may have a chance with Joe Gans, Packy McFarland or Memsic and the world's championship is just over the horizon.

Each man of course, is very confident that he will win and while the opinion of the sports is divided, as is shown by the even money bets that have been made, the majority seem to favor Britt on account of the fact that he is the better boxer and for this reason should out-point Nelson in a short fight of ten rounds. However, there has been very little betting done.

Great interest is being taken in the main preliminary between Kid Brock and Kid Dalton, who will go on for ten rounds. Brock is touted as a wonder and Nelson, who has been using Dalton as a sparring partner, thinks he is a great boy who will surely make a name for himself.

A good-sized delegation of sports will be down from the north to see the scrap, including Coffroth, Graney and Tom Corbett. The bunch of scrappers in the house will be appalling, for there will be Coulon and McGovern, paperweight aspirants; Attell, feather champion; Kid Ketchell, middle weight; Jim Jeffries, retired heavyweight and Jim Flynn, ambitious heavyweight. There will also be others of lesser ability. Coulon left Chocago Friday night and should arrive tomorrow.

BURNS IS FOXY.

TRIES TO FORCE JOHNSON.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS—P.M.]

LONDON, Feb. 29.—Mr. Kelly, representative of the syndicate which is endeavoring to arrange a fight between Tommy Burns, holder of the heavyweight pugilistic championship, and Jack Johnson, the American negro fighter, yesterday received the following cable dispatch from the United States: insists. He wants $1000 for expenses. Send full particulars of the offer of the British syndicate."

To this Mr. Kelly replied: "Will give Johnson $5000 win or lose. This amount includes expenses. Jeffries to referee, and the ring to be sixteen feet, Burns insists. I insist on Johnson posting $2000 or this match is off; as I have an option on a certain building until the morning of February 29."

In an interview concerning the proposed contest, Mr. Kelly said: "The fight will be a twenty-round one, in order to comply with the English law, and if Johnson posts a forfeit, articles will be sent to the United States for him to sign. It might be added that the terms which puzzle Johnson are not those of Burns, but were made by the syndicate. The only conditions upon which Burns insists were the size of the ring and Jeffries to be the referee. Jeffries was chosen by him because he believed the American public will be better satisfied by Jeffries than if an Englishman judged the fight."

Burns, in discussing Johnson's reply to the offer of the syndicate, said: "We will see who is crawfishing. Now my forfeit is up and it shows what I mean. If I only get the chance, I will make Johnson jump out of the ring. He won't get a chance to run as did Philadelphia Jack O'Brien in California, as the ring will be only sixteen feet square."

Burns concluded by saying that he would fight Johnson anywhere if he was offered the same inducements as had been held out in England.

GANS READY AGAIN.

LIGHTWEIGHT WANTS MONEY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Ben Selig admits Gans is ready to go back to the fighting game any time a man appears who is a suitable opponent.

"Gans made the mistake of building his hotel where he thought white patrons would go to it," says Selig, "but when he got it furnished he had to let it to colored people, and the returns are not good. He needs money, so he will fight in case any present lightweights show they have a right to be considered."

Peace With Packy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 29.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Sam Berger has straightened out his difficulties with Packy McFarland and received a wire from Manager Harry Gilmore, Jr., so that he and McFarland will leave for San Francisco the first part of the coming week. This does away with any chance for the Chicagoan witnessing the Britt-Nelson fight in Los Angeles next Tuesday night.

Electric Fire Fighter.

Electrically-propelled fire-fighting apparatuses have already been more or less used in Germany and Austria, but up to the present time they have not been used to any extent in Great Britain. The Liverpool fire brigade has had a "fire escape," or extension ladder, built, however, and other brigades are expected to follow the example. The machine carries an eighty-seven-foot ladder, electrically manipulated, and is driven by current from a battery of eighty cells.

CALIFORNIA'S HARD LUCK WITH ROWING FACILITIES.

Coach Garnett Proposes to Have His Men in Best of Shape for Stanford Regatta—No Chance Now to Rent Shell to Cardinal Oarsmen. Freshmen Eight Uncertain.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, Feb. 27.—Lack of condition is not going to cause the defeat of the California eights this spring, if hard work and faithful training can prevent it. All the men on both the freshman and 'varsity squads are reporting at the gymnasium every morning at 6:30 o'clock, where Prof. Magee puts them through a stiff hour of exercise. Twenty minutes of the time is spent with the apparatus and floor work, twenty on the machines under the direction of Capt. Witter, followed by a fast quarter on the track, while the rest of the time is passed in dressing. Once a week the men are to have a six-mile cross-country run.

In the afternoon the men report to Coach Garnett at the Amador, as many days a week as complicated study schedules will permit. For the present, every evening a freshman and 'varsity eight are on the estuary, and sometimes a freshman four. A submerged pile ripped a hole in the bow of one eight a short time ago, putting it out of commission for several weeks to come. As a result of the accident, the 'varsity is forced to practice in the shell which the coach was saving for the race.

All the men are on the water at least five times a week, for as long a row as time will permit, which is never over an hour and a half, with the exception of Saturdays. At the present time the 'varsity candidates are in better condition and are rowing far better than was the eight at the time of the regatta last spring.

While both the 'varsity and freshman candidates are strong, the California eights this spring will be very light. The 'varsity will not average over 172 pounds. Positions on the 'varsity are already narrowed down to about a dozen men. Capt. Witter is a fixture at stroke, while Ball and F. Ashley seem to have seats cinched, although just what ones is not definite.

Robertson, captain of the 1910 freshman four, and H. Ashley of the same crew, will undoubtedly get into the 'varsity shell, while Schroeder and Sperry, the other two members of the same four, are making strong bids for positions. Schaufele, who has rowed on several of the '08 crews, will probably make the 'varsity, while Davidson of the '09 class crew also stands an excellent chance. Dignan is another sophomore who is also making good, while Colt and Brayton of the same class are doing well.

The freshman eight is rather an uncertain quantity, for several of the first year men have been laid up with either sprained ankles, mumps or blood poisoning. Jackson, who captained the babies in the class races this spring, is certain of a seat, while Blake, who rowed in the class regatta, will also get in. Langstroth of the freshman football team is showing up well at stroke, while Cope of Santa Ana is doing well in the boat. Randall, Sturdevant, Simpson, Venatta, Diaz, Hardy, Pauly and Bowen of Los Angeles are among the others who are making a good showing.

Now that one shell is out of commission, all possibility of renting a boat to Stanford is eliminated, even if the Executive Committee and the coach were willing. Manager Snedigar made arrangements to rent the Cardinal a boat, provided the Executive Committee was willing. The Executive Committee believed that it was not California's fault if Stanford had failed to provide herself with suitable equipment for carrying out the intercollegiate agreement. The committee also thought that to rent a shell would be putting the Blue and Gold under the possibility of injuring the racing shell, and that because of the lake on the Stanford campus, both her crews could get as much practice in one shell, the fours and barge, as the Blue and Gold can in two shells, when it takes nearly an hour from the acmpus to the water.

FOOTBALL STAR IN THE MAKING.

CARLISLE BELIEVES BALENTI IS GREAT QUARTER.

Redmen Train in Coldest Weather With Track Raised Above the Snow Level—Greatest Baseball Team in History of School Anticipated. Makes Big Schedule.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CARLISLE (Pa.) Feb. 25.—Michael Balenti, a 20-year-old Cheyenne Indian from Oklahoma, has just been elected captain of the Carlisle Indian baseball team. Balenti has fielded and played third base as well as caught. He is the coming Indian quarterback at football, and is five feet ten inches tall, and is training down for the approaching season to 150 pounds.

Spring athletics at the Carlisle Indian School are making amazing strides. Track and field candidates number forty, and are unusually speedy. The redskins in training so far for track and field events are: Pierce Yupe, Chester Cobay, Oscar Boyd, Lee Pocatello Robert Ouray, Jas. Williams, S. Black Star, Sampson Bard, David Little Old Man, Frank Cook, Wesley J. Tall Chief, Harrison Smith, Reno Rowland, Harrison Waterman, Frank Johnson, Edward K. Fox, Judson Cobay, Levi Williams, Jacob Taylor, Louis White, Wm. H. Weeks, Wallace Mathews, Howard Jones Moses Friday, Wm. Owl, Chas. Houyoust, Bruce Goesback, Clement Smith, Roy George, Noah Sequayah, Eugene Beck, Ernest Quick Bear, Henry Eydick, Wm. Garlow, Nelson Bartlett.

The baseball candidates number fully sixty aborigines. This number will be cut down beginning with the first week in February to thirty aspirants, by the elimination of undesirable material.

With the completion of a new board running track, which encircles the regular quarter-mile cinder track on the athletic field, and which is designed to stand above ordinary snows, Coach Glen S. Warner's hardy runners put in at least a mile outdoors during the coldest weather, wearing the lightest clothing. In the cage, batting, infield work, and pitching, are the principal occupations of the baseball devotees.

The Carlisle school has lost some strong point winners in Billy, Schanandore, and Rodgers. These losses will, however, be made up by the expected development of some of last year's runners and a couple of new candidates. Carlisle is fortunate in retaining Black Star, Mount Pleasant, Two-Hearts, Exendine, Hunt, Mitchell, Thorpe, Thomas, and others.

There is considerable competition for the hammer-throw.

Meets have been arranged with Annapolis, Syracuse, State College, and others, and the best men will be taken as usual to the annual relay races in Philadelphia. The track and field sport schedule will be announced soon, the season winding up on Decoration Day when the initial State championship intercollegiate meet will be held at Harrisburg. Carlisle is a charter member of the new Intercollegiate Association.

The baseball schedule will be announced within a few weeks, and contains the best list of games Carlisle has ever offered, including contests with Yale, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Brown and many others. Physical Director Warner expects to have the greatest team in the history of Carlisle.

outclassed Sinsabaugh. Bundy serves his second ball as fiercely as his first and this bothered Sinsabaugh considerably as the match progressed. If the twice Coronado champion continues to play the game he displayed at Coronado, he will cause plenty of trouble among up-State tennis players later in the year.

Bundy and Sinsabaugh walked through the doubles as though the events were constructed for their especial benefit. No one else had a look in. But the mixed doubles furnished a good battle in the contest between the teams composed of champion Bundy and Mrs. Bruce, and champion Miss May Sutton and A. C. Way. The Sutton-Way combination was the favorite because of the prowess of the world's champion. The brilliant playing of Bundy and the safe game of Mrs. Bruce, however, proved the winning combination and took the match in straight but very bitterly-contested sets. This was the first contest ever lost by May Sutton at Coronado "within the recollection of the oldest inhabitant." She and C. T. Bell were the victors last year.

Coronado was considerably disappointed by the failure of San Francisco tennis players to attend the tournament this year. While San Franciscans have never been numerous at Coronado tournaments, still there have always been two or three of their best players on hand. Their absence, however, was in a measure compensated by the presence of two Salt Lake City players, A. W. Salisbury and E. S. Armstrong. Though Salisbury was not able to get into the semi-finals, he played a rattling good game through the preliminary rounds, and went out in a good contest with Charles B. Hopper.

An effort will be made next year to extend the scope of the Coronado tournament in order that the strong coterie of Los Angeles players do not have complete monopoly of the meet. This year, from the semi-finals to the end, there were nothing but Los Angeles and Pasadena in the reckoning. At the close of the tournament every championship went to Los Angeles and vicinity.

Miss May Sutton's victory this year was her third winning, and consequently she took away the grand challenge trophy offered for the ladies' singles. Thomas C. Bundy has now scored two legs on the trophy for men.

CALIFORNIA COMING SOUTH.

Pomona to Meet Northern Team Which Is to Play Series of Basketball Games Here.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, Feb. 29.—In spite of Pomona's recent defeat in basketball by Whittier, there still remains a probability that the sagebrush five will meet the University of California team. Coach Braden received a letter today from the northern team asking for a game to be played in Claremont, March 24. The Berkeley management demands a guarantee of $40 for expenses and expresses eagerness to meet the Claremont basketballers.

The Berkeley aggregation is sadly in need of games since Stanford has decided to put no team in the field.

The Claremonters intend to demand a similar guarantee and go north themselves, since they feel one game here without a trip would not recompense a month of hard training after they have once quit.

A.A.U. Meeting.

The local Pacific Coast branch of the A.A.U. will meet Monday night to formulate plans for the wrestling tournament that will be held in May, presumably at Turner Hall, on South Main street.

Annandale Election.

The annual meeting of the Annandale Golf Club has been set for March 9, when vacancies on the board of directors will be filled. The ticket which the Nominating Committee has submitted is C. S. Byington, E. J. Sheehan, W. F. Knight and S. S. Hinds.

GETTING BUSY.

ANGLERS ARE REELING LINES.

GREAT HOPES FOR SEASON TO BEGIN TODAY.

Pomnano Are Reported as Running at Several Beach Resorts—Sport Has Been Fair During Past Week. Perch at Santa Monica and Tuna at Catalina.

Local sea fishermen are looking forward to the beginning of warm weather with a great deal of satisfaction, for the fishing of the winter months has been at a standstill. The cold, cloudy weather and the storms have prevented everything but deep-sea angling. With the return of pleasant days, the sport will naturally get back to normal conditions.

The tide table shows that high tide is due at 8:09 o'clock this morning, the height being six feet, eight inches. Low tide will be at 2:49 o'clock this afternoon and it will be one foot lower than mean sea level. This should be an excellent day for abalone hunters, as was yesterday, for the low tide is the same on both days. Next Friday evening should be even better, for the low tide figure will be even lower then than this afternoon.

The fishing the past week has been good in some places, but the anglers will find that the fish are running in streaks. Frank Childs and George Taylor went to the long wharf last Wednesday and caught no less than ninety pompano, Childs getting fifty. Others who went the next day to the wharf, got but a few, but a crowd that fished at Del Rey the same day, captured all they could carry home. The fact that there are plenty of these fish along the shore, indicates that there are other varieties just outside in deeper water and the yellowtail and albicore should be heard from now at any time.

Surf fish and perch are reported plentiful at Santa Monica and Ocean Park and some good catches have been made at those places the past week. The regular fishermen are getting ready for the season, which practically opens today and they will certainly be interested in knowing that a sixty-five-pound tuna was caught at Catalina last week. All of the supply stores report good sales of tackle during the last ten days and from now on the ordinary person will be compelled to listen to all kinds of fish stories.

Water Polo Contest.

The L.A.A.C. water polo team administered a second defeat to the Bimini Baths team Friday night by the score of 5 to 0. The game was faster than that of the previous week, and the players showed considerable improvement in their work. Wednesday the same teams will give an exhibition game at Venice, and on Friday night will play at Bimini. The line-up last night was:

NEULS IS CAPTAIN.

NUCLEUS OF OLD PLAYERS.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

CLAREMONT, Feb. 28. — Joseph Neuls, 1911, has been elected to captain the 1909 aggregation. Neuls played a star game at forward all this season, and showed great class in long field shots.

Before coming to college, Neuls was the star of the Redlands championship five. He will have practically the same team next season as this, the two big losses being Metcalf, who will graduate in June, and Hayes, the crack forward, who will complete his college course at Stanford.

He Believed the Boy.

The venerable and learned Justice John M. Harian, during a game of golf at Chevy Chase, explained the intricacies of evidence to a young man.

Justice Harlan illustrated well the case of conflicting evidence—how, when the statements of two witnesses are opposed, the more probable statement is to be accepted.

"Usually, in conflicting evidence," he said, "one statement is far more probable than the other, so that we can decide easily which to believe.

It is like the boy and the house hunter. A house hunter, getting off a train at a suburban station, said to a boy:

" 'My boy, I am looking for Mr. Smithson's new block of semi-detached cottages. How far are they from here?'

" 'About a twenty-minutes' walk,' the boy replied.

" 'Twenty minutes!' exclaimed the house hunter. 'Nonsense! the advertisement says five.'

" 'Well,' said the boy, 'you can believe me or you can believe the advertisement; but I ain't tryin' to make no sale.' "

Board of Trade Sale.

The San Francisco Board of Trade sold to the Mammoth Shoe House of 519 S. Broadway, the shoe stock of M. Lesser for about half price. This stock goes on sale tomorrow. Be sure and be there and get the benefit of the big reduction in prices.

Tourist AUTOMOBILES
Made in Los Angeles, Cal.

As usual, "made good" in the Altadena Hill Climbing Contest yesterday.

Type "K," two-cylinder touring car, $1800, carrying four passengers, won for the second time the Leon T. Shettler Challenge Cup. Time 2.41. Defeating the Reo and a special Buick. Note the consistent performance of the four Tourist cars. Neither a "Jack Rabbit" nor a "Tortoise" among them, but every one made remarkably fast time and went through without a hitch, miss or break, which is more than can be said of some of the "aristocrats."

AN INTERESTING COMPARISON

The average selling price of the four Tourist types is $1887.50.

The average selling price of all other cars in the contest is $2819.05.

The average Tourist time was 2.41 1-5.

The average time of all other cars, including the "Jack Rabbit," (omitting the White steamer, which did not finish,) was 2.42 1-5.

Thus again showing that on the doctrine of averages the TOURIST CARS assure a buyer of SUPERIOR PERFORMANCE AT LESS COST.

My Specialty Men's Diseases

There is no ailment peculiar to men that I cannot cure. For twenty years I have devoted my entire time and energy to the treatment of men's diseases.

My methods have been perfected by actual experience, with a thoroughly theoretical knowledge as a basis. I am the only physician thoroughly and permanently curing those functional derangements commonly classed as "Weakness," and my success in overcoming such cases has placed me foremost among specialists treating men's diseases, and has brought me the largest practice of its kind in the West.

DR. MILES,
The Master Specialist.

My Fee for a Thorough and Lasting Cure of Any Ailment Is Only $10 In Any Uncomplicated Case

Pay Me After I Have Cured You

I Cure All Diseases of Men

I have treated hundreds of men who have long suffered a gradual decline of physical and mental energy as a result of ailments, and have been interested in noting the marked general improvement that follows a thorough cure of the chief disorder. My success in curing difficult cases of long standing has made me the foremost specialist treating men's diseases. This success is due to several things. It is due to the original, distinctive and thoroughly scientific methods of treatment I employ.

To those in doubt as to their true condition who wish to avoid the serious results that may follow neglect, I offer free consultation and advice, either at my office or through correspondence. If your case is one of the few that have reached an incurable stage I will not accept it for treatment, nor will I urge my services upon any one. I treat curable cases only, and cure all cases I treat.

The Scientific Treatment of "Weakness"

Dosing the system with powerful stimulants and tonics in an effort to restore functional vigor can have but one final result; the condition is rendered worse than before. Few doctors know of any other method than stomach drugging, and when this does no good, they say: "There is no cure for Weakness." I have often made strong statements to the effect that the ailment must be thoroughly understood before it could be remedied. I have proven it beyond dispute that so-called "Weakness" is merely an indication of the existence of a low form of inflammation in the Prostate Gland, which is usually aggravated and made worse by stimulating medicine, electricity or any other agent that excites temporary activity. The Prostate is a nerve center and therefore very sensitive to treatment—the right kind quickly helps, while the wrong kind can cause great harm and sometimes irreparable damage.

I employ the only scientific and fully effective treatment for "Weakness," which is almost entirely local, by which I mean that the medication is applied directly to parts. Medicines containing poisons are entirely excluded. I obtain the most desirable results in every case undertaken, and the cure is permanent and complete.

Varicocele

I cure any case that I accept in one week's time. My treatment is a painless one, and in most instances the patient need not be detained a single day from business. There is no doubt or guesswork, but absolute certainty of a thorough and lasting cure, with complete return to that degree of health and vigor that existed before the disease began.

Contracted Disorders

Every case of Contracted Diseases I treat is cured thoroughly. My patients have no relapses. When I pronounce a case cured there is not a particle of infection or inflammation remaining and there isn't the slightest danger that the disease will return in its original form or work its way into the general system. Some Contracted Diseases are less serious than others, but none are too trivial to warrant uncertain methods of treatment. I especially solicit those cases that other doctors have been unable to cure.

MY OFFICES ARE OPEN EVERY DAY FROM 9 A. M. TO 9 P. M.; SUNDAYS, 9 TO 12 ONLY.

MATCH WITH THE GUARDS.

Rifles Propose Friendly Contest With Militia.

To Hold Target Practice on Police Range Today.

Los Angeles Revolver Club in Medal Shoot.

The Southern California Rifles will conduct target practice today at the police rifle range on Bishop street. The 200-yard range will be used, and, as it is possible to secure 300 yards by shooting from a grade back of the regular range-house, it is probable the longer distance will be used. If so, the 200-yard target will be used, and the men will shoot from the new sitting posture recommended in the army, instead of the kneeling position.

The Los Angeles Revolver Club will hold its regular monthly medal shoot at the pistol range. The members of the Rifles will not shoot on the pistol range until the revolver club has concluded its contests. If there is time, a friendly contest may be arranged. The Revolver Club has been invited to affiliate with the Rifles as a body, without losing its identity as an organization, for the purpose of promoting the sport as much as possible and keeping it centralized.

The National Guards are to hold a shoot on their range back of Eastlake Park, next Sunday, when Company A will contest with Co. E of Anaheim and Co. G of Redlands. Lieut. Bert Dommitt is captain of Co. A's team. It is the intention of the Southern California Rifles to challenge Co. A's team to a friendly match as soon thereafter as possible. The Guards and members of the Rifles have been comparing notes lately and believe that some good contests can be arranged. The Guards will also hold a practice shoot today.

The chief difficulty in the way of conducting a match between the two organizations is that the Guards are armed with the military rifle, while the Rifles are equipped with a variety of arms, with all kinds of calibers and sights. The Rifles will hit up an average in selecting their arms for such a shoot and fulfill as nearly as possible the conditions under which the Guards shoot.

The selection of a type of arm for use by the Rifles has become a matter of weight with the organization. The Armament Committee, composed of E. D. Neff, A. C. Freeman and C. F. Pierce, is trying to arrange for the use of the new Springfield army rifle through affiliation with the National Rifle Association. If this arm cannot be secured it is probable that the Krag will be chosen so as to secure an arm as near like the Springfield as possible. A decision will be reached as soon as possible so that members who have no guns may provide themselves with arms at once.

The Native Sons are at work organizing their company, as is the Fraternal Brotherhood, which has four companies in prospect, and these men all need arms. It is believed that the Krags discarded by the army in favor of the new Springfield can be secured at a very low price, and these guns likely will be chosen as a standard, for they are in good condition.

Lieut. Von Webber has been appointed as officer of the day at the shoot of the Rifles today, and he has been given power to select his range officer, clerk, and scorers from the men on the ground. The shoot will last from 10 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. As the Revolver Club begins shooting between 8 and 9 o'clock, most of the scores will be rung up and the short range men will be given an opportunity to watch the rifle practice.

RIFLE RANGES IN THE EAST.

SECRETARY TAFT WANTS MONEY FOR NEW PURCHASE.

Would Locate Tract of Land Near Washington for Small Arms and Artillery—Interstate and National Competition and Construction of More Ranges Fostered.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TIMES.]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20.—Secretary of War Taft desires to secure an appropriation of $250,000 for the purchase of a tract of 6000 acres more or less near Washington, which will be available for use as a target range for small arms firing and for artillery practice as well. Such a tract could be used for military maneuvers, and would be available for the National Guard of the District of Columbia and contiguous States. In this connection Secretary Taft says:

"The necessity for a tract of land for target practice and other military uses in the Department of the East is very urgent. Secretary Taft has appointed Maj.-Gen. William P. Duvall, Brig.-Gen. W. S. Edgerly and Brig.-Gen. William W. Witherspoon to examine three sites which have been offered, one at High Point, Fairfax county, Va., one at Falls Church, Va., and the third at Knoxville, Frederick county, Va.

In his report to the War Department on the rifle matches at Camp Perry last year, Gen. Ortis Hamilton of Washington indorses Camp Perry, O., for the national matches of 1908, but suggests that there should be four national rifle ranges, one in the East, one in the Middle West, one in the Southwest and one in the State of Washington, and that, if possible, the government should acquire the range at Camp Perry. He says the States have enough to do without building rifle ranges large enough for national competitions.

Gen. Hamilton recommends the fostering of interstate and national competition and the construction of more ranges. He says that a competition could be held in Washington now, in which Oregon, Idaho and Montana would be represented and probably teams from the Canadian militia, and possibly civilian rifle clubs of the States, but the State of Washington has no rifle range large enough to accommodate such competition and can ill afford to build one.

Col. E. S. Bryant, the Ohio team captain, suggested that each team be permitted to furnish, purchase and use its own ammunition. If government ammunition is to be used, then two kinds should be manufactured. He [illegible] the present service load is very [illegible] for short and mid range and government ammunition shall be used exclusively in the next national matches.

BOYS' TOURNAMENT.

The recent tournament in New York for schoolboys and college students was most successful. The first night eighteen schoolboys won junior marksman medals, with scores ranging from 43 to 49 out of a possible 50, firing five shots prone and five shots standing. Although intended principally for High School boys, other boys were permitted to shoot, the youngest being only 10 years of age. Matches were arranged on the sub-target gun machine between various schools, as well as with the 22-caliber rifle.

In the university match, Columbia, George Washington, Cornell, Harvard and Yale were represented by teams of four, finishing in the order named, with only forty points difference between the two extremes. P. Agramonte of Columbia made a "possible," which means the highest score possible, off-shoulder, and K. Kroger, also of Columbia, made a "possible" prone, as did J. W. Pattison of George Washington and M. C. Allen of Harvard.

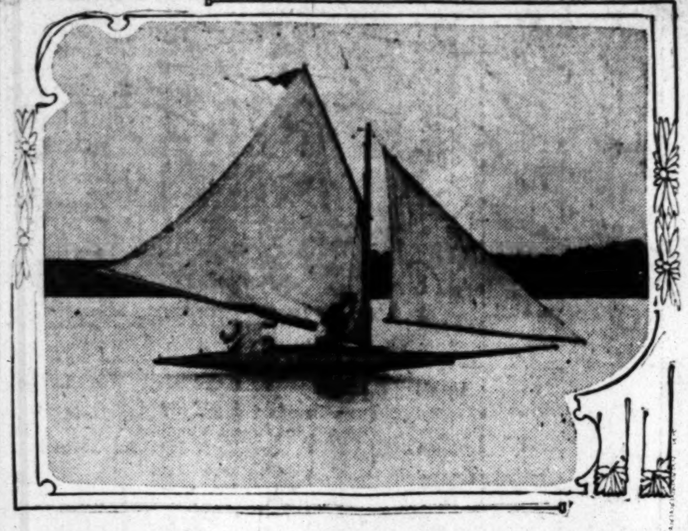
The schoolboy team match, open to teams representing any public or private school in the United States not giving collegiate or university degrees, six on the team, was won by the Curtis (New York City) High School, with a score of 569 out of a possible 1000. The Commercial High School team lost by only one point, making 568; Manual Training High School came in with 564, and Morris High School with 563 and DeWitt Clinton School with 561. Fourteen teams were entered, including the Paterson, N. J., High School, St. John's Military School, New York Military Academy, Stamford, Ct., High School and Pingry School of Elizabeth, N. J. About 200 schoolboys won the junior marksman's medal, given for a minimum score of 42, of which at least 20 must be made off shoulder and 22 prone, out of a possible total of 50.

A large number of prizes, medals, etc., were distributed, and it is estimated at least 22,000 shots were fired in the competitions.

TEACHING BOYS.

Under modern conditions the instruction of boys in shooting is attended with substantially no danger whatever. First they are taught to aim and fire a gun attached to a machine known as a "sub-target machine." No ammunition is used in connection with this contrivance, but the gun is connected with a needle-like rod, so that it registers on a miniature target the point where the bullet would have struck on the regulation target had the gun been loaded. It is by no means a toy, for it has been adopted by the navy and many militia companies, and several thousands such machines are now being constructed for the French army. After the boys become proficient in aiming, they are put at work on 22-caliber rifles, which are of the same weight and which have the same sight as the regular army rifles. With the reduced distances and targets the same results are obtainable indoors as outdoors, except for light, wind and mirage, and by an ingenious system of allowances for these, problems may be worked out indoors as well as on the open ranges. After the student is thoroughly grounded in holding and sighting the 22 rifle, and learns how to correct his sights so as to allow for wind, he is taken on the range and for the first time allowed to shoot the regulation cartridge in the army gun. By this time it is to be presumed he is sufficiently familiar with its use that neither he nor his comrades will be in any danger from its handling.

RACING SCOOTER AND ICE YACHTS IN NEW YORK.



Scooter Eagle, which beat Windward.

The first of three races for $500 a side between the Patchogue Scooters' Club and the ice yachts of the Orange Ice Club resulted in a victory for Capt. "Fred" Thurber's scooter Eagle and Commodore H. C. Higginson's ice yacht Windward, at Newburg, N. Y., recently. The owner sailed his scooter, while Capt. Merritt of Low Point sailed the Windward.

During the first part of the race the ice yacht sailed very fast, traveling some three and a half-miles to the scooter's two. Later, however, the proportion was not so favorable for the ice yacht. The wind was light at the start, and when the race had been in progress twenty minutes it steadily fell. The Eagle sailed ten miles to fourteen and one-half by the Windward. The official time was 35 minutes 52 seconds. Under the terms of the race, the ice yacht had to sail two miles to one for the scooter, the ten miles to be sailed within seventy minutes.

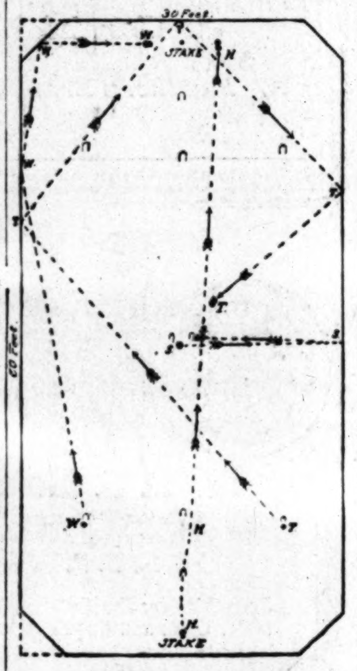
ABSORBING.

SKILLFUL PLAY IN ROQUE GAME.

BRILLIANT SHOTS ARE RULE IN BIG TOURNAMENTS.

California Courts Are Best in the United States and Rival Billiard Tables in Permitting Accuracy of Manipulation—Game Gives Opportunity for Development.

Many skillful plays were made by contestants in the recent roque tournament. Few realize that such shots are possible with mallet and ball. But a day's observation of experts in even casual games will convince the most skeptical that such plays are deliberately planned and executed, sometimes without causing the slightest comment among the players. Indeed, a failure is more apt to cause comment than is success. But whatever the skill of players, no such brillant work is possible without a perfect court; and, though rare, such courts are readily made and maintained in California, where seasons have little effect upon the surface of the ground.



Four Brilliant Shots.

Made in recent roque tournament from wired positions. W-W-W-W shows a three-carom shot against and through arch, against side and corner cushions, seventy feet to ball, made by Wheaton. S-S-S shows a single cushion shot of thirty feet to reach a ball one foot distant and one inch from direct line, but wired by the arch, made by Streeter. T-T-T-T-T shows a three-cushion shot of 100 feet made by Turner. H-H-H shows a jump by Huxtable of a dangerous wire from "freeze" on stake, reaching ball at fifty-six feet.

Eastern experts, some of whom are owners of private courts, say that no such surfaces can be secured in their demesnes as was found during the recent contest in the court on Olive Heights. A level ground, 30 by 60 feet in extent, covered with a sandy loam, or other well-sifted soil, well rolled and scraped, with light watering and sanding, will soon become as fine as a billiard cloth for purposes of play, and a little attention daily will not only keep it in condition but improve its firmness and reliability. The 4 by 6-inch hardwood borders, with rubber cushions made of buggy tires, or regular billiard cushions, make it possible to execute, with the beautiful vulcanized rubber balls, plays and runs undreamed of a few years ago.

Good mallets are, of course, a necessity for the best work, and cost from $5 to $15 each. The best are so rare as to command a premium nearly equal to the original cost. A set of vulcanized rubber balls, four in number, perfect spheres, and perfectly equal in weight and action, can be obtained for $12, and with proper use should last a lifetime. No wooden balls should be tolerated.

Arches of seven-sixteenths-inch steel, set firmly in blocks well under ground, allow the balls one-quarter of an inch room in passing through, but the eighteen-inch cage cuts this space one-eighth inch narrower. The stakes are one and one-half inches high, which renders shots with a ball in front of the stake quite difficult. "Wiring" the opposing player's "guilty" ball behind the arches is absolutely necessary to success, as a good player is nearly certain to hit any ball left exposed to a line shot.

due exertion or special preparation in the way of dress, and is especially suited to persons of quiet taste in games of skill.

WATER POLO LEAGUE.

Organization Proposed This Week With Four Teams, Three Being from Los Angeles.

The proposed water polo league probably will be definitely organized this week, with three Los Angeles teams and the Venice five. In Los Angeles the teams will be: L.A.A.C., Bimini Baths and Dyas-Clines, the latter team is being organized under the managership of Wallace Robb, and will include several crack players. Macomber, formerly on the Chicago Athletic Club team, will play, and Roy Seeley, formerly on the Long Beach team; Harry Cline, who played with Avalon two years ago; Stan Mitchell and Jack Howard, probably will complete the line-up.

The L.A.A.C. and Bimini teams will be the same as have been playing for the past three weeks. The league series will not begin for about two weeks. This will give time for exhibition games at Venice and in Los Angeles, in which all four teams may get into good condition. For the five winning the series, medals in the shape of small silver water polo balls will be given to each player. The first exhibition game will be played at Venice Wednesday night, between the L.A.A.C. and Bimini teams. On Friday night the same teams will meet at Bimini Baths.

Coronado Golf Tourney.

CORONADO, Feb. 29.—Coronado's annual handicap golf tournament, open to the country, takes place Monday. It is an 18-hole medal play event. Many of the golfers who participated in the grand challenge tournament of February are on hand for the approaching event, and will afford some excellent contests. The handicaps are selected by the Handicap Committee of the Coronado Country Club, based upon the three best performances over the Coronado links by the various players. A. B. Daniels, the 1908 champion, is Occidental Girls' Basketball Teams to Meet in Finals Tuesday for President's Cup.

Occidental seniors and freshmen will meet tomorrow in the girls' interclass basketball tournament for the championship of the college. The winners will play the second year academy team on Tuesday for the championship of the institution and the president's cup. The freshmen are picked to defeat the seniors, although the game should be closely contested.

The freshman team is composed of Grace McCoy and Lota Williams, forwards; Grace Harriet, center; Stella Wieman and Louise Chamberlain, guards. The senior line-up is: Kate Darling, Nina Brown, forwards; Bertha Boal, center; Mame Pierce and TRY-OUT CONTESTS.

Los Angeles High School Athletes Will Perform Next Thursday and Friday.

Try-outs for the Los Angeles High School gymnasium team, which is to make a tour of Northern California in April, will be held this week. On Thursday the Los Angeles aspirants for the team will be tried out, and on Friday physical director Lowsley will review the Polytechnic gymnasts.

Friday night four new men were successful in making the Poly gym club by the following scores: Roy Dixon 80, Carl Morin 76.7, Roy Mendoza 76.6, and Jamie Overton 76.2. Other scores made were: Louis Conte 68.5, Leo Wood 66.5, and Ivan Wright 65.

The St. Paul club will take one of the longest jaunts ever made by an A. A. outfit, going to Cumberland, Md., for the preliminary training.

ATRABILIOUS PIETY.

> child, sweet child, thou walkest with me here, > though thou art not filled with solemn thought > nature is not therefore less divine."

E lines are from John Keble, one of England's est and latest religious poets. Dr. Keble may agined walking with a little blue-eyed girl or red boy as joyous as the lark in the sky or gale in the bush, as natural as the flower that up to catch the sunbeam and the dew, as fra-eet as the May bush by the way. The eye of danced with delight; smiles wreathed the ipples of laughter broke from the lips; the nded and thrilled with unalloyed happiness. of God looked down upon the golden head, ughing eyes, on the joyous face, and realized ivine nature shone there all unconscious of ence of God in life.

queer thing long-faced, dark-visaged piety is rld! The scriptures teach: "If God be for us, e against us?" "I know that all things work or good to them that love God;" "Fear not, it is your Father's good will to give you a "The God of Jacob is our refuge;" "Under-the everlasting arms."

these words and then go through the world breakfast sat heavily upon us and hear the ame mentioned with something akin to a We think the "evil one" dogs our steps and o rush us off to torments.

h, yes, there is sin in the world and in the he best of us. But it does not eclipse the sun e. It does not stop the rill from singing as it wn its rocky path along the mountainside to plain bloom and the vale lie cool in the shade eat woods. Sin has not taken the fragrance rose nor from the violet, and the bird refuses nt because poor Eve ate that apple once so long another English poet and learn wisdom from al lines. Alfred Tennyson was not enrolled sacred singers, although few since David or before him have been more fully inspired by the divine spirit. If there are any depths in the human heart, of love or hope or fear or doubt, that Tennyson failed to drop the plummet of his thought into, they must be very profound. Looking at the weakness of the human heart he calls to us like a man to men:

> "And weep not like an idle girl
> That life is flecked with spots of sin."

David? We have named the sweet singer of Israel, who is described as a man "after God's own heart." Yes, so you refer to his wail in the psalm "De Profundis." "That is surely as sad a song as ever fell from human lips. Not only the psalmist's face was long-drawn and his brow wrinkled, but tears of bitter remorse coursed down his cheek. His religion was certainly not joyous."

Yes, it was. This is not the only song the peasant king has left. This episode was not David's whole life. If any of us have been "overtaken in a fault" similar to that of the king which he here laments, we should too "cry aloud and spare not." The man who sent a fellow man to the front where "grim-visaged war" was at its grimmest stage, and with him sent secret instructions to the commanding general to put Uriah in a spot where the fight was so hot that he must fall, is fortunately not likely to spend all his nights in sound sleep. Bethsheba may be beautiful, but however resplendent, the ghost of Uriah is likely to be seen in the dead watches of the night, when the sound of music is dead and the mantling wine cup is not going round. This soul is likely to be plunged in "dark despair" and the "deep" from which he "calls" may well be almost fathomless.

But this experience of the King of Israel is not common to the race of men. Leopold of Belgium has not been guilty of a more heinous sin than this of David.

But some one whose lips will not smile, and who trembles under the "terrors of the law," still objects that the apostle Paul, for long ages duly canonized by the church, calls himself the "chief of sinners." Paul no doubt felt that such he was and had a good reason so to feel. Even David's sin was mild by the side of that of Saul of Tarsus. Think of Stephen as he knelt and prayed for his murderers as the stones fell upon his poor body while the "young man whose name was Saul" held the garments of the brutes at the rock pile and gave his voice in encouragement of this inexcusable and horribly bloody massacre. If the wrath of Uriah arose to wring tears from the eyes of David, what a terrible picture Stephen must have presented to Saul's eyes when he lay in the darkness all alone with his sin. What if Saul did think he was right when he followed the Christians from city to city and haled them to a cruel death. Paul had learned that Saul had been a brutal murderer, and that bigotry is no justification for heartless inhumanity. No wonder that when the spirit of the One whose words were always merciful and Whose love for all men knew no bounds possessed the soul of Saul, he became ashamed of his very name and sought to cover up his record from the eyes of men in a new name.

But in spite of all such records, Keble is right. The nature of the joyous child is not less divine for the absence of solemn thought. Tennyson is right. No wholesome human heart will spend its days weeping because "life is flecked with spots of sin." It is not necessary that piety hang out as its banner every sign of atrabilious ill-feeling which an inactive liver may create. A cheerful view of life is the natural view. Encouragement and bright thoughts naturally flow from heart to heart and should not be restrained. A cheerful religion will gain converts faster than the one with a scowl on the brow, even as molasses catches more flies than vinegar.

THE WATER MILL.

On the grassy banks of a noisy stream,
Whose waters babble and laugh and sing,
As they splash the rocks in the sun's bright gleam,
And their wreaths of filmy bubbles fling,
There stands, close under the wooded hill,
A loved old landmark, the water-mill.

When a happy youth, long years ago,
These wooded valleys were haunts of mine;
My hook I loved in the stream to throw
And wait for a trout to stretch my line,
While the dripping wheel that was never still Gave life to the busy water-mill.

Day long the waters turned the wheel;
The golden grain was changed to flour;
I watched them flowing and seemed to feel
Through my fresh, young life the mystic power
That hid in the drops of the prisoned rill
That turned the wheel of the water-mill.

With the fleeting years that have intervened,
I have wandered far and in many climes,
And many a precious pleasure gleamed
But have heard no song whose rippling chimes
Were sweet as were those of the laughing rill
That turned the wheel of the water-mill.

The waters still flow on in glee,
With rest nor pause in their endless song;
They are hurrying on to the boundless sea
To dream in its bosom long and long:
But the wheel is broken and all is still
In the ivy-grown old water-mill.

Oh, would that the dear old mill, today,
Could seem as it did to my youthful eyes!
But Time brings changes, and sad are they
Who are strangers under their native skies:
And over my spirit there creeps a chill
As I sigh for the dear old water-mill.

PRACTICAL ETHICS.

MODEL THEATER FOR JUVENILES.

WHEN we consider the persistence with which early impressions cling to the human mind, and what tremendous power and influence these impressions exert upon the individual in after life, no parent, teacher, or community interested in the well-being of child life can afford to remain indifferent to the fearful menace to the moral and spiritual nature of the young from sense impressions received at low public places of amusement where moral evil or ugliness is vividly represented in glaring detail to the eager audience of tender age.

That such places as the so-called "moving-picture theaters" which make merchandise of scenes inimical to the wholesome moral development and esthetic culture of children should be allowed to flourish in our midst, and to sow seeds of vice and crime in the all too susceptible soil of child mentality—is a sad reflection upon the degree of care and vigilance with which we guard the educational interests of our coming citizens.

For, "Education is an unbroken unity, extending from early childhood to maturity." Hence, in order to furnish youth the vital elements of human culture; in order to provide effective educative influence by means of dramatic representations of life, it becomes the duty of the promoters of civic virtue, of the champions of artistic taste, and of all lovers of children who long to preserve childhood sweet and uncorrupted, to give the child an ample opportunity for perceiving and becoming duly impressed with what is elevating, true, beautiful and good, in morality and art. Children are natural mimics. They have a strong dramatic instinct and a keen relish for the grotesque. Thus they are easy victims to morbid ideas of life, and are readily impressed with erroneous or perverted views of human relations. Any intensification, therefore, of their naturally exaggerated powers of imagination, and undue appeal to the sensual nature will cause serious mental and moral disorders usually manifested in abnormal desires or criminal tendencies. However, men who sacrifice conscience to commercialism, recognizing the "market value" of the lowest type of "theater"—heedless of the moral and spiritual ruin which it carries in its wake—proceed to feed their poisoned pabulum to the greedy appetite of innocent children, many of which strongly imitative spectators return from the "moving-picture show" or other low theatrical spectacles in which sensational scenes of villainy, treachery and cupidity predominate, as embryo murderers, thieves, burglars, or pickpockets.

The dramatic reproduction of life appeals to the latent ingenuity of the child. The active illustration of character, incident and achievement, arouses a desire for self-expression which in itself is good; but it depends almost altogether upon the nature of the stimulus whether that expression shall be for good or for evil.

Thus realizing the educational importance of dramatic art, and the need of a public place for entertainment of children where at the same time valid opportunities shall be offered for storing up wholesome sense impressions that may lay the foundation for their mental, moral, and spiritual equipment in future life—why should we not in this beautiful Southland city, which is to be distinguished as the Pacific's center of purity and loveliness, of sweetness and grace, why should not we be the first to make adequate provision for the normal satisfaction of the dramatic sense in children by establishing a model theater for juveniles? A theater that shall be worthy of the name. One in which the lasting beauties, the eternal truths, divine harmonies of nature and of art shall find expression; where the glories of language, music, color and form, may bring illumination and happiness to the infant souls of future men and women.

What better field for the beginning of ethical and esthetical culture, than the stage of a juvenile theater; the dramatic pulpit and platform where life may be sanely and artistically represented by means of carefully-selected stories in action; where virtue will be seen in strong contrast to vice; where the highest attributes of human character will be impressively yet delicately portrayed; where the abstract ideas of wisdom, patriotism, love, loyalty to friends and family, faithfulness in private service and consecration to public duty, may be truthfully and beautifully set forth in concrete, living form, which shall be the embodiment of actual or ideal examples? The function of such a theater would be early to create and to nurture the highest ideals by which to regulate and in the light of which to estimate human conduct.

The sweet, clean, uplifting, inspiring atmosphere of a theater for our children! What a prospect of pleasure and practical return in spiritual enrichment of young lives impossible to compute in terms of cold coin. What an invaluable means for reviving interest in classical song and myth; in arousing enthusiasm for the beauties of musical and literary symbolism; what an opening wedge by which to extract the secret charm and lesson hidden in fable and folk lore of the peoples of the earth! What a luminous chance to let the great men and women of the world, ancient and modern, rise out of the dead pages of history, to pass once more as living beings before the eyes of children in all the magnificence of their strength and achievements! And this most potently educative exercise given as a faultlessly moral, and attractively artistic entertainment. Hence to dedicate a dramatic temple, or theater, to childhood, for ethical and esthetical culture, certainly ought to be a work well worthy the utmost efforts of all who are interested in propagating the permanent principles of ethics and esthetics; who are desirous of raising the popular dramatic taste to a higher level, and who are intent upon cultivating a nicer appreciation of the social value or educative influence of productions of fine art.

Queer People of Africa. By Frank G. Carpenter.

AMONG THE MASAI.

IN GREAT RIFT VALLEY IN HEART OF BRITISH EAST AFRICA.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NAIVASHA (British East Africa.)—In the heart of the East African Highlands, as far south of the Mediterranean Sea as New York is distant from Denver, and as far west of the Indian Ocean as Pittsburgh is west of the Atlantic, I am writing this letter for my American readers. I am in the Great Rift Valley, a mighty trough, which runs almost north and south through this part of the continent. It begins at the Zambesi, and traces of it are still to be found in Palestine. It is supposed to be formed by the earth half folding up after a mighty volcanic eruption, which left the craters of Kilimanjaro, Kenia and Elgon, mouthing the clouds at altitudes of from 14,000 to 20,000 feet.

This great valley narrows and widens, it rises and falls, and it has many great lakes. Broadly speaking, all the great lakes of East Africa are in it or in its spurs. North of here are Lakes Baringo and Rudolf, and still farther north in Abyssinia is Lake Tsana, the source of the Blue Nile. As I write I am looking out on Lake Naivasha, a beautiful sheet of blue water over which white cranes are flying. I can see zebras and antelopes feeding not far from the water; and with my glass can watch the ugly black head of three hippopotami, bobbing up and down like giant fishing corks upon the surface. The shores here are swampy, and are lined with masses of reeds. Just back of them the ground rises into rich pastures, which are protected from sportsmen by the reservations allotted to the Uganda Railway and fairly swarm with big game.

The weather here is delightful. We are so near the equator that one can almost straddle it, but the altitude is such that blankets are needed at night, and it is never excessively hot during the day. Naivasha is a little higher in the air than the top of Mount Washington, and the climate of the whole Rift Valley is said to be suited for white men. This matter is being tested by settlers. Large tracts of land have been taken up in different places, not far from the railroad, and there are many English who are going into stock raising. Right near the lake the government of British East Africa has started an experimental farm and there are large ranches in the immediate vicinity. There are no tsetse flies here, and the zebras, which one sees by the hundreds in almost any ride over the valley, are an evidence that horses will thrive. There are also many ostriches, and in time we may have ostrich farming here as they have in South Africa. The average height of the valley is something like 6000 feet, and the grass is said to be luxuriant everywhere.

The Land of the Masai.

This is one of the strongholds of the Masai race, who have always been noted as warriors and stock raisers. I see them about Naivasha, and not a few still carry spears and shields. They have many little towns near by, and their settlements are scattered throughout the Rift Valley. They live in huts about four feet high, six feet wide and nine feet long. The huts look like great bake ovens. They are made of branches, woven together and plastered with mud. When it rains, skins are laid over the roofs to protect them. The houses are usually built in a circle about an inclosure, in which the cattle are kept at night. The sheep and goats are allowed to run in and out the houses. Some of the towns have fences of thorns around them to keep out the wild beasts.

These Masai are a fierce-looking people. The men are tall and straight, and they walk as though they owned the earth. When they have their war paint on, they use a decoration of ostrich feathers which surrounds their faces, and is supposed to carry terror to the souls of their enemies. The men are usually bare to the waist, and not infrequently have a bullock hide wrapped around them.

Masai Women.

I wish I could show you some of the Masai women. They are as vain as peacocks and are loaded with jewelry. Some of them have great rings of brass wire coiled around the neck in concentric circles, wire after wire being used until the whole extends out as far as the shoulders. They have brass wire woven about their arms from the wrists to the elbows, and from the elbows to the shoulders, and also great coils of similar wire fastened by strings to the lobes of their ears. Aside from this they wear but little. A cloth wrapped around the body and falling to the knees or below them being about their only clothing. Sometimes this cloth is fastened over the shoulders, sometimes under the arms, and sometimes about the waist, leaving the breasts bare.

These Masai are by no means pure negroes. They belong to the Bantu race, and their skins are dark brown. Their noses are often straight and their lips not very thick. As to their hair, I can't tell you whether it is woolly or not. The women shave it close to the scalp, using razors of iron or glass, and they polish their heads with grease so that they fairly shine in the sun. I understand they pull out the hair from all parts of their bodies, and that even the babies are shaved. Many of the men carry about tweezers of iron to pull the hairs from their chins, cheeks and nostrils, and they keep themselves shaved until they are old enough to be warriors. This comes along about the time they reach manhood. They then let the hair of their heads grow and plait it into pigtails. A common way of wearing these pigtails is down over the forehead. It is often soaked with oil and red clay in connection with a similar anointing of the rest of the body. The warrior often wears a lion's head and mane in addition to the circle of ostrich feathers about the face. His arms are a sword and a club. He has a spear with a very long blade and an oval shield bearing figures which indicate his clan.

Queer Customs of Marriage.

These people buy their wives. Girls are looked upon as merchantable commodities, and are paid for in goats and cattle. After the cattle are handed over, the girl goes to her husband, and she may not come back to her father's house alone thereafter, but must always have her husband with her. A Masai can have as many wives as he can pay for, and if he is rich he has a hut for each one. If not he may keep two or three in one hut. The first wife is always considered the chief wife, posed to boss the establishment, although the sometimes supersedes her.

Such marriages, however, are not place until the Masai becomes an elder—that he reaches the age of about 27 or 30. This is warrior days are over and he is ready to settle it were. The warriors and the young girls of live together up to that time in a separate apart from the rest of the people.

In order to marry, a warrior has to ask the elders of the tribe. If this is given he buys his wife, and if she is a fine-looking cost him two cows, two bullocks, two sheep goatskins. This money goes to the nearest the woman he has selected, who may lower he will. Divorces may be had for laziness and per on the part of the wife; and in such of the marriage fee is sometimes returned.
not marry again. If her husband dies the

The Old Women Do the Work.

As far as I can learn, these Masai girls snap. They are required to do nothing until married. Before that they play with the spending their time in dancing and singing about. The unmarried girl often does not cooking. This condition continues for a long marriage, and up until all the babies of the women. They collect the firewood. They mud houses and gather the cow manure with walls are smeared. When the villages are

A Nation of Stock Raisers.

These Masai do no farming. They are stock raisers and own herds of cattle, lk With Sidney L. Hinde.

e most of my information about these Masai comes Capt. Sidney Langford Hinde, the famous explorer lion hunter. He is now sub-commissioner of this y, and I met him at Mombasa on my way here. Hinde was born in Canada, not far from Niagara He received an excellent medical education in any and England, but began his life as a captain in Belgian colonial service. During his stay there he red the upper Lualaba and other rivers, and wrote k entitled "The Fall of the Congo Arabs." About ears or so ago he came over into British East Africa ook part in the subjugation of this country for the sh. He lived with the Masai and other natives, and a study of them. When I met him he was acting vernor of British East Africa, in the absence of the and his home was one of the official residences, utiful cottage outside Mombasa on the rocks overg the Indian Ocean. The house is decorated with rophies secured by Mr. Hinde and his wife during stay in Africa. Upon the floors are the skins of and leopards, on the walls are the heads of giraffes, pe, gnu and of other big game, and there are napears and weapons of every kind standing about. e number of the skins are from animals shot by Hinde. She has herself killed several lions, no end telopes and zebras, and one huge rhinoceros.

y talk with Mr. Hinde, he told me much about the saying that they were now quiet and are becomemi-civilized. They are paying the annual hut of about three rupees each, to the government. rupees means $1 American. It seems but little unremembers that it takes a native about a month n that much, when it becomes a great deal.

Mount Kenia.

reat part of Mr. Hinde's work has been near Kenia, in a country which he says is phenomerich. He tells me that the Uganda Railway goes h some of the poorest land in British East Africa, at the Kenia territory has great possibilities. He s that the railroad which is now to be built from i to Fort Hall, under the shadow of Mount Kenia, y from the start, and that Kenia will eventually ered with rich farms. Said he:

en Mrs. Hinde and I first came into the province untry was in the same condition it had been for We found that it contained about a million people, ved in little villages, each containing about ten r so. There were no great chiefs. Each village dependent and almost constantly at war with the oring villages. The citizens of one settlement othing of those of the other settlements about. A ared not venture more than ten miles from his and he had little knowledge of the country outside dius. There were no roads whatever excepting which wound this way and that over the land. ly meeting places were at the markets, which ld at certain fixed points on certain days of the r month. It is a rule throughout Africa that ward fighting must be suspended on market days, one dares bring arms to a market or fight there. hould engage in fighting and be killed, his relaannot claim blood money.

oads Made by the British.

n we took possession of the Kenia province," inde went on, "we had to fight our way in. As we had subdued the people we made them work ng roads as a penalty for their insurrection. We ed all the villages by roadways and gave each much to take care of. As a result we now have province alone 400 miles of good wagon roads, n feet in width. We have also made it the law ery road shall be considered as having all the of a market place. This means that no native ault another while walking upon them, and that s must be buried when traveling over the roads. f these roads connect villages which were fort war with each other, and the result is that they ecome peaceful and that the citizens can now safely from one town to another. They are hanging their natures, and are going through a of travel-education. As I have already said five o they never left home. Now thousands of them ver our roads down to the seacoast, and we have ng like 1800 natives of Kenia here at Mombasa."

a Civilization.

remarks of Capt. Hinde show how John Bull is y evolving a civilization in these African wilds. ai are about the most intelligent of the natives, e are millions about here who are much farther n the scale of barbarism than they. As I shall n other letters, some go absolutely naked, and re still as far back in the arts of civilization as e people of the stone and iron ages. It is only a rs since slavery was common and cannibalism ore or less carried on. Then justice was unand life of no account.

ritish are now gradually changing all these con. The Masai now knows that he dares not ass neighbor, and he is gradually becoming a deen. Both he and his fellows of other tribes are ng to understand the value of labor. The Masai t dig, but they are paid for herding stock, and d the other tribes are doing actual work on the nd on the railroad. They are beginning to have and as these increase they will work to supply Many of those who formerly went naked now ore or less clothing. Cotton goods are becoming , and, strange to say, the American white cotton sheeting brings the highest of prices among the natives. It outsells the Indian and English goods, and in some places it even passes for money. Another article from America that is in great demand here is coal oil. The natives buy it to light their huts, and the big chiefs almost universally own one or more kerosene lamps. Other foreign articles much desired are umbrellas, knives and hardware of various kinds. A system of East Indian stores is going up throughout the country to supply the natives. The Hindoo traders carry their goods everywhere, and in years to come a new people will take the places of the savages of the past.

As it is now, the missionaries are doing considerable both here and in the countries about the great lakes. The most of such work is now in the hands of the English, but at Kijabe, within a few miles of Lake Naivasha, there is an industrial mission school run by American Quakers, and that same denomination has another industrial settlement in the Kavirondo country, near Lake Victoria.

The Kentucky Teacher.

A TALE OF OLD-TIME SCHOOL LIFE IN WISCONSIN.

By a Special Contributor.

BEFORE the advent of the Yankee school teacher, Wisconsin drew upon the South for her educators, just as she did upon New Orleans for her molasses. Everything good, every useful commodity, came up the Mississippi River, and our lumber, grain, live stock and lead went down in steamboats, many of which were grander and more palatial than the Pullman cars of today.

Greater attention was paid to manners in those days. The influence of the age of Louis XIV was strong in all the Southern States. The pleasing exterior, good clothes and fine manners, were worth more to a young man than book learning, and to the young ladies, of course, they were indispensable. Indeed, women had not then been thought of as possible school teachers. Kentucky was the border State that supplied most of our orators and teachers. Most of the learned counsellors who afterward became judges were teachers of public and private schools and tutors in our best families before they were "called to the bar."

These gentlemen were all statesmen, but they were not all scholars. There were some, even among the most envied beaux of the blue-grass region, who didn't know enough to teach school. Among these was Allan Quincy of the Little Grant School District. He was a distinguished-looking individual. He was portly and yet tall enough to make a graceful bow. He was courtly in his manners and agreeable in conversation. He was slightly bald, and had just enough impediment in his speech to entitle him to a comparison with Demosthenes. He was one of the Whig orators in the recent campaign which resulted in the election of Joe Mills on the Whig ticket to the office of County Superintendent of Schools. Democracy, however, was still triumphant, and the air was redolent with the smell of office, and the good Old Hickory doctrine that "to the victors belong the spoils" was unquestioned even by the Whigs.

For that reason, Allan Quincy felt that he was entitled to an office. There was a vacancy in the office of teacher in the little log schoolhouse in his district, and why shouldn't he have it? Mills was indebted to him and Squire Luce for the Little Grant vote, and, of course, he could have the job for the asking. And he did ask for it. He came up to Lancaster, the county seat of Grant county, which has the Mississippi River for its west boundary line, to be examined according to law. Mills took him upstairs to his law office; and there, to Allen's consternation, actually put questions to him about geography, grammar and arithmetic and some other plebeian things like reading, writing and spelling. After it was all over, he wounded Allan's pride by telling him that he did not know enough to teach school.

"Why, Joe," he stammered out, "what did we elect you for if we ain't any of us going to get anything?"

But the new superintendent was deaf to all entreaties. He had taken an oath to well and truly discharge the duties of his office. "No man," he said, "not even Gen. Jackson himself, can get a certificate from me if he don't know enough to teach school." From this emphatic decision there was no appeal.

But Allan Quincy was a crafty politician, and he knew where Joe Mills was weak. The weak spot of Achilles was in his heel, but Mills's was in his funny bone. His vein of humor was so great and his fund of good anecdotes so large that he had been known to become so interested in joking and story telling that he would forget to eat his dinner. He would rise from the table and follow his guests into the parlor in the firm belief that he had eaten a hearty meal.

Accordingly, Allan felt for his funny bone, and found it. "Joe," he said finally, "will you give me a certificate that I don't know enough to teach school?"

Mills yielded at once to the seductive idea. He would rather lose a case in court any time than an opportunity to tell a good story, or to perpetrate a good joke on the opposing counsel.

So he took one of his letter heads that read, "J. T. Mills, Attorney at Law and County Superintendent of Schools," and under the date of August 6, 1836, he wrote, in a large, plain hand:

"This is to certify that the bearer, Mr. Allan Quincy of Little Grant, don't know enough to teach school," and signed his name to it.

"I'm very much obleeged, Your Honah," said Mr. Quincy, as he made a stately bow and passed through the office door. The next day, Allan walked over to the farmhouse of Squire Luce. He was the chairman of the school board, and well known to be Allan Quincy's friend. It was one of the "dog days" of the short, hot summers of the upper Mississippi Valley, and the old squire was seated under a big sugar-maple tree, on a rough oak bench made with his own hands with the familiar tools of those days, the adz and drawing knife. He was trying to keep cool, and did not want to be bothered by any weighty matter that pertained to the "skule deestrict." Most of all, he disliked to be consulted about written documents of any kind; and, as for books and newspapers, he had no use at all for them, because he could neither read nor write.

When, therefore, after a tiresome preface, Mr. Quincy finally got down to the object of his visit and had made a formal application for the school, the squire became interested enough to inquire: "Have you seen Joe Mills and got a certificate?" "Oh, yeth," said Allan, "I thaw His Honah, an' he give me a long and thorough examination, an' at the end of it he give me thith thertificate."

The squire looked at it suspiciously. He knew Mills's letter heads and signature very well, because Mills was his lawyer, and he had seen the familiar letter paper and handwriting often; and yet, he was surprised. He knew Mills's unswerving integrity and keen sense of duty; and he also knew that Allan came from the same place in Kentucky that he did, and that neither of them had ever been to school a day in his life.

"Well, Allan," he finally said, after finishing his inspection of the certificate and using it to brush away the flies, "politics is a great thing, ain't they? I guess Joe knows his friends. You can have the school without calling on the other members of the board. I'll fix that. Guess I'm still boss down here, ain't I? You know the wages is $15 a month, and board around. Guess you better take the first week with me and the next guess Patrick Dillon will take you, and so on. You have to begin the first Monday in September, Allan, and you better look a little out for some of them big boys."

Promptly to the day and hour the new teacher appeared. He wore a long blue coat, "swallow-tailed," with brass buttons somewhat in the military style of those days, and altogether looked as pompous as a drum major. The big boys and the little boys also came, but very few girls. The big boys came to bully and "lick" the teacher, and the little boys came to see the fun. The art of teaching in those days consisted in forcing book learning into the child by hypodermic injection. The rod was not spared. The big boy, if he was a good fighter, spoiled the teacher, and the latter in turn spoiled the little boy. Hostilities began the first day of the term and usually lasted until one side or the other was exhausted. Sometimes the war ended with the first battle, and that was the case with Allan Quincy. The boys soon found out that their new teacher, notwithstanding his learned looks, did not know enough to teach school. But he came from Kentucky, and he carried a big stick, and "wasn't afraid of Andy Jackson himself," as he was often heard to say.

The boys must resort to stratagem to outwit and overcome so formidable an antagonist. But they were equal to the occasion. The log schoolhouse was built upon a rock foundation, and the rough oak floor, raised about two feet from the ground, was full of cracks.

A manhole was left in the rock foundation, and it was through this hole the conspirators carried wet and dry autumn leaves enough to make a good smudge fire. At the auspicious moment the smoke came pouring through the cracks of the floor, and the cry of fire was raised.

Allan Quincy was no coward. If he didn't know enough to teach school, he did know enough to put out a fire. He rushed from the platform out of the door and under the house, followed by all the boys, yelling "Fire!" His heels had no sooner disappeared through the hole in the wall than the boys closed it with a big boulder, fortified it with a mound of stones and adjourned the school sine die. Quincy was called a "smoked Yankee" from that day.

Squire Luce was in a towering rage when he heard of it. He rode immediately to town and confronted Superintendant Mills. Flourishing the certificate in his face, he upbraided him for his neglect of duty, told him what had happened, and concluded by saying: "Now Allan says he is going to sue the district for his salary and for damages. But you're to blame for all this, and you've got to defend us; and you've got to foot the bill for sending us such a darned fool to teach our school."

Mills took the certificate with a merry twinkle in his eye and read it to the squire aloud, slowly and distinctly. "Does it say that, Joe?" asked the squire in a faint voice. "Honor bright, now, as a Kentuckian and a gentleman, does it read that way?" Mills laughed and gave him his word of honor, and the mortified old squire promised to settle with Allan Quincy if he would hush the matter up. Mills and Luce and Quincy have long since passed away to that country where big boys cease from troubling, and where only a certificate of good moral character is required. Only one of the small boys is now left behind to tell the tale.

CLAY DILLON.

MILES AND MILES.

"Will we never drop miles for kilometers?" said a mathematician. "Miles are very confusing. A kilometer, the world over, is a kilometer, but a mile in America is 1760 yards, while in Sweden it is 11,703 yards, and in China it is 629 yards.

"The Bohemians go in for a long mile. So do the Danes, the Hungarians, the Poles, the Swiss. If you walk three miles a day among those people, you have done pretty well; you have covered about fifteen of your own miles.

"There are, in fact, thirty-seven kinds of miles. It would take eighteen of the shortest to equal one of the longest. The rest vary in size between those two extremes. Doesn't the world, then, need one measure the kilo, that it may use without confusion? Consider, A train that goes 168 miles an hour in China would go only nine miles an hour in Sweden."

Co-operative Clerks.

NOVEL STORE-KEEPING ENTERPRISE AT WASHINGTON.

By a Special Contributor.

THE department clerks' new coöperative store, with all its novel ins and outs, was exhibited and explained to me by one of the board of directors, who ushered me through on a personally-conducted tour.

Anybody working for Uncle Sam either in the government departments, civil and bellicose, or in the offices of the local District of Columbia government will have returned to him every three months 90 per cent. of the net profits from his purchases at this interesting mart, provided he pays an admission fee of 25 cents to and buys $10 worth of stock in the enterprising guild of government employés which has launched this scheme. No member of this guild—whether officer or organizer—can enjoy through the scheme one jot more advantage than is given to the humblest of his fellow-members. All of Uncle Sam's employés are thus enabled to buy the "Guild Corner" was the sign which a painter was about to place over the store when the director ushered me in. The building stands on the northeast corner of Ninth and G streets, just across the streets from the Patent Office. The main doorway leads into a large, well-lighted space, devoted to groceries, provisions, cigars and confectionery. Further on is a modern meat market, with every piece of furniture and fixtures as clean as a whistle. In fact, cleanliness cries out from one at every corner and every clerk looks happy.

Novel Store Features.

The manager is an Englishman who has had nineteen years' experience in some of the largest coöperative enterprises in his mother country, where he commenced his career as an apprentice in one of the big coöperative stores of Derbyshire. All purchases are weighed on computing scales which show the exact weight to the purchaser, also the exact price scored upon an indicator graduated in so many cents per pound. Upon the wall of the main salesroom is spread a map of the city and suburbs, showing each delivery district and the times of distribution therein. Mail-order cards are distributed among customers, and each deliveryman carries a stock of "complaint cards" which patrons are requested to fill necessities of life from themselves and share proportionately in the profits of the business. Anybody on earth can buy at the new coöperative store, but only the government employé can share the earnings. His guild "membership card" entitles him to coal at a reduced rate, if bought from certain dealers; also to a liberal discount on other purchases made outside. This feature, along with the others promoted by the guild, will grow, if the success of similar enterprises of the great coöperative stores maintained by the British government employés is any criterion. To members of the British guilds, physicians, surgeons, dentists and dealers in many of the necessities of life allow generous discounts.

Small Clerk and Big Official Side by Side.

Small government clerks sit side by side with bureau chiefs on the board of directors of the new Departmental Coöperation Guild, whose democracy is consistently American. The president is a Treasury clerk, and under him sit at the board table such officials as the chief of the bureau of animal industry and the deputy commissioner of fisheries. All stockholders have an equal vote, regardless of shares owned. The negro charwoman who buys one share on the dollar-per-month installment plan has as much say as to how business shall be run as might the millionaire cabinet head, owning a big block of certificates. The guild will employ no member of the family or immediate relation of any officer or director, and no one connected with any business similar to that of any department of the coöperative store can become a director.

out and return in cases of error. This placard hangs on the store wall:

"To sell by honest weight and measure the various grades of goods and at reasonable prices for a fair profit."

All sales are made at the average market price. There is no cutting.

Each member has a number, which he shows on his card of membership when he makes a purchase. The cash registers record this number, both on the check handed back to him and on that retained. The member keeping his checks can easily estimate the exact amount of his trade for each rebate period. Daily the duplicate checks are taken from the cash registers and the bookkeeper itemizes the amounts of purchases under each member's number. At the end of each quarter the auditor—the only salaried officer of the guild—will make a general inventory and estimate the net profits; also the ratio which each member's profit bears to his own purchases. Non-members' checks bear ciphers, instead of numbers, and are entered in a general ledger, as in ordinary trade. Forty per cent. of the customers to date have been non-members.

Any one can obtain monthly credit at the coöperative store if he deposit as security as many shares as he holds in excess of one, to cover the amount of credit. Thus, if a member hold $50 worth of stock he can do a credit business of $40 per month; or if he hold $100 worth he can enjoy $90 credit.

The Hotel Clerk.

His Conversation This Week Is About the Bohemian Life.

By a Special Contributor.

"IF you wanter sneeze, w'y don't you sneeze?" said the House Detective of the Hotel St. Reckless to the Hotel Clerk. "You make me nervous standin' there with your face all puckered up."

"I know," said the Hotel Clerk. "You see me as I am now, with my nose looking as if she was about to jibe and come about, and you dope it out that I've got one of those double-seated, self-feeding, runabout colds-in-the-head that have been so justly popular the past winter. But not so, Larry; not so. If I was to sneeze at this writing, it would lack practically all of the scenic effects which are required to make a success of a sneeze. It wouldn't be one of those realistic sneezes such as you'd find in a Belasco production. The trouble with me, is, Larry, I've got the scent of punk sticks up my nostrils."

"I'm plenty wise to that punk stick thing," said the House Detective. "A punk stick is somethin' that burns like a way-station cigar and smells like a defective flue in a Chinese laundry, ain't it?"

"The late Noah Webster couldn't have expressed it more neatly, and Noah was the unabridged Kid," said the Hotel Clerk. "A punk stick is all that you have called it, and then some. My nose thinks somebody's been burning rags back of my tonsils."

"How come you to be w'ere they wuz touchin' off punk sticks?" inquired the House Detective. "I thought nobody but strangers in town ever went to them phony joss-houses down in Chinytown."

"I've been to a studio tea," explained the Hotel Clerk.

"A studio which?" asked the House Detective.

"A studio tea," repeated the Hotel Clerk. "I've been circulating, Larry, among the real Bohemians—the kind that come from away up in the head waters of Bohemia Creek. Yessir, I've been to an intellectual orgy of those devilish artistic souls, our care-free literary giants who think so much of local color that they wear it in their collars. It's a great game."

"How'd you butt in?" said the House Detective.

"I was invited," said the Hotel Clerk. "This hotel is the home of so many bookmakers and others who follow a literary life that I suppose they thought I belonged. So I got an invitation written out in red chalk on a piece of plank. Everybody at the tea said it was one of the most artistic and Bohemian ideas that was ever thought up.

"It certainly was a lovely affair. It was up seven flights of stairs in a real studio. A real studio, Larry, is an attic that has a skylight in it, instead of windows. No true Bohemian will live in an attic that has common debasing windows in it. It would lower him in the estimation of the whole Boheming profession.

"At the door I was ushered in by a real East Indian, belonging to one of the most prominent Afro-American families in Yazoo City, Miss. This quaint Easter figure was all dressed up like a sore thumb in a turban about the size of a wash tub and somebody's extra night shirt with a crimson sash around the waist. I had a cup of genuine Russian tea that tasted like a throat gargle, and a slice of rye bread that appeared to be suffering from a mild outbreak of blackheads on the inner side. That's what I thought was the matter with it at first, but later I found out it was a caviar sandwich. There was also a most fascinating oriental cosy corner—a crippled sofa, a Chinese back-scratcher and two paper fans tacked on the wall, and a set of those Spaghetti Italiana portieres. Over all was the haunting odor of many punk sticks all burning at once. They had the smell of camphor balls beaten to a fringe. I'll bet you there's not a live moth left in that studio, Larry."

"Who wuz there?" asked the House Detective. "Anybody I know?"

"No, I guess not," said the Hotel Clerk. "But there was a large attendance of leaders of the inner literary set. The punch bowl was presided over by a tall, willowy young enu who's going to break into emotional drama some day when she can catch emotional drama with its guard down. There was a playwright who wrote a play that Charley Frohman almost accepted, and several novelists who haven't been able to find a suitable publisher yet, and just any number of artists who paint for art's sake alone.

"I met one dashing debonair Bohemian who really gets his stuff into print. He sends an article for the store where he works every month for a cloak and ladies' suiting journal. Yet for all that, he was not unduly proud, but mingled freely with the other guests, dropping here an epigram, there a flake of dandruff, and here again an original saying that I hadn't heard for years, and all right out of his own head.

"Oh, yes, and there was a talented vocalist who stood up alongside the piano and gave off a large volume of sound. Sometimes it seemed to me he was imitating a coon dog on a warm trail, and sometimes he sounded like a trained seal that's been cheated out of its share of the fish. But one of the regular Bohemians told me he was singing a folk song in his native tongue. The regular Bohemian said it was great, but as for me, the next time I'm going to have any of that brand of tongue, I'd like for it to be potted."

"I'll bet New York is the only town in the country where they pull off fool stunts like the one you've just been to," said the House Detective.

"By no means," said the Hotel Clerk. "It's a bum community indeed these times that hasn't got a group of free, untrammeled souls that love to assemble at the house of some kindred spirit and drink bottled beer and ask each other if they've read 'Three Weeks' yet. All you need for a starter is a queen-mother of the local ostrich herd who is reliably reported to have smoked a cigarette nearly all the way down once and a rollicking young assistant organist who wears long hair and an Elbert Hubbard necktie; and you've got the start for a little Bohemian circle right there.

"But in New York more people work at the trade, and it pays better here than anywhere else. It's a funny thing, Larry, if a man works in a drug store or a pie foundry or any other mere sordid commercial establishment and acquired a breath like a cellarette at night and a subway entrance in the morning, and if he begins to look as if he dressed up while lying down, and if he forgets to wash his neck and if he neglects his dandruff cure until his coat collar looks like a Christmas card, we diagnose it as a case of clandestine pickles and give him the disciplinary hook. But if he once almost got a poem printed in a magazine or if he's one of those coming playwrights that missed his train, we know he does these things because he's a genuine Bohemian, and we have him up to dinner at the flat and buy drinks for him and point him out to our friends as one of those eccentric geniuses who refuse to be bored by the sordid conversations of society, when all the time he really needs a bath."

"Well, you can put down a small bet that you won't never ketch me askin' none of 'em up to my flat to dinner, or nothin' else, and the money's as good as won," said the House Detective.

"Don't be too severe, Larry," said the Hotel Clerk. "The time may be near at hand when we'll be owing a national debt of gratitude to the Bohemians of our country."

"You've got to show me," said the House Detective.

"I will," said the Hotel Clerk. "I don't know whether you've heard about it or not, but there's going to be some international boat races over in England this year. In bygone years it has been the custom to get together an American crew of longshoremen and paper hangers and sardine fishermen, and they'd go over to England, and they'd get in a rowing shell and spit on their hands and start in to rowing with the same abandon which they'd employ in eating pie with their knives, and there'd be nothing to it.

"So this year the representatives of Perfidious Albumen, as the poet has so graphically put it, promulgated a rule that nobody could row in the Henley races that ever worked for a living or engaged in a vulgar trade or kept a shop.

"So I'm thinking, Larry, that we might get together a crew of true Bohemians and enter 'em. They're eligible, under the new rules, if anybody is, and they ought to win from the Britishers easy enough if——"

AN EASY WAY TO REMEMBER DATES.

The following lines, committed to memory, give an easy method of stating offhand the day of the week of any date in 1908:

Just a mother's arms, my jocund Jean;
A spell o'er Nature's dream.

The number of letters in each word represents the date of the first Saturday in the particular month to which it corresponds; thus, "Just," for January, has four letters, because the first Saturday in January is the fourth of that month; "a," representing February, has one letter, as the first Saturday in February is the first day of that month; and so on through all the twelve months.

Each word of the twelve, excepting the first "a," begins with the same letter as the month it represents. Thus, "Just" begins with "J" because January begins with "J;" "mother's" begins with "m" because March begins with "M;" and so on all through, with the exception of "a' for February.

Having obtained the dates of the first Saturdays, the date of every other Saturday in the month is got by the addition of the necessary number of sevens, from which it is but a step to any intermediate day. For example, to know the day on which Christmas Day falls this year, "dream,' standing for December, has five letters, so the first Saturday in December is the 5th of that month; the second Saturday is the 12th; the third the 19th; the 25th, being six days more, gives Friday, six days on from Saturday.—[Tit-Bits.

GENERALS IN THE RANKS.

At a recent inspection of the First Regiment of Infantry Guards at Potsdam, His Majesty conducted an examination of the recruits in mythology, history, and general knowledge, and found the replies most unsatisfactory.

At the conclusion of the examination the Emperor picked out a number of generals, and placed them in the ranks among the common soldiers. The recruits were then ordered to point out which were generals, which lieutenant-generals, which major-generals, and which brigadier-generals. All the recruits answered these purely military questions with perfect exactitude, and the Emperor's anger was somewhat appeased.—[London Express.

HUMAN TOBOGGAN.

Two officers who were hunting wolves on the Dry Mountain, in Central Servia, last week, had a remarkable experience, in consequence of losing their way in a fog.

After wandering for fourteen hours one of them lay down in the snow and speedily became unconscious. His comrade, after trying vainly to rouse him, bound him with cords, placed him in a sitting position, and then rolled him down the mountain.

He glided down the slope at terrific speed and reached the bottom safely, being found an hour later in an exhausted condition by a peasant.

The officer who was used as a human toboggan is now in hospital, being treated for the lacerations he received in bumping over the rocks during his descent. His companion is unhurt, and has resumed his military duties at Nish—[London Express.

At Magdalena Bay.

LIFE AS IT IS LIVED THERE BY THE SAILORS AND NATIVES.

By a Special Contributor.

AN officer of the Wisconsin who was recently requested by letter to write, as briefly as possible, of the things which were of most interest about Magdalena Bay, replied thus:

Sharks, Seals,
Snakes,
and.

In a postscript he added:

Target-practice,
Terrapin.

In a more voluminous sub-postscript he told how the sharks, seals, snakes and sand were all represented at one and the same place on the beach one morning, and how on the afternoon of the same day the target practice was responsible for terrapin for dinner. The first happened this way: A year or two ago some of the Indians or Chinamen who fish along the beach caught a twelve-foot man-eater that had swallowed a seal, and the skeleton of the former inclosing that of the latter has been an object of interest to all who visit the part of the beach where they repose bleaching in the sand. A few months ago when several officers from the Wisconsin landed to have a look at the popular curio, a large rattler was scared up near by, which, on being fired on, promptly turned tail and retreated, first inside the skeleton of the shark, and finally into the innermost holy of holies, the bony framework of the swallowed seal. As the use of a stick or revolver might have involved the destruction of the interesting curio, the truly proverbial subtility of the serpent saved its life.

The rattlesnake of the region adjacent to Magdalena Bay is of a species peculiar to that district alone, and because the Indians of the country know of no antidote for its bite, it is called "El Muerto Blanco," "The White Death." As a matter of fact, it is neither white, nor yet deadly poisonous. The "blanco" in the name arises probably from the white rings which band the tail, a marking possessed by no other species of the rattlesnake family. The Indians usually die from the bite because they have no better antidote than mescal, which liquor, though intensely fiery in taste, is of less value than whisky in counteracting the effect of snake-bite.

That the bite of "El Muerto Blanco" is not deadly if properly treated is shown by the case of a sailor of the Wisconsin who was bitten on the occasion of the last visit of that battleship to Magdalena Bay. The man was bitten on the bare ankle while walking in the salt grass at the edge of the beach. His companions had scattered inland at the time, and so certain were the two Indians who witnessed the accident that the case was hopeless that it was only with the greatest difficulty that he induced them to take him off to the ship in their "balsa" or canoe. It was fully an hour and a half after he was bitten that the fellow clambered up the side of the battleship, by which time the ankle was enormously swollen and almost black in color; yet immediate improvement followed the first injection of permanganate of potassium, and he was able to be on duty the following day.

The conjunction of terrapin and target practice befell like this: The crew of the big forward turret guns were just firing a final round at a floating target, when it chanced that a school of turtle came paddling lazily along the starboard bow just in time to get the full force of the concussion. A dozen or more of them, stunned by the shock, forthwith rolled over on their backs and floated in against the armor belt at the water line, where they were intercepted and hauled aboard with boat hooks.

Many Big Turtles.

The turtles of the bay grow to a great size, and are only less numerous than the sharks. The green fat which lies along the lower shell is one of the greatest delicacies known to epicures, while the rest of the meat, though tough, works up into most delicious soup. They are sometimes killed while in the water by shooting, but the popular method of capture is to rush them on the beach and turn them over before they can reach the bay. I recently heard, in the wardroom of the West Virginia, an amusing account by one of the officers of that cruiser of his experience with a big turtle which he captured in one of the little lagoons that run off from the main bay.

"I discovered him resting well back from the water on a bed of mud at a bend of the lagoon," said the young ensign; "and began pulling in at once to look him over with the idea of preëmpting him for food. He divined my purpose before I reached the bank, and promptly came floundering around and headed for the water. He had but three feet to go to my thirty, but his flippers were not made for walking, and I was already under fine headway. We reached the edge together and the flat nose of my scow came squarely against the end of his shell—he had drawn in his head at the mom pact—with a sharp jolt. The mud behind hi little resistance, the surprised case of ca shoved several feet, while the boat, whose still considerable, followed hard upon him.

"I, of course, went over backward, but w feet in an instant and up in the bow ready My first step was to crack the blade of one oars over the nose he showed for an instant, deavor to make him draw in and stop backing I got out on his back and wove my painter forth among his hind flippers; after which back into the boat, pushed off with a pole an Turty right along with me. morning plunge overside regularly enjoyed by the and men in many of the tropical ports is quite the question in the bay. There is, to be sure, no of any one in the navy having been attacked hark in these waters, a fact not so remarkable t is also learned that there is no record of any ving exposed himself. The closest call, perhaps, at of a well-known lieutenant-commander who dive into the bathing pen at the same time that all inclosure was occupied by a fourteen-foot ter. The bathing pen is a thirty-by-thirty railed- e on the shore of the bay that was built with nsible purpose, not of keeping sharks in, but of them out. An unusually high spring tide, how- ooded the top rail to a depth of a couple of feet , and during the period of submergence the big n some manner nosed his way in and was left when the water subsided. The water of the pen rky from the action of the tide on the bottom, re was nothing in its dull translucence to awaken n in the minds of the half-dozen officers who, dusty from a twenty-mile ride into the interior, eparing for a dip. The commander in question— noted for his nervous haste of doing things— ahead of the others in stripping for his plunge, nstance which was entirely responsible for his had to bear alone the shock of the discovery pen was already occupied. Yelling like a e, the frightened swimmer reached the outer at the end of a half-dozen desperate overhand clambered over the barrier, tumbled into the yond, and, wide-eyed with terror, started lung- off toward the open sea. When he was finally to the bank, it was to declare that the pen was alive with sharks, and not even after the man-eater, riddled with bullets from the re- of the officers, harpooned by some fishermen ed by some cowboys, was hauled out on the uld he be made to believe that the score or its fellows among which he imagined he had had not escaped. Inasmuch as a frightened never been known to touch so much as a raw beef, the impetuous commander was never anger of anything but heart failure and a slap om the monster's tail.

Legend.

dians of the district have a legend about a man who eloped from San Luis, fled to Magdalena were there turned, respectively, into a shark rtle, by a god, or devil, or something of the whose hands they chanced to fall. As a proof uth of this story, the Indians claim that if you sing on a moonlight night on a certain point eward side of Santa Margarita, the shark and will appear to you.

A Fisherman's Invention.

The sharks of the bay take almost any kind of bait, and it is rarely that a warship is at anchor without from one to a half-dozen lines dangling over its stern. Watching a shark line is a tedious business, but it is strictly necessary in order for the fisherman to know when the monster is hooked, as his frantic rushes, if allowed to go unchecked, are pretty sure to cause some part of the line, leader, or even some of his own anatomy to give away and result in his escape. The old scheme of tying the line around the big toe and going to sleep would probably work all right as far as rousing the fisherman is concerned, but the sequel might not leave him in a condition to give the shark the immediate attention necessary. To this end the officers and sailors have hit on an ingenious plan. Instead of taking in their lines when the dinner gong sounds, or when for any other reason they are on duty elsewhere, they run a stout piece of marlin twine from the shark line up to the steam whistle, leaving it for the man-eater himself to announce the event of his being hooked by sounding a toot.

It is regrettable to state that the inventor of this clever expedient, a surgeon on the torpedo boat X—— (I withhold the name of the craft by request) came near to losing his position as a result of his first experimental trial of this time-saving contrivance. This came about as a result of his lack of judgment in running the main line—instead of the comparatively light twine now employed for that connection—up to the whistle. The latter gave forth a brave toot in response to the jerk of the husky man-eater at the other end of the line, but the blast was in the nature of a swan song. An instant later, with a parting shriek of agony, the whole of the whistle mechanism was wrenched from the after funnel, and, carrying a string of hammocks and the binnacle stand along with it, vanished overboard, spinning like a taffrail log in the wake of the flying shark. The X—— did most of its whistling with a fog horn during the remainder of its stay in the bay.

El Centinela.

The foreshore of Magdalena Bay is generally low-lying and sandy, but the Isle of Santa Margarita, which forms a part of its southern boundary, is quite abrupt in places, and near the entrance to the big harbor breaks up into several isolated rocks of considerable height. The outermost of these, because of a rather striking profile notched into the rim it rears against the sky, is called by the Mexicans "El Centinela," "The Sentinel." The Sentinel's face is turned off to the southeast in a stony stare, and since the time last summer when it was decided to send the battleships around into the Pacific the sailors have laughingly told each other that the old boy out on the rock was watching for the coming of the fleet. This was called to the attention of a middy on one of the protected cruisers a month or so ago, on the occasion of his first visit to the bay. The youngster studied the sky-gazing profile for some moments in silence, to finally turn his back on it and break forth with: "Looking for battleships be d——d! You mutton-headed sea pigs will be saying he's looking for a fleet of submarines next. If a one of you had anything but kelp in your brain boxes you'd see by the way his nose is cocked up that he couldn't be looking for anything cruising lower than a fleet of airships."

The Indians.

The Indians of this district are of a physique considerably superior to those of the mainland of Mexico and the Colorado River Delta country, but still far inferior to the magnificent Seri of Tiburon Island, whom they resemble slightly. Unlike most of their brethren of Lower California, they live largely by hunting and fishing, and pay little attention to agricultural pursuits. Their original weapon was the bow, which they still handle with great proficiency, but in the last decade or two a number of old rifles have fallen into their hands, and upon these they now place most of their dependence in hunting. They are poor shots, but wonderful stalkers, and an Indian with ammunition never goes hungry. The main backbone range of the peninsula, the Sierra del Gigante, is not far from the coast at this latitude, and mountain sheep of splendid size are plentiful, though characteristically wild and difficult of approach. Several hunts have been organized by officers of ships visiting the bay, but so far as can be learned, no sheep have been killed. Deer and wild pig are fairly numerous in the mesquite forests of the valleys, and the flesh of both appears pretty regular on board ship, affording welcome relief from the monotony of sea fare.

The Indians fish with gaffs, harpoons, and hooks of bone and steel, usually meeting with good success, but the real fishermen of the Lower California coast are the Chinamen, or the half or quarter-caste descendants of Chinese, Indians and Mexicans. These latter are true beach combers, and make their livings by smuggling, piracy or robbery if opportunity offers, and by fishing, gathering abalone and pearling when business along their favorite lines is slack. Before the ceding of Magdalena Bay to the United States for target practice, that point was a favorite rendezvous for the worst characters of this class along the Lower California coast; since that time they have gradually shifted to points north or south where their doings will be subject to less rigorous espionage.

Their Boats.

The boats of fishermen are a compromise between a Chinese junk and a whaleboat. They are of fairly deep draught, but having no keels are not usually able to sail much closer than six points—about 65 degrees—to the wind. With a breeze from anywhere abaft the beam, however, they are very fast, often reeling off eleven and twelve knots an hour under their big lateens.

The boat most used by the Indians of this section is the "balsa," a long, slender canoe made of reeds. The reeds are bound closely together in such a manner as to leave a hollow space in the middle of a twenty-foot length of them for the canoeist, both ends being tapered off to fine points with considerable overhang. The reeds are pressed firmly together by means of a rope which is knotted over successive sections of them and drawn tight by three or four men pulling in opposite directions on it from each end. Although the inside of a new "balsa" is fairly dry, its buoyancy depends rather upon the airtight chambers in the reeds than upon the hollowness of the canoe itself. The craft is propelled by alternate strokes of the paddle on one side and then the other. The paddle employed is rather narrower than the average used in the United States, and has only one blade. The "balsa" is very narrow, and having no "outrigger," will, in the language of an officer who tried to navigate one of them, "have a list if your hair is not parted in the middle, and upset if you are cross-eyed."

As a Social Center.

A port for warships—even a target-practice station on a desert coast—without some form of social life for the officers is a thing inconceivable, and it is not for Magdalena Bay to prove the exception. The "social center" of Magdalena Bay district is San Luis, a rich and gay Mexican "poblacion" fifty miles inland. Here a number of thoroughly enjoyable balls, picnics and dinners have been given for such of the officers of the visiting ships as have been possessed of sufficient hardihood to take the long, dusty ride on horseback, or brave it out in a springless buckboard. A year or so ago, when San Luis was giving the first tentative flutters of its social wings, the haut ton of the town was not versed in the etiquette incident to naval gradation, and as a result the opening affair was brought off under rather unusual circumstances. It appears that the hospitable Don Alberto X——, the cattle king of San Luis, on the occasion of the visit of the first warships to Magdalena Bay sent over a half dozen "coches" and a troop of saddle horses to bring such guests as could be rounded up back to a big "baile" which he was arranging at his hacienda. It chanced that only about a dozen officers were able to get shore leave at the time, and as all of these elected to go by coach, the good-natured vaqueros who had the bunch of saddle horses in charge turned the use of the animals over to a lot of common sailors who had just come ashore on overnight leave to catch turtles. Finding themselves thus unexpectedly provided with transportation facilities, the jolly tars promptly called off the turtle hunt and let the fiery little mustangs have their heads for San Luis, arriving there, sore but happy, miles ahead of the slow-moving coaches.

Not Versed in Etiquette.

Now it chanced that the good Don Alberto, having spent all his life on his cattle ranch, knew nothing of the nice distinctions which differentiate the various grades of officers from each other, and all officers from the common sailor. Hence it was that when the rollicking tars, revived in spirit if not in body from a round of the San Luis "posadas," followed their horses' leads up to the stately portal of the X—— hacienda, its lord received them with open arms. The rest of the "caballeros" were coming in the coaches, explained the vaqueros; but they were "triste" fellows, and not worthy to be mentioned in the same breath with the "muchachos alegres" who had come on horseback. "Hooroar for Mexico!" broke in the tars; and "Viva los Estados Unidos—Tengo mucho gusto de conocerles, caballeros," echoed Don Alberto as he gave each of the sailors a hearty Mexican embrace and passed him on to the waiting guests.

And thus it was that the real officers, arriving travel-stained and weary a couple of hours later, threw up their hands in holy horror to see "Bill the Bosun," his stubby digits every now and then brushing against the taper fingers of his pupil, teaching the dimpling Señorita X—— to weave a "cat's cradle;" and Jack Backstraw, A.B., illustrating to a big bevy of San Luis belles with a sofa cushion how turtles were caught; and the rest of the happy tars, reclining in luxurious attitudes in "sala" and "patio," smoking perfectos, sipping "mescal" and "bocanero," and telling in animated finger language the story of their lives to little peripheries of rapt listeners. There are several versions of what followed, but the most credible one has it that the officers swallowed their pride, entered into the spirit of the fun like the gentlemen they were, and saved the feelings of good old Don Alberto.

San Luis has the reputation of being the greatest dog and cock-fighting town in Mexico, if not in the world, and as such has furnished a good deal of entertainment for the more sportily-inclined among the visiting sailors. There appears to be no legal restrictions whatever on the holding of these contests, and they may be pulled off on the street, in a back lot, or in one of the regular arenas. All classes and all ages seem to countenance and patronize the fights, and even the children of both sexes arrange little mains of their own. Where a youngster in the States would be trundling a doll or a woolly lamb or a Teddy bear, in San Luis he has his bull pup and his game cock, and these he nurses and fights and swaps in just the same spirit as an American boy plays tops and marbles. A Portrayer of Indians.

GREAT PAINTER CASTS HIS LOT WITH "VANISHING RACE."

By a Special Contributor.

IF you visit Crow Indian Reservation in winter, the chances are you will see the gleam of a sheep wagon top somewhere on the prairie. On making your way to the wagon, instead of finding the customary sheep herder, you will find an artist working vigorously away at some bit of reservation landscape, and in that way you will become acquainted with J. H. Sharp, universally conceded to be the greatest painter of Indians, besides being one of the finest landscape painters America has produced.

Mr. Sharp has been honored with some great commissions. Several years ago the United States government purchased a dozen Indian heads for Smithsonian Institution—showing how strong is the ethnological appeal of the man's work—and Mrs. Phoebe Hearst of California gave him a five-year commission to paint Indian heads and pictures for the University of California, which now has about a hundred paintings of the chiefs and leading men of various tribes. In addition, Mrs. Hearst has many of Mr. Sharp's paintings in her private collection, which is one of the finest in the United States.

Mr. Sharp's studio proper is a commodious log cabin at Crow Agency. This retreat, which is filled with Indian paintings from various reservations, and rare Indian curios collected in all parts of the West, is called "Absaroke Hut"—Absaroke being the tribal name of the Crow Indians. It is here that Mr. Sharp does the bulk of his work. He spends his winters on the Crow reservation, for the superb landscape effects, this being one of the most beautiful parts of Montana. Then, too, the Crows are probably the finest physical specimens of plains Indians and make excellent subjects for the painter, though they are very difficult to secure for posing. In this respect Mr. Sharp finds constant trouble. He visits the various reservations in rotation, and seldom does he find an Indian who is a willing subject. For fifteen years he has been working against such discouragements, and but for the fact that his fund of patience is inexhaustible, and also that his wife renders him invaluable aid, he would have abandoned his great work long ago.

"The public has no idea what a man undergoes in painting Indians," said Mr. Sharp, speaking of the difficulty of getting the red men to act as models. "It is impossible, almost, to get models for a picture like 'The Voice of the Great Spirit.' In working out such a painting one has to make separate studies, without letting the model see the picture itself. One fine, Juno-like woman I needed for the painting mentioned, and I tried for weeks to bribe her with money, presents and coaxing. I was in despair, and happened to mention my difficulty to the agent. He said: 'I'll get Julia for you.' In a short time he brought her over and she posed. When I asked the agent how he had worked the miracle, he said: 'Well, Julia wants to get married, and I told her that I'd hold up the wedding until she posed for that picture.' There is another story in connection with that very painting and the same model. Julia balked at the bare ankles. Later I got another woman for that. After much coaxing, she went over to a neighbor's tepee and returned—with one bare ankle. I had to paint it, and then she returned to the tepee, put on the moccasin and leggin and took off the others, and returned to pose for the other ankle.

"I pay all my models $2 per sitting of from two to three hours, but it is hard to get them at that. Some of them have peculiar ideas of posing. Old Slow Bull, a noted Sioux chief, was on the reservation last summer. He has a beautiful face to paint and I couldn't rest until he promised to give me a sitting. On the appointed day I waited until after noon, and was about to give it up, when another Sioux came to tell me that Slow Bull couldn't come himself, but had sent this man in his stead to do the posing. And this fellow was not paintable or interesting at all!"

Fifteen years ago Mr. Sharp started to paint Indians. Previous to that time he had been a member of the faculty of Cincinnati Art Academy for ten years and had been abroad half a dozen times for study. Despite the discouragements that met him from the start he found the work among the Indians most fascinating. He has visited all the reservations, and numbers many personal friends among the red men. Nor are the Indians slow to praise the work of this artist, who has almost become one of them. No doubt this is due to Mr. Sharp's mastery of detail, such as the funeral trappings at the grave, in "The Voice of the Great Spirit." He has caught many customs peculiar to the Indians of the older generation—customs that will soon vanish in the present process of "civilizing" the red race.

His sheep-wagon studio is always a matter of the keenest interest to the visitors that stray into Crow Agency and find the painter at work among such unique surroundings. The wagon has seen service on the sheep range, and is one of the typical vehicles used by far western herders who are often compelled to live in them for months at a stretch. It is a heavy wagon, covered with canvas top, like a prairie schooner, and containing a stove, a bed, and "all the comforts of home." The painter works in it a great deal in winter, finding it admirable for killing ground and other reflections, besides keeping the paint from freezing.

Mr. Sharp has succeeded in doing what few white men have done—getting an insight into the real home life of the Indian. His Indians are not the austere, mock-heroic types that are painted by artists who work chiefly from imagination. In reality the Indian is a fun-loving individual, enjoying his joke and his dance and his social hours even more thoroughly than the average white man. Of course he is superstitious, but there are many fine and beautiful things about his religion. Working from the sympathetic standpoint of a man who understands these things, Mr. Sharp has set a new standard for Indian painting and has upset many deeply-rooted fallacies. Thanks to him, the Indian becomes less of a tradition and more of a human being. Such pictures as "A Gift for Her Brave," and "The Death Spirit" are telling glimpses into the real Indian home life, showing the joy and the sorrow that alternate in the tepee even as they alternate at the hearth of the white family.

With the same perception, the artist seems to select the types that, from the ethnologist's standpoint, are nearest perfect. Little Na-tu-yu (Blessed,) the Blackfoot maiden, has a purity of profile that would grace a gold coin in place of the type St. Gaudens selected, yet she is all Blackfoot. In the portrait of Two Leggins, one of the leading men in the Crow tribe, all the dignity of this admirable and always friendly tribe stands forth. When his mastery of color is added to the qualifications that have been mentioned, it is not strange that Mr. Sharp has taken preëminence in the field of Indian portraiture.

Mr. Sharp has not won his position in a day. Besides his struggles with his recalcitrant models, he has met reverses that would discourage a less earnest man. Once his cabin in the Blackfoot country burned down and destroyed a great amount of valuable work. The artist was away fishing, and his wife went to meet him,

The modern successor of this performance is the "Bamboo Band" to be seen and heard in the provinces today. It is a collection of half a dozen or more instruments made of bamboo cane. They are of various sizes and pitches, and while not in perfect tune, the results are regarded as quite musical by the admiring populace. The lowest "tuba" is made of a section of cane five inches in diameter which is blown on the principle of the closed organ pipe. By opening or closing a hole in the side of the cane, two notes are produced at the will of the performer. The notes are pitched in about the relation of tonic and dominant, and this serves as the basis of the harmonic structure. The other instruments are more easily formed, most of them on the flute or fife principle, and the tonal effect of the ensemble is a surprise to any one hearing it for the first time, though of course the music rendered upon such an instrumentation must be of very simple structure.

These bands are used principally at the "bailes" or native dances, and on the fiesta days of the churches where they lead the processions. There are guitars and fiddles to be found in every town, but they are of foreign importation and the performances thereon are of the back-country hoedown variety. Traveling one night along the winding bank of the Pasig River, I heard a rhythmical squeak and toot that rose and fell as I wound in and out the turns of the stream, and when I caught up with the sound I found a full-dress ball in progress on board a casco (flatboat) tied to the bank. A Yankee fiddle furnished the squeak, and a bamboo "tuba" the bass, which like the "orator Puff" of schoolboy days had two tones in its voice. When it was not sounding one it was tooting away industriously on the other. The señoritas were hopping about in all the glory of native full-dress which surpasses the decolleté of western society in that the Filipino belle is not only bare of neck and shoulder, but of foot and ankle as well. After all, so far as I could judge, her feet looked as well as her shoulders, and what was the difference?

Some of the native women play more or less on the guitar, and the sound of the dreamy strumming out in a grove of cocoanut trees has made many an American so homesick that he has stopped his ears with his fingers to shut out the sound.

Filipino music reaches its best development in the church bands. Every large church in the larger towns has a brass band of from twenty to forty men equipped with regulation instruments imported from Europe. These bands are always uniformed, and membership in the band is a high honor. They play with an indescribable abandon to the rhythm of the melody, and an utter absence of the circus-day blare and crash of the average town band in the United States. They will swing along the street for hours playing march after march without a note of music before them, and every man wholly oblivious of the existence of any world outside of the harmony in which he is then living. For two weeks before Christmas these bands go out at 5 o'clock in the morning and march up and down the streets playing wild and beautiful marches, and I think I have no more delightful memory than that of having been awakened by these bands morning after morning as a reminder that Christmas was coming.

The sense of rhythm is strong among these people. I have watched these bands swinging along in their dream music, and it was as obviously impossible for any man to get out of step or to "lose his place" as it would have been for him to have changed his legs for wings and begun to fly. I stood on a corner one day and counted twenty-two of these bands in a great church procession, every one swaying and swinging in time to its free and spasmodic melody, and when they had passed, I was near to being a dweller in that land myself. It was an hour never to be forgotten.

One of the sights of the rice country is that of a score of men, women and children strung out in line across a rice field in which the mud and water are two feet deep, each one of them planting rice in time to the music of a banjo played by an "hombre" on the levee. The swaying line moves with precision and the total result of the work done is many times increased by the regularity of the set of motions by which the young plants are placed in the mud.

The phonograph has found its way into the Philippines, and every "ilustrado" owns one, with a fair collection of records. That these wheezing machines are popular needs no assertion. That blare and squeak is always popular with an untrained ear and an undeveloped taste. But the phonograph has its great mission for good in the Philippines, and has come to stay.

To the American, one of the strangest of musical phenomena in the Philippines is that of the funerals. Any family that can afford it always has the church band for the funeral. The performance begins outside the house of the deceased, and when the procession forms to go to the church and later to the cemetery, it is always headed by the band and accompanied by music for the entire distance. So far so good; but the music! There's the rub! Nothing but the liveliest quicksteps and "raggediest" two-four jigs are ever played. The story that "A Hot Time in the Old Town" is a favorite tune for Philippine funerals is thought to be a slander or a joke, but it is nothing of the sort; it is a very lively truth, and one that the average American finds very hard to reconcile with his preconceived ideas of what is a fitting accompaniment for the last long procession.

All things musical in the Philippines reach their climax in the magnificent Constabulary Band. Eighty men, all natives, under the direction of Capt. Loving, himself an American negro and graduate of a Boston Conservatory, have reached a degree of skill that caused them to be awarded the second prize at the St. Louis Exposition. Every American in the Philippines is justly proud of this splendid band, and no one factor has been more powerful in making life endurable and attractive in Manila than the Constabulary Band. Two evenings per week out in the open Luneta the band plays programmes that are unexcelled anywhere in the world. The choice masterpieces are mixed with the popular favorites, and the greatest and most difficult compositions arranged for big band work, with the most refined and delicate creations of the great composers, are poured out upon the delicious evening air, and all are to be had merely for the trouble of going out and listening.

The American in Manila has many and mixed experiences, but of them all, none will be more gratefully remembered than that of the evening concerts on the Luneta. The foreground of all the wealth and youth and beauty of the city out on its evening promenade, the background of the glorious and gorgeous tropical sunset back of old Mariveles, and in the center of it all, the glittering band stand with its eighty men playing the best that music has to give to heartsore and homesick men—this is an oasis in the desert.

The programme always closes with the "Star Spangled Banner," when every hat is lifted and every man stands at attention. Then when the stars come out, we go our own ways with the echoes of the band to soothe us to sleep and make us dream that we are not exiles half-way round the world, but back once more in old Home, Sweet Home.

FATE OF MILITARY UNIFORMS.

MANY ONCE WORN BY CRACK EUROPEAN REGIMENTS SOLD TO AFRICAN MONARCHS.

[Tit-Bits:] The world's biggest old-clothes shop is to be found in the London thoroughfare of Houndsditch. It is presided over by Mr. John Hyman, who has rightly earned the title of the Prince of Old Clothes, for it is to this individual that the Lord Mayor of London, our army officers, our soldiers, sailors, policemen and postmen send their costumes when they have no further use for them.

Then, not only do all the old clothes of this country find their way here, but the firm has established agents all over the continent, and weekly large shipments of the most miscellaneous garments you ever [illegible] reach the Prince of Old Clothes from his representatives on the continent. In one corner you will [illegible] discarded garments of some crack French regiment, the next pile will consist of jackets lately worn [illegible] Kaiser's soldiers, and lying alongside of them [illegible] be thousands of dress suits purchased from the [illegible] German hotels.

But the showy military costumes and the piles of frock coats you see in the shop one [illegible] will be gone the next. Indeed it is surprising how [illegible]ckly the goods are disposed of, and it is here [illegible] the romance of the whole business lies. Mr. Hyman [illegible] not only the Prince of Old Clothes, but he may also well be called the costumer to the dusky monarchs [illegible] Africa. The goods [illegible] sent abroad in huge bales, each bale containing from 200 to 250 articles. From [illegible] 400 bales are sent as a rule every month.

They go to all parts of the world—Africa, Asia, India, China and far-away Japan. They are eagerly bought up by native traders, who sell them in the oriental bazaars. From the bazaars they find their way into the far interior of the country, and explorers and travelers have often related how they have met a native king in Central Africa wearing a costume that put them in mind of a life-guardsman's uniform minus, perhaps, the belt and badly in need of a little pipe clay, but nevertheless much prized by the owner.

Explorers and travelers often call at the old-clothes establishment and secure a quantity of showy wearing apparel. They find it makes ideal presents for native kings and chiefs. Said one well-known traveler to the proprietor the other day: "There is nothing like a showy military coat to get a black king to allow you to take your party through his country."

"I have visited most of the great oriental bazaars where our clothing is sold," said Mr. Hyman, "and I have watched with much amusement our goods being purchased by the natives. I have seen the blacks of Africa solemnly walking about with European waistcoats buttoned up behind instead of in front, and even men wearing ladies' costumes. I have seen enormously big fellows wearing garments that for the life of me I could not imagine how they managed to get into them and am afraid when they tried to take them off some of the stitching must have given way."

Curiously enough, the showy costumes worn by the Lord Mayors of London do not find such a ready market abroad as the ordinary tunic of a private solider. This is probably on account of its price. After his nomination the Lord Mayor has to purchase his official costume—a magnificent rigout of silk stockings, buckled boots, gold-laced coat and cocked hat—which costs about £60. At the end of his term of office he disposes of it to the second-hand dealer. The official costumes worn by London's Lord Mayors for the last twenty-five years have been purchased by Mr. Hyman.

The villain stood his ground.

"Quail!" the hero repeated. "Why don't you quail?" he added, in a nervous whisper.

"Quail at eight per?" shouted the villain. "Never! Besides, quail's out of season. Ta-ta, all!"

And kicking Mont Blanc contemptuously aside, he leaped across the Mediterranean, and the following evening was quailing beautifully at the rival theater where they paid their villains eleven and a half.

CHAPTER III.

DUDLEY'S party arrived at the popular luncheon hour. Triumphant or hopeless golfers were coming in with corresponding smiles or sulks. Down the links, dotted with great live oaks, sped belated players, whose bright coats lit green stretches like darting red birds. Above, the sky—as blue as June—dipped cloudless to the heather-dyed range, sweeping on to distant snow peaks.

"It is divine!" cried Miss Duff. Cathcart, who helped her from the drag, vouchsafed no answer. Again, on the southern veranda of the clubhouse, Irish rapture felt English frost; for here, in view of a wooded valley sloping to amaranth hills, she could detect no shade of feeling in the cold set face of Dudley's retainer. Overcome by epidemic thirst, Cathcart touched his cap, and fled. Miss Duff smiled at his keen departure.

"Where do you suppose he stops when he's not driving his patron? Does any one know where he sleeps?" asked Bertha Marshall. Agnes Duff shook her head. "I fear his friends in England are not pining about him. He told me once in a burst of faith that he had not seen any of his family for ten years." Suddenly Agnes was conscious of a delicate subject. Sydney Ainsworth, walking by the side of Dudley, found her gazing abstractedly at the lake, shining amid orange orchards.

"I'm mad about the place," she evaded, when her host expressed a formal hope for an early luncheon. "We are wolves! I dare say the chef may be daunted by our promising appetites," Miss Duff declared. Ethelred Dudley was not born to repartee. He stared, bewildered by a grave possibility. Metaphors perplexed him, and with no wolf in sight he was not bound to follow. He turned to Miss Ainsworth, as if to stop superfluous words. His air of proprietorship enforced a silent wish. Without hesitation, the girl went with him to the far end of the veranda.

Agnes Duff's spinster soul grew troubled. She continued to gaze at the valley, half-forgetting its recent charm. Bertha Marshall's voice brought her back to the point of conscious masking.

"She's got him; beyond all question," Miss Marshall ventured.

Miss Duff frowned. "Possibly, my dear, he has not yet got her," she answered coldly. Later at luncheon she fended for Sydney in her inimitable way. When Rex McArthur again raised the question of going to Horse Show Park, she quelled his importunity.

"You are to spend the afternoon at bridge," she told him. "Sydney's chosen a spinster for chaperon, and invites no audience. Doubtless she'll let you come another time if you mind well now."

Miss Ainsworth smiled. "Miss Duff's my backer," she announced. "You are not going to have first awkward attempts put down against me, are you, Agnes?"

"I hold Miss Ainsworth's book for tandem blue; it is my part to see that she has fair play," Miss Duff answered.

"You're dead sure of cups, Sydney," Rex put in with a knowing grin. "Just wait until you drive for appointments with Queen and Sultan, running in Dudley's new park phaeton. By Jove! Red, you have it smooth."

"Be sure that you wear lavender, Sydney," Bertha Marshall officiously suggested. "We'll shower you with California violets. If Mr. Dudley sits by your side in afternoon dress, no other turnout will have a chance."

"Smooth scheme!" cried Rex. "Do it, man; you're sure to leave a red ribbon for Innis."

"I am not afraid of Innis," said Dudley.

McArthur laughed. "Of course not. The man is an ass. His sister can't drive a little bit—is plain besides. Still, it would never occur to Innis to doubt his Tiger's ability to win the judges to first cup. And in truth, that marvelous English copy from Cork—is after all a corker.

Martin, Sr., groaned. "Which pun book do you take?" he asked.

"Outside of jesting," Rex went on, well pleased to assume the center of his little stage, "outside of all that's holy in a horse show, Innis has a tiger to conjure with—one who wins out for his master every time. Innis minds him like a son; has never been known to drive without him."

"That's so," Martin agreed. "All the grooms in Paradise ape Boyd. Alas! all of them fall just short of perfection."

"Certainly the Innis tiger is extraordinary," said Miss Duff. "I never saw a groom so well matched up by nature to the sympathetic requirements of a dun turnout. Once, when I stopped a month in Paradise, I got quite worked up over the stiff little man, always alone, except for the great creature on the rumble. Has poor Mr. Innis no friend? Does he never lift an acquaintance who might be walking?" The questions drew wild applause. "Why do you laugh?" Miss Duff protested. "Should we not feel sorry for any man, apparently desolate? His case seems as bad as that of 'Joseph Sedley,' who dressed for no one, dined out with no one, and drove with no one."

"You see," Grace Marshall put in with forethought, to show her erudition, "Joseph at last got Becky! Perhaps our friend in question may yet find a lady—one to contest the 'seats of the mighty.'"

"That reminds me," Rex cut in, "Innis was once actually smitten on a girl! The young woman was from New York—stopping for the winter at the Archangel. Innis took her driving every day for a fortnight."

"He's stuffing us," jeered Teddy Martin.

"I had the story from the girl herself." Rex drained his glass to brace his imagination. "By Jove! the story's straight goods. If the power behind the rumble had not grown suspicious, our friend might be a benedict this minute. You see, the girl was never permitted to have a moment alone with her suitor. Finally one day one of the horses kicked up; broke a trace. In the mix-up, while the gentleman from Cork was busy, Innis managed to offer himself. But before the young woman had time to frame a decision, the trifling delay was over—the audience back on the rumble. The girl, who was really clever, had just been amusing herself; so, when her disconcerted suitor implored without words, she answered: 'You must choose—once and for all," she told him coolly, 'choose "The Lady or the Tiger."'

Mrs. Ainsworth on the right of the host, her beautiful sister-in-law on his left, clapped for McArthur's story. Miss Marshall, with several of the men, cheered vociferously. Agnes Duff declared that Rex, not Stockton, was now enrolled in enduring Americano. Dudley and Cathcart, alone, were not amused. Neither man recognized classical allusions outside of English history. The conversation drifted to horses and dogs. Finally Teddy Martin spoke of a cotillion arranged by guests of The Archangel—perhaps the most fashionable hostelry in Paradise.

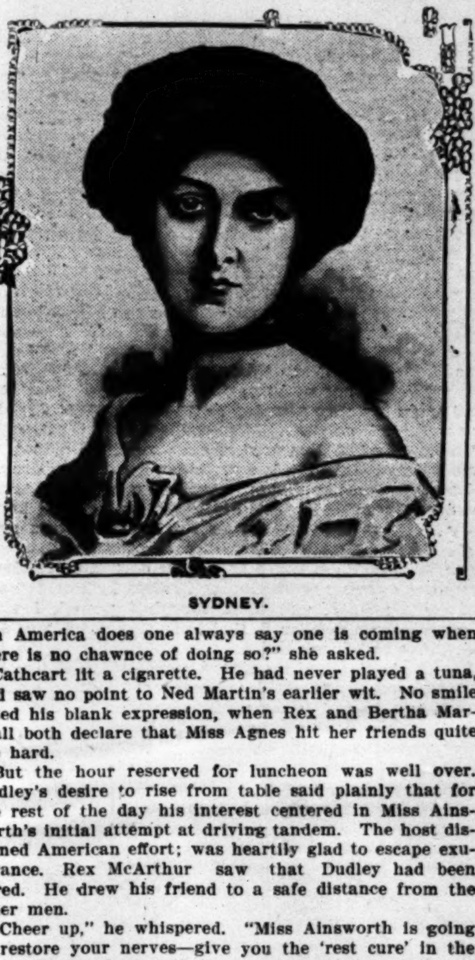
"This time Dad's not asked," the boy exulted. "Miss Marshall dances with his son."

"Luck to you, Teddy!" McArthur raised his glass.

"You're dancing?" the boy pressed gaily.

"Not a bit of it. Of course I sent my acceptance; but I do not intend to go. Cathy shall have my place with the girl from Baltimore—three millions in her own right."

"Sail in, old man," cried Ned, unabashed by British silence. "I know the girl Rex means; she's as game as a flying tuna. Loie Fuller is not worth remembering when Miss Baltimore flings her draperies in the ballroom. She's a trifle too much—at least six feet cubic measure—still you must land her by all means," Rex encouraged. Miss Duff raised her eyes to McArthur's.



SYDNEY.

"In America does one always say one is coming when there is no chawnce of doing so?" she asked.

Cathcart lit a cigarette. He had never played a tuna, and saw no point to Ned Martin's earlier wit. No smile lifted his blank expression, when Rex and Bertha Marshall both declare that Miss Agnes hit her friends quite too hard.

But the hour reserved for luncheon was well over. Dudley's desire to rise from table said plainly that for the rest of the day his interest centered in Miss Ainsworth's initial attempt at driving tandem. The host disdained American effort; was heartily glad to escape exuberance. Rex McArthur saw that Dudley had been bored. He drew his friend to a safe distance from the other men.

"Cheer up," he whispered. "Miss Ainsworth is going to restore your nerves—give you the 'rest cure' in the open. Dianas don't talk much, you know."

"Thank God," said Dudley.

"Sydney's a trump," Rex ventured. "She's sure to match up with any British beauty—fit into any old castle." Ethelred Dudley took the words seriously.

"If ever I come into a castle, I fear Miss Ainsworth may count it a beastly ruin," he answered with strange new feeling.

"Egad! Red, you're smitten," McArthur chuckled. Dudley offered no reply, as he went at once to Sydney's side.

"We are starting," he explained with implied authority. He pointed through the open door to the drag, just coming to a standstill.

CHAPTER IV.

The run from the Country Club to Driving Park was uneventful. By the side of Dudley, Sydney sat an accepted part with distinction. Edwards's conscientious attempt to blow a blast at each crossing produced the one hilarious impression of the way. A lapse into congenial quiet appeared natural to the couple on the box; while for Agnes Duff, who at the last moment begged Betty Ainsworth to keep her company at the back of the drag, there was keen delight in fleeing from others of the party.

"We shall be quite cosy by ourselves," she declared as they dashed onward. "There is nothing so conducive to comfort, after luncheon, as still communion. As our esteemed Carlyle wisely recommends—prepare at once, to enjoy 'a grand flash o' silence.'" Miss Duff's laugh rippled when Edwards rent the country calm with an ear-splitting charge from his bugle. "Dou

A Navajo Soul.

A Touching Story of Life When New Mexico Was Frontier.

By a Special Contributor.

HE band was playing for guardmount over at "Old Fort Marcy." A winter sun shone like a myriad of diamonds in the blue New Mexico sky; ice crys- anced like motes in the crisp air and a new-fallen crunched and whined under the feet of the pass- ood-laden burros. Under the headquarters portal ted a group of squalid, stolid, blanketed Indians, uns of a squad of troopers pointed at them, each r's face a scowling menace.

y were a remnant of the Navajoes, a miserable, tarved remnant, that had not been "rounded up" nt to the "Bosque Redondo" to die of disease or n hearts far from their mountain homes. The ons had found them among the cañons of the San range, and so far on their journey to the "Lower ry" they had been driven; silent, sullen, revenge- ut powerless and broken.

ing the door leading to the kitchen, I called to my white-haired, old, negro cook—who had been for President Polk, sah"—and Juana, his xican wife, to come to me. I did not dare leave the wild, scared thing alone, and I could not take her to them—the absurdity of my position made me laugh, distressed though I was, by this most unwelcome increase in my household. "Bring milk and bread, bring anything a 6-year-old little Injun can eat—and hurry."

John came running, his face awry with disgust.

"Anothah dawg I reckons!"

But when he saw the witch-like creature standing, almost in the fireplace, he gave one howl and backed into the kitchen. "You go in thah if yo' wants to, Juana, but fore Gawd, the devil's in thah! I reckons the gen'l done brought 'im in."

Juana came, and her nose went high in the air, but with the divine pity and maternal instinct which marks the women of her race, she approached and held out food to the famished child. Fear held her to the spot, but her body shivered like a beaten dog's, and she drew back from the expected blow. Oh! it was agony to watch her, so utterly at our mercy, so brave and yet so fearful. By degrees we succeeded in having her taste the milk, then—suddenly darting out her hand, for all the world as a cat seizing its prey—she grabbed milk and bread and ate with furtive but voracious ferocity.

And then she curled in the ashes and slept. Hours went by and still she slept.

We held a council, the staff and I, and it was decided that a full stomach and rest were more than cleanliness, that her name should be Marie and that she was the general's ward, but that she should remain with me until change of post.

Bathing Marie was very much like the same operation with a muscular and irresponsible puppy, quiet one moment, floundering the next. But she never viciously resisted anything, nor did she ever utter one sound. Indeed we thought she must be dumb, and were sure she was but half-witted. Small wonder had she been, for the wasted baby body was a mass of welts and scars and half-healed sores. Swift and sure and severe was the punishment that the commandante dealt out to the people of Cubero for their illegal act in holding an Indian as a slave, and the inhumanity they permitted. By hiding her, the whole village had violated a well-known order that all captives were to be turned in at headquarters, or their whereabouts reported to the district commander. She, and many others, both children and adults, had been held in peonage, and frightful were the tortures often inflicted in retaliation for the hideous death of some kinsman at the hands of Navajo or Apache—the captor made no distinction between Indians —and the one in slavery acted as a vicarious atonement for any and all "Blanket Devils."

Dressed, fed and left to sleep again, the little Marie passed her days. She never noticed the handsome babe of the household, and the whole family was ignored. At first the staff tried the usual tactics which, as a rule, reach the approval of little folks, but our small sphynx paid no heed, and she was gradually eliminated from the interest of the officers.

Of Juana, she evidently stood in deadly fear, and John seemed to freeze her blood—so wild and hunted the look that came into her eyes whenever she saw him.

One never-to-be-forgotten day one of the garrison children brought into the quarters a most bedraggled and disreputable-looking doll and, when going away, forgot it. The outer door was scarcely closed after the little lady than I turned to pick up "Arethusa" and put her in a safe place, knowing her to be the idol of the tiny maid's heart and the particular aversion of the general's red setter, "Major." I heard a low, guttural, but not unmusical chanting; I stopped to listen, and located the sound in the room I had but just left. No one was in it when I had left it, but the song—if song it could be called—was certainly from a human voice, and in the room. It was weird and mournful and uncanny; it made my flesh creep. Quietly I went to the office door and motioned to my husband to come. We opened the door and looked in upon a picture that has never faded from my memory in the forty-odd years which have gone by since then. By the smoldering wood fire, close-crouched on the hearthstone, her head bent low, her arms wrapped about something, was Marie. As we entered, she looked up, her lips parted in a dazzling smile —the very first in all those weeks—and the eyes, those somber, lurid eyes that had never responded to the gentleness and care which had surrounded her—were soft and childlike, and oh! so radiant with adoration. We looked intently at the object in her arms, and, close-folded to her heart, was the tattered doll. My eyes were dimmed with tears, and my husband's voice had the suspicion of a tremolo as he dashed across the hall and called to Carleton to come and see the "resurrection of a mother and the birth of a human soul." The staff all came and looked, and little Marie beamed upon us as the Blessed Virgin surely smiled on the curious throng around the manger. Then, ignoring all we said, she would bend her elfin head and croon and rock and murmur soft, unintelligible endearments to the new-found treasure. When bedtime came, she submitted to her nightgown and scrubbing, with Arethusa fast grasped in her hands, and for an hour after she had been tucked in her bed we heard the strange caressing lullaby. It required an outlay of several pesos to induce the wee garrison maid to accept a lovely, new French doll from "The States" and relinquish her battered but cherished Arethusa, which no one had the heart to take from the Indian. With each day we marked the growth of human feeling in the child. She, finally, voluntarily put her hands on our baby Joe's red cheeks and said something in an ineffably tender voice. We grew to love her and to watch the unfolding of her virgin mind as intently as that of our babe, and heavy were our hearts when orders came to follow the fife and drum into the land of the Apache, which meant that Marie must again go to strangers. To take her would be a violation of the order which had punished the men of Cubero, and it was to "Old Fort Wingate," near that village, that my husband's troop was ordered. To send her to the horrors of the "Bosque Redondo" was not to be thought of, so there was but one harbor of safety for her—the home of the Sisters of Charity. Gladly they assumed her care, and we all felt that one little "Injun" would be sheltered and spared the sorrows that lay heavy on the unfortunate Navajoes.

There were but six of the sisters—six grand, heroic, little "black-cap" Sisters of Charity from the far-away mother house in Ohio. Through hardships and dangers they had come to the City of Holy Faith to open their doors to the sick and homeless. "As the shadow of a great rock in a weary land" was this community of noble women to us of the army, and the right hand of the good God were they to the suffering, the helpless, the orphan and the aged. That "low, green tent, whose curtains never outward swing" has closed forever behind almost all that pioneer band, but they won the crown of sainthood in their humble, exalted lives, and wherever they are, all is well with them. Through privations, hunger, sickness and homesickness they never faltered in duty nor in devotion.

To them I took the quiet, docile child, and many long years went by before I again stood under the low portal of "St. Vincent's" and hesitatingly asked if, by any chance, there was one of the sisters of the '60's still there. To my surprise and delight one there was who, after many years of absence, had again come to the old home. She came into the room, and others, passing by, smiled to see austere Sister Catherine hugging the strange visitor and laughing and crying and "talking as Irish as if she had just landed," said one of them. But when told who I was, I was no longer an outsider—no one will ever be an "outsider" to the sisters who shared the joys and sorrows of the days when New Mexico was "frontier."

We talked of all the past; all that we could crowd into the flying moments, and many a soft uttered prayer came from the trembling lips of the "religious" for those who were gone. Some lay in consecrated ground; some where an Indian's deathblow had felled them. From Texas to the Rosebud they lay, Sister of Charity and soldier.

"Of little Marie you ask? God rest her soul, 'tis long ago she died! But come and see what your 'little Injun' became!"

Wondering, I followed the sister into the parlor to a picture on the wall which at first glance seemed a water color of exquisite roses and passion flowers, but which was really wrought of silken threads.

"This is what Marie learned to do under the instructions of dear Sister Augustine—glory be her bed!" said Sister Catherine. "When you left her with us, she was that quiet we thought she would never make up with us. She would sit for hours holding that dirty, ragged doll, crooning that outlandish to the thing that it made my flesh creep with the hearing of it, and never a word to the sisters or the children. But she was the obedient little creature, and did whatever she was told—but she did it as if she was walking in her sleep. One day I sent her to Sister Augustine for some thread. Do you remember the beautiful embroidery Sister Augustine used to do? That day she was working on something shiny—satin, I think—with red roses on it, and she said she thought Marie was going crazy with the joy of her at the sight of the flowers. Well, after that the child just hung around Sister Augustine, and one day she took her a bit of cloth and laid it down in Sister's lap with her two big, black eyes all a-shine. And it was a wonder, it was a miracle, for out of short silk threads, picked up off the floor, and on an old piece of cotton rag Marie had made a rose as natural as if Sister 'Gustine herself had embroidered it.

"After that we gave her all the shiny and silken things she craved, and thought she would be quite satisfied. But no! she wanted to see real flowers, real roses—and you know that there wasn't a rose but the wild ones in all New Mexico in those days—so Mother Regina, back at the mother house, sent for her, and didn't she go back all by herself, that 15-year-old Indian girl who had never been out of Santa Fé since you brought her here in Gen. Carleton's time? She saw the flowers—the sisters said she seemed to care for nothing else, except Arethusa, the awful old doll which she would take with her, and we always humored the poor child. But when the winter came on, she grew weak and coughed, and her cheeks grew red and hollow. In the spring, mother sent out several sisters, and with them came Marie. But it was too late for even the beautiful air of Santa Fé to save her, and we watched her fading away like the roses she so loved. For another year she stayed with us, and her thin, little brown hands were busy every hour with her silken pictures, always flowers and always a rose or a passion flower. When the end came she was alone in her little room, and in her hands she held a half-finished blossom and the old doll on her lap. She was a saint if ever there was one, and we used to often speak of what Gen. Carleton told us: 'Sisters, she has been a martyr.' On her poor, wasted body were the scars of the tortures of her childhood, but she had a soul too brave to ever complain."

The setting sun threw a shaft of golden light into the heart of the passion flower, where it bloomed on the wall among Marie's roses, and through some long-closed door of memory I heard again the weird lullaby of my Indian maid.

SWEATERS FOR DOGS.

"I spent the winter in St. Moritz," said a western girl. "In that white town, 6000 feet up among the Alps, everybody wears a sweater. Skating, ski-ing, coasting, if you are not clad in a white sweater your dress is incorrect.

"The prettiest, quaintest thing there is the way all the dogs wear sweaters, too. A sweater is just the thing for a dog. Fitting tight, leaving the legs free, outlining the graceful body, it is at once comfortable and becoming.

"And in St. Moritz all the dogs wear sweaters. Bulldogs, dachshunds, collies, fox terriers, each capers about in the white snow in a white sweater."

He had never conquered his islike of being near water, no matter how ras.

y had all drunk their fill, camp was made, cooked, and in no time Page was rolled in sleeping the sleep of exhaustion under the all of the mountain.

There was no light to shoot did not hesitate. Raising Prudence, he fired mpting to aim, and as the report echoed mountainside, there came an awful scream ith the echoes, that made Page have queer the region of his stomach, and that made his hair feel starchy. No coyote could have made that noise. Then a long, dark body shot into the air, high above him, a streak of white showing on its breast, and again Prudence roared out, and a streak of flame split the darkness. This time Page fired at the splotch of white, and the animal clawed the air in convulsive movements, struck against an overhanging ledge, hung for an instant in the void, then came tumbling down at Page's feet, bringing with it a shower of earth and stones.

Satan, who been watching all this paralyzed with fear, leaped to one side as the dark form came down almost on top of him, and with a frightened "meow!" sprang lightly to the equally-terrified Patience's back, where he clawed hair out of the little burro by the pawsful.

Page threw some wood on the fire and examined the animal, keeping a wary eye on it the while. It was a huge mountain lion, and stone dead, with a bullet hole between its eyes and one in the white spot on its breast. He dragged the body to one side, quieted the cat and burro, and throwing some more wood on the fire, rolled himself in his blankets again.

The next morning he arose, as usual, with the sun. He ate his breakfast and started into the mountains alone, with the intention of prospecting some leads he had seen there before and returning to camp in the evening. He swung his pick over his shoulder and started to ascend the mountain. On the first ledge above his camp he stopped and stared, speechless with amazement, at something on the ground.

It was the place where the mountain lion had struck the night before, and it had broken off the end of the ledge, revealing a vein of glittering yellow gold. With a cry of joy Page bent over to examine it. He picked up some loose particles and crumpled them between his fingers. Then, rising to his feet, he drove his pick deep into the ledge, sending the bright yellow particles flying in every direction. He bent excitedly over it again, his hands trembling nervously and his breath coming fast. As far as the pick had entered the gold still showed, and the vein grew perceptibly larger.

"It's the beginning of a good one," he cried exultantly to the mountains above him. Then he bent over the side of the ledge and scanned its base.

"If it holds out," he said aloud, "I ought to find it again down at the bottom;" and dragging his pick after him, he slid down and dug frantically at the base of the ledge, where it joined the mountain side. Soon he uncovered the vein again, still wider than at the top. He threw his pick, and his exultant cry echoed along the mountain side. At last the fortune was found, he told himself over and over again. Now he could go back to his old home and live like a white man. But even with the thought, his eyes unconsciously wandered to the great, yellow waste below him and lingered there almost lovingly.

All day he worked at his claim, staking it out, and getting specimens of the ore. And always as he worked his thoughts were of his old home and the girl who was waiting there for him. Yet often his eyes would wander to the beautiful scenery around him and he would breathe a sigh of regret.

. . . .

Three months after this, Robert Page stood on the platform of the little depot at Bismarck, bidding farewell to his old friend and partner, Jim Boadie. Jim was little and dried up, and had a complexion like the desert. Jim was now sole owner of Satan and Patience, as a present from Page, who was going back to his old home.

Page had $20,000 to his credit in a San Francisco bank, and more coming from the "Mountain Lion" Mine he had located.

"I don't envy you much," Jim was saying. "You'll go back there and get old and fat and—married. You'll look back on this life here and wish you could come back for a breath of the desert and mountains, and your wife won't let you. You'll want to prospect again, just for the pure love of the game, and your wife won't let you. You'll want some sow bosom for breakfast, and your wife will call you a heathen. But good luck to you, though I do hate to see you throw your life away like this."

"But I'll come back some time," Page protested, as his eyes roved hungrily over desert and mountain.

"No, you won't, not if you get married," said Jim, with a smile. "Your wife won't let you."

. . . .

It was six weeks after this that one day Jim Boadie, who happened to be again in Bismarck after supplies, saw Robert Page alight from the westbound passenger train, suitcase in hand and a broad smile on his face. Jim looked as though he saw a ghost when Page walked up to him with outstretched hand.

"But—but where's the wife?" Jim blurted out, looking over Page's shoulder as though trying to see another ghost.

"Where's Satan?" asked Page in return.

"Over there," said Jim, pointing a shaking finger at the cat, who was sitting on the depot platform regarding the station agent deftly rolling big trunks aboard the baggage car.

"Come here, you devil you!" called Page, and Satan, recognizing him, suitcase, store clothes and all, ran forward and sprang lightly to Page's shoulder, where he sat and affectionately tapped the ear nearest him with a soft paw, purring loudly the while.

"But your wife, where is she?" demanded Jim, still in some trepidation.

"Wife," repeated Page, with a sheepish grin. "Why, I wouldn't give Satan here for the best wife in the world. I'm not a marrying man, Jim."

"And you've come back to stay?" gasped Jim, seizing the other's hand.

"Sure," affirmed Page. "Did you think I could stay away from this country long? Oh, I love it all!" he cried passionately, as he scanned the scene about him.

"Did you turn her down?" asked Jim, still in some doubt as to the lady.

Page shook his head. "I'll tell you how it was," he said. "I went back there, and everything was changed for me. I lived there twenty-four years, then came here and lived for two, and the two years here knocked all the civilization out of me.

"The girl wasn't the same, either. We were both disappointed, I guess. She thought, somehow, I'd be the same, and I thought she'd be the same, but the two years had changed us both a lot. We didn't know each other when we met. I think when I left there she pitied me, and wasn't really in love. I was in love with her then, but not with her as she is now.

"There was another fellow, too, who was trying to monopolize her some, and one night at a big affair they were having, he and I tangled. It wasn't my fault, though, for I was only too willing that he should have her, but I wasn't feeling good that night. I had to wear a dress suit that almost cut me in two every time I bowed, and strangled me every time I turned my head. I use to wear these things when I was younger and more foolish, but it's a lost art with me now, and the quicker I get into a khaki suit again the better I'll like it.

"I don't remember how our little affair started, but he got to making insinuating remarks about me and mine, and of course I told him a few things myself. Then he asked me if I'd brought my mule with me—he'd seen some snapshots I sent the girl of me and the burro. I told him it was only natural, the interest he showed, as mules liked to know about each other, but that he would find mine on its native soil, where he ought to be; that mine had sense enough to keep its place.

"He slapped me in the face then, right there before every one. I forgot what was expected of me in a bunch like that—couldn't remember anything only that I was some mad myself. I reached for old Prudence, and Jim, I never felt so homesick in my life as I did when I didn't find the old gun at my side. I thought I must be dreaming at first, but he still stood there, looking like he was about to swell up and bust, and every one laughing at me. Right then I got hostile."

"But land sakes!" broke in Jim, excitedly, "didn't you hit him?"

"Sure I hit him," said Page confidently, "and I hit him some hard, too. He got up and made for me, and I hit him again. Then the whole bunch of white-fronted gents jumped me at once. They said, after it was all over, they just wanted to part us and keep peace in the house, but they went at it rather rough, and I couldn't see anything but red, so we-all tangled, and I had the fight of my life. They told me, next day, it was the most disgraceful thing that ever happened in that town, but I thought right then that life might be endured if they had that kind of a time often; and if the girl still wanted me, I was surely bound to take her. It was a queer sight when it was over. There was paper collars and neckties all over the floor. Me and my hundred-dollar dress suit looked like a caricature of Happy Hooligan. It was a beautiful row, though, and when I invoiced after the deal I found I'd had a good time and a pair of black eyes. But the other guy didn't wake up for two hours.

"The next day the girl told me a few things and said I ought to know the way back to the place where I learned such rude ways. I told her I thought I knew a way to get there pretty quick; so we parted, and I came straight here.

"And say, Jim," Page finished, as he disentangled Satan's paw from his hair, "I guess she was right, too. Did you ever see such scenery as that? Did you ever breathe such pure air as this? Oh, I tell you this country is good enough for me, and a prospector's life is good enough for me, too. Me for California and the West all the time!"

"Sure," agreed Jim, with a grin.

"Suppose," said Page, "we go to San Francisco tomorrow for one real good time, then hit the trail again. I have plenty of money to stake us both for the rest of our days, I guess, and we'll prospect for the fun of it."

Their hands met in a grip that made both take a short breath. They turned down the one street of Bismarck, Jim telling what had happened since Page had left, Page listening eagerly to every word, while Satan walked solemnly behind.

FAMOUS HORSE MARKET GONE.

The famous old horse market in the Boulevard de l'Hopital, in Paris, where Rosa Bonheur used to plod about in man's attire with pencil and sketch book, has ceased to exist. No one who loves horses will regret it, says the Vegetarian, for it represented the acme of equine discomfort.

The new horse market, in the Rue Brancion, which was inaugurated recently, is a model of its kind. It comprises stables and sheds sufficient to shelter 800 horses, more comfortable than most of the poor beasts which come to it have ever known.

It includes an abattoir, where horses that are injured or otherwise rendered unfit for service will be turned into butcher's meat. About 5000 horses are slaughtered for food in Paris every year, and the number is on the increase, so the need of a special abattoir, well organized and closely inspected, has long been felt.

The market and abattoir were built by a private company, which will turn the property over to the city at the end of seventy years.

TOBOGGAN ELOPEMENT.

An elopement by bob sleigh has occurred at Bienne, where a young Swiss, forbidden to visit his sweetheart's house, carried off the girl by an ingenious ruse.

The girl persuaded her parents to accompany her up the mountain route of Evilard to watch the tobogganing. Half-way up, shouts of warning were heard, a sleigh came tearing down, and every one ran to the side of the course. The girl alone stood still.

The lover and his friends, who were on the sleigh, slackened speed, caught the girl in their arms, and flashed down to the bottom of the run. There the lovers caught a train to Basle, where their marriage will take place immediately. The girl's parents are helpless, as she is of age.—[Geneva correspondence London Mail.

The Awakening of China.

RAILROAD BUILDING AND MANY OTHER IMPROVEMENTS.

By a Special Contributor.

China, old as all the hills,
Burdened with a thousand ills,
From a sleep of ages past,
Wakens to herself at last.

Where the coolie drags the plow
Railroads will go screaming now,
Where the wild mob swarms and fights,
Come clean streets and 'lectric lights.

[From "Ballads of Old Canton," by Li Hung.]

The advance of the so-called "allied armies" on Peking, about a decade ago, marked the awakening of China. Then was the imperial government forced to realize that to preserve the territorial integrity of the empire, the Celestial Kingdom must emerge from the chrysalis in which, for centuries, it has been enveloped. China saw that to deliver herself from the encroachments of the foreigner she must adopt the civilization which renders the foreigner formidable to her; her vast territory must be brought together by railways; her army must be schooled in modern strategies, and last but not least, her people must become independent of foreign-made goods. To these achievements the imperial government and the governors of the various provinces have been bending their energies to a degree hardly realized outside the empire.

During the past ten years some marvelous developments have been planned in China, and many of them are now actually under way. So comprehensive and ambitious are some of these ventures that if they continue it should not be many decades before China enjoys as great railroad facilities, and possibly as great industrial facilities as Japan. The greatest developments in China seem to be, of course, the building of the railways, and undoubtedly the most significant feature as to the apparently assured character of these projects is the fact that the government itself has taken a hand in the financing. Indeed the loans so far arranged for railway construction are all guaranteed by the imperial government; they are also further secured by a mortgage of the particular railway for which they are issued. For these reasons Chinese railway loans are considered as among the best railway investments in the world, and foreign capital, ever timid and anxious for government security, has been generously pouring into old China to build railways.

Barring a war, there seems to be nothing which can prevent the extensive building of railways and the rapid and wonderful development of the empire. The amount of money actually raised and being expended for railway construction almost surpasses belief—that is, if the figures and statistics given out are any ways near the truth, and there seems less reason to doubt them than the similar statements issued in the United States. The interpreter to a Chinese government railway official gave the writer the following figures, which comprise some of the railway loans guaranteed by the government, but he said there were others for which he did not possess the statistics. The editor of an English newspaper published in Shanghai corroborated the figures given, stating, however, that they were not by any means completely inclusive. The total amount of government-guaranteed bonds in the estimate is $177,750,000 (gold,) made up as follows:

British 5 per cent. ($11,500,000) on the Peking-Shanghai-Kuan line; Belgian 5 per cent. ($22,500,000) on the Peking-Hankow line; Russian 5 per cent. ($8,000,000) on the Chengtin-Taiyuenfu line; Belgian 5 per cent. ($8,000,000) on the Kaifeng-Honanfu line; British 5 per cent. ($4,000,000) issued to the Peking syndicate, limited, on the Taickow-Chinghua line; British 5 per cent. ($16,250,000) on the Shanghai-Nanking line; British 5 per cent. ($107,500,000) on the Canton-Kowloon line. This last line, which will soon be finished, will place the immense manufacturing city of Canton in touch by rail with Kowloon, which is on the mainland, separated by a narrow strait from Hongkong, the greatest port in the world. Hongkong and Canton are already connected by many lines of river and freight boats.

All told, there is a known total of almost one hundred and eighty million dollars being spent and to be expended in railway construction in China. The traditional Chinese "squeeze," which is their term (translated, of course,) for graft, is absent from the undertakings. The imperial government is supervising the expenditure of the funds in a rigid manner. In fact, the Chinese seem mighty careful to make every dollar go as far as possible. A quaint circular I picked up in Canton indicates the care taken to prevent an improper diversion of the funds. The circular was issued by the President, a Chinese, of the government administration of the Yuet-Hau Railway Company, and thus it reads:

"All materials of whatever description purchased by this railway company are to be paid in full on net price strictly free of commissions or returns. This has been already notified in the local English and Chinese papers. Owing to rumors to the contrary being recently in circulation, the undersigned begs to repeat this for the information of the public that in the event of any employé of this railway company who may fraudulently ask the dealer to invoice any goods at an excessive price, or receive commissions, when once brought to light, he shall be heavily fined and severely dealt with. Any dealer transacting business with this railway company who facilitates any employé to commit such a fraud which amounts to a breach of faith, his name and the name of his firm shall be advertised in the paper and no more business shall be transacted with him and his firm by this railway company in the future."

It is impracticable to enumerate all the railway projects in China. Dozens of them are under way, but their inclusion here would imbue an article with the flavor of a statistical year book. It is not alone due to the Peking government that the work is proceeding so rapidly, for while the government is in favor of railway building, it must be understood that, generally speaking, the system of government is not very cohesive and the governors of the provinces have pretty much their own way. But these native governors are usually very progressive men, and their influence with the Peking government converts these railway projects into realities. For instance, the Governor of Honan recently asked the Peking government for the construction of railway lines from Soyang to Tungquan on the borders of Shensi, and from Kaifeng to Chinan. The building of both these lines is very important, especially Honan, which is in touch with seven densely populated and very productive provinces. The proper Peking authorities were at once directed to report fully upon the matter, voluminous reports and surveys were accordingly made, and it is probable that soon the project will be really under way.

Foreign engineering concerns are profiting by the rapid railway building. Among them may be mentioned the Chinese Engineering and Mining Company of Tientsin, which, besides building railways, is engaging in coal mining and other enterprises. Last year the concern made a net profit of £191,047, which in American money is almost $950,000. To start its work the company issued over a million dollars' worth of bonds, so that at the present time it seems to be paying almost 100 per cent. annually upon the amount actually invested. To tell the truth, China, like most other oriental countries, needs foreign capital, foreign administration, and foreign skill. Yet, although they admit the necessity of foreign capital, the Chinese, like the Japanese, do not desire the employment of foreigners where their own people can do the work. There are thousands of Japanese in China teaching the Chinese youths the mechanical and scientific arts. And in Tokio, Japan, there are about six thousand Chinese boys attending Japanese institutions. In the Chinese army there are a number of Americans and two former lieutenants in the American army who held lonely posts in Mindanao, now command salaries of $5000 a year each as military instructors and high officers in the Chinese army. But though they are anxious to learn, the Chinese as a whole have not yet progressed to that point where they can safely leave constructive enterprises to their own people. Hundreds of enterprises promoted by wealthy Chinese fall to pieces at their own instability. However, this is not always the case. On the new Peking-Kalgen railway all the work is under direction of Taotai Chan, a Chinese civil engineer, educated in New York, and none but Chinese are employed on the construction. Under purely Chinese management work on this line has gone ahead more rapidly than on any other railway construction work in China. The whole line was almost completed two years in adv

This man is one Lim Dat, a successful Chinese merchant, who organized among his countrymen a $2,000,000 (gold) company to construct an electric trolley railway from Canton to San Wu, a distance of sixty miles. It is a Chinese proposition from start to finish. The presence in the company of any white man would forfeit the charter from the Chinese government. The route of the new line is a populous one, Canton having a population of at least 2,000,000, and some authorities give it 3,500,000, and San Wu 500,000. There are no serious topographical difficulties to be encountered in building the line, the water power will be obtained from the Quai Tong Shun Mountains, thirty miles from San Wu. This line will take the place of twenty-two huge passenger junks that take fourteen hours to go from Canton to San Wu.

If you want to see ocean ports where business moves with a briskness almost unparalleled, go to Shanghai, Canton, or Hongkong. Upon the wharves and waterways of these cities you will find perhaps the most heterogeneous, kaleidoscopic, and picturesque motley of ships, businesses, and merchandise to be seen anywhere in the world. Europe, Asia, Africa, the East Indies, Australia, South America, and the great United States are rubbing one another cheek by jowl in getting their share of the increasing trade which is coming from the gradual industrial expansion of China, most populous of empires.

To the south of China, and territorially a part of it, lies the little island upon which is situated Hongkong, a British possession and now the greatest shipping port in the world, even exceeding Liverpool. Not more than a mile or two from the mainland, it is ranked among the good harbors of the world, and here assemble vast fleets which receive innumerable invoices brought down from the interior on great river junks. At Shanghai, another busy port, the traveler finds himself at the mouth of the great yellow river of China, the Yangtse. Shanghai presents amazing activity. Modern factories belch forth their billowy clouds of smoke and soot; tugs innumerable roll upon the river, and huge freight carriers lie against the wharves.

HAMILTON WRIGHT.

FALLING FROM GREAT HEIGHTS.

THE SENSATION AS DESCRIBED BY ONE WHO HAS TRIED IT.

A German scientist, Prof. Albert Heim, who fell over a precipice in the Alps, but lived to tell the tale, makes that story a very encouraging account to those with an inclination to high jumps and the like.

His fall was only seventy feet, yet that would be more than enough to satisfy a temperate person. He has narrated his sensations in minute detail.

At first, says the Gateway, he seemed to himself to be flying through the air. His fall really could have occupied only a few seconds, but his train of thought was long and full of interesting detail.

"I clearly saw," he says, "the possibility of my fate. I said to myself: 'The rocky wall from which I am now being hurled prevents my seeing what is at its base. The snow may be melted there, or there may be none; if there is any, my life may be saved. Otherwise death is inevitable.

"'If I am conscious on reaching the earth I have by me a bottle of aromatics and my alpenstock. I will still grasp it, for it may serve me in good stead.' I thought, too, of removing my eyeglasses lest their splintering might cause injury.

"Other and gentler thoughts for those I was to leave behind came upon me. For myself I felt indifferent, caring really little whether I should be much injured or not; but from motives of consideration for others I felt impelled, as it were, to make light of the matter. I seemed to call aloud, 'I am not much hurt.'

"I recollected that in five days more I was to have delivered an inaugural discourse, and thought of the grief my death would cause to those near and dear to me. Anon, lying as it were, on the limit of a far distant horizon, appeared distinct and divers images and episodes in my past life. The whole mental picture stood out clear-cut and illumined by divine and mysterious light.

"All things seemed lovely and of good report. There were no misgivings, no anxieties, no sorrow, pain or terror.

"There were no sensations of contest or strife. All was merged in feelings of genial good will and kindly feeling. Such feelings predominated over all and formed what was truly a unique and lovely picture.

"Gradually a heaven of glorious blue, flecked with crimson clouds of gossamer lightness, surrounded me. Then I was wafted to and fro, borne up from below, painlessly and pleasantly, while a vast and moving snowfield seemed to accompany me. Anon, the perception of objects, subjective thoughts, a medley of various things, seemed to circle in concentric mazes around as a common center.

"Then came a dull thud, which I heard very distinctly, but did not feel—and my fall was ended. At that instant a dark veil passed before me.

"I called aloud three or four times, 'I am not much hurt,' grasped my glasses, which lay near me, and touched my limbs to make sure they were not broken.

"Then I saw my companions slowly approaching. They told me a good half-hour had elapsed after my fall before I spoke.

"I had lost consciousness, and that explains the dark veil. Later the power of thinking returned. I was conscious only so long as I was falling of the perception of beautiful images. At the moment of contact with earth they disappeared."

On another occasion Dr. Heim was injured in a carriage accident. He said that he distinctly heard and felt the bone fractures—seven in all—which he received. He quotes the evidence of an Italian who had a similar experience.

The Evil Monk.

THE STORY OF A CLIMB IN THE ALPS OF THE ENGADINES.

From Westminster Gazette.

EVEN now, at home in safe and placid England, the dreadful face of the Monk sometimes appears before my mind. And even now it exercises on my spirits a sobering, if no longer terrifying influence. For it brings with it an acute sense of all that is eternally cruel and irrevocable and malign in the natural forces of the world. There is something in the malignant grin upon his heavy, bearded lips, in the unwavering stare of his hollow eyes, in the immobility and silence of the white world around him, that is pitiless and contemptuous of poor human hope and effort.

The Monk, known also as the Capucine, a snow-clad mountain in the Bernina range of the Alps, in the Engadine, derives its name from the fact that its whole surface, from peak to base, facing the Roseg glacier, presents the shape and appearance of a gigantic human face, the features of which are presented full-front and are surmounted by a monk's cowl.

I shall never forget my first sight of the face of the Monk. It was on a clear and lovely July night—an Engadine summer night in all its crisp moonlit beauty. From the deep windows of the Kronenhof I was gazing up the Roseg Valley to the great amphitheater of mountains, so majestic in their distant snow-covered solitudes, their outlines clear-cut against a sky sparkling with stars.

Suddenly, amid that scene of marvelous beauty, a face sprang as it were into my field of vision—a face hideous, sardonic, devilish and cowled like a Christian monk. Often as I must have gazed in that direction, I had never grasped that likeness before. Never again did I fail to see in it the one outstanding, dominating feature of that side of the Bernina range.

I was a young climber then; it was, therefore, not unnatural that when, with Murray, I set out to climb the Piz Roseg—my first big snow mountain—the natural awe which such regions cannot fail to inspire was mingled in my imagination with the sense of the existence of a hidden force, impassively hostile and relentlessly cruel, which had to be fought against and overcome.

One o'clock on a starry night in August found us and our two guides descending by the aid of two candle lanterns the steep rocks leading from the Mortel hut to the Roseg glacier. Never shall I forget that first weird experience of traversing icefalls by candle light—the blackness of the crevasse, the eccentric movement of writhing shadows on the ice. Still less shall I forget the haunting sense of the evil presence of the Monk, faintly discernible on our right, whose domain we were invading. Then I remember that quite suddenly, behold! it was day, glorious and cloudless. We had wakened, as it were, in the very heart of a shining world of ice. This is one of the great moments of a climb. It is an experience reserved solely for those who climb. It is the thought of this particular divine moment even more than the triumph of the conquest of a peak which calls the climber back again and again to the mountains. Then, at length, we reached the first couloir. The blows of André's ice ax, the tinkle-tinkle of the falling chips of ice as they streamed down past our feet, now began, the remainder of us standing idly in the steps and advancing slowly one step higher whenever a fresh step had been cut in the steep slope of ice. Occasionally the pace would be hastened on a patch of hardened snow, in which steps could be simply kicked, but on the whole there was rather more hard ice than we had bargained for, and the waits after each step grew monotonously long.

During all this time our backs had been to the Monk, and only once, as we stood in the ice steps, had I turned with an effort to steal a glance in his direction. There was a sort of shuddering fascination in the sight. How truly brutal he looked! As we crept slowly up the steep slope, and as the floor of the glacier gradually receded in the depths beneath us, our progress seemed only a source of malignant mirth. It was as if something tragic about to take place must shortly be the occasion for an explosion of evil laughter. At length, after a rather difficult ice traverse at the top of the couloir, we found ourselves on the first plateau above the lower buttress of the mountain, and my first test was safely over. I felt triumphant; and here, as if in question, I turned once more to survey the haunting face. There it stood, grim and hideous; and yet surely there was some change! The villainous mouth seemed, somehow, to have lost something of its firmness. The face seemed, as it were, shrunken like that of a strong man after an illness. The cruel grin was there, but the coarse brutality of the lips seemed to be slightly softened away. The face was wicked still, but the power for evil in it seemed partly faded out of it like the light from the hollow sockets of his eyes. I could scarcely tear myself away, so absorbed was I in the subtle change which I beheld.

"Looks a bit chippy, the old boy, this morning," said Murray cheerily. "Come in, let's get to the next couloir."

And so off we started once more, taking a turn to the right which hid the Monk from view. A long, smooth snow slope now lay before us, leading straight up to the summit of the first or lower peak, and we set forward with eager steps. What now occupied my mind was the thought of that last arête—the narrow ridge, some hundred yards long, connecting the peak we were ascending with the higher peak beyond. At one time I had almost hoped it might not "go," and now, when at length we reached the summit of the first peak and saw what actually lay before us, my heart almost stood still. Never had I seen anything so stupendous, so awful! At no great distance in front of us there rose abruptly an exquisitely-shaped and somewhat slender summit. It was somewhat loftier than that on which we stood, and was joined to it by a long, sharp ridge, slightly jagged with rock. This ridge, after a level course which began some considerable distance beneath the summit of the peak which we had reached, curved sharply up the peak beyond, making a sharp dark line right up to the very summit. From this ridge there sloped away, with terrible steepness, on the left, tremendous fields of snow and ice, right down thousands of feet, on to the Tchierva Glacier and the base of the Bernina. On the right of the ridge the rock was a sheer precipice, bare of snow and showing a terrific chasm of naked stone. It was evident that only on the extreme edge of this ridge was any footing to be found. I looked at Murray, who smiled appreciatively. I, for my part, continued to gaze in silence at the terrific spectacle before me. There, then, was the last arête—the arête of which I had dreamed. How infinitely more imposing, more terrifying than anything I had imagined! Could I do it? The vile, derisive face of the Monk floated once more in a vision before my mind; and then, calling together all my forces, determined to meet his evil eye steadily and brave him, I turned to where he stood.

And, lo! what did I behold? Away, far beneath us, lay the dreadful Monk—a mere huddled heap of rock and snow. Where was the cruel grin, the animal mouth, with the suggestion of evil mirth? Where the fixed and terrible stare of the hollow eyes? Distorted out of all recognition, his features sprawled foolishly about his face. Even now methought I caught something of the glint of hatred, but of hatred foiled and helpless. The Monk had become ridiculous. It was as if a great weight had suddenly been lifted from my soul—as if a dark spell had been broken. The joy of action, the merriment which comes with danger faced and adequately encountered, filled my whole being. The blood hummed gaily in my ears. The immediate prospect of traversing that dizzy edge of ice and rock thrilled me like a passion. The Monk was beaten! I had conquered by simply pressing on!

"Come on, old chap," cried Murray. "Come and eat your grub at once. What do you think of the arête?"

"Lovely," said I. "We shall be at the top in half an hour." And we were.

JOHN SANDERSON.

THE SEA SHELL.

To my ear I held a sea shell,
Listened, listened, listened to it;
Heard the mazy, magic music
Winding, winding, winding through it,
  Fairy-like and wild.
Heard the mermaids' twining bugles
Calling, calling, calling quaintly;
Heard the ocean's far-off footsteps
Falling, falling, falling faintly—
  But I was a child.

To my ear I held a sea shell,
Listened, listened, listened to it;
Heard the jaded body's pulses
Beating, beating, beating through it,
  With a measured sway.
Heard the blood the veins encircling,
Heard the nerves vibrating quickly,
Heard this engine of a body
Throbbing, throbbing, throbbing sickly—
  I was old and gray.

Science? I have won a little.
Dipped into the lore of sages;
Knowledge? I have read a little
In that book of countless pages—
  Just a line or two.
Read—but lost the sea shell's music,
Lost the beauties there abiding,
Lost the phantasies and wonders
That, before my fancy gliding,
  As a child I knew.

KING EDWARD'S JEWELS.

A good many of the King's personal jewels are kept under lock and key in rooms to which no one except the responsible official has access. In other words, it is quite a mistake to suppose that His Majesty possesses a master key that will admit him to any part of his palaces at any time. The King has, of course, the right to command the attendance upon him of any member of the household, and to require him to unlock any door; but he does not borrow the key for the purpose of using it without the presence of the party most concerned, and no member of the royal family is permitted to encroach upon his prerogative in this respect. If, for example, Prince Edward of Wales were staying at Frogmore House, and had a friend as his guest, he could not borrow any keys for the purpose of showing him round the castle, but would have to go through the regular form, and in some instances could not gain admission without a written order from the official responsible.—[Modern Society.

VETO OVER QUEEN MAUD.

It is an unfortunate fact that Queen Maud of Norway finds Christiania very dull, and would rather spend the summer in England, enjoying the pleasures of the London season, Ascot, Goodwood, and finally Cowes. On this point, however, King Edward is firm. His view is that it will not do for his daughter to spend too much of her time in this country, and away from the one which she has been called to reign over. It might make her unpopular, and earn her the name of "the Englishwoman" in an uncomplimentary sense. The Norwegian dynasty is too new, too freshly-attached to the brand-new throne, to be able to risk becoming unpopular or being deemed unnecessary. That would probably lead to a republic at once. Therefore King Edward firmly vetoes his daughter's wish, and Queen Maud will not be seen here again till November.—[Modern Society.

PROF. MELGAR TAKES A FEW LESSONS IN LOVE-MAKING.

By a Special Contributor.

"I FEEL that you understand me, Mrs. Beaman," began Prof. Melgar, with an air of injured innocence, "and I would like to confess to you that I have entertained a most high regard for Miss Lucy. In short, I intended to ask her to be my wife."

"And nothing would have pleased me more," said Mrs. Beaman, sincerely.

"I am in a position now where it is fitting that I should have a household of my own; I have long looked forward to the time when it would be possible for me to have such a home, and, upon accepting a chair in Hilltop College and being welcomed into your pleasant home circle here, I was overjoyed to find that you had a daughter who answered, nearer than I had ever dared to hope, to my ideal of a wife. I have loved Lucy from the first; it was only through convention that I delayed to declare myself; I did not wish to appear hasty; I did not wish to commit myself without first ascertaining whether or not she reciprocated my affection. It seemed to me that she did not feel unkindly toward me, but how deceived I have been!"

"I'm sure she does not feel unkindly toward you."

"I do not claim to be able to fathom the feminine mind, but I had carefully considered this matter and had come to the conclusion that, in the event of our marriage, we would have every reason to expect full and true happiness. Science bore me out in this: Lucy is, as you know, of the sanguine temperament; I am her direct opposite, of the bilious temperament; she possesses many qualities that naturally attract me, and, knowing as we do, the conclusions of psychology, it is but natural that I should possess qualities that would attract her. I admit, Mrs. Beaman, with all the misery and disappointment it brings me, this matter is of great interest to me scientifically. Why this apparent contradiction of established principles? Either there is something wrong with the science or I am vastly mistaken in my premises. I assure you I will study this phenomenon with assiduity. It is my duty to throw any new light upon science that I may be able, even though the subject, by reason of its grievous personality, pains me. I shall——"

"Oh, Prof. Melgar, I feel toward you as a mother! I had set my heart on Lucy's marrying you! Prof. Beaman, too, I know would wish nothing better, but do not give up! Lucy will come to her senses yet. At heart I really think she loves you, but she is willful; she is frivolous; she has too much animal spirits—I can't understand where she got them! Surely she did not inherit them from Prof. Beaman or myself!"

"My dear Mrs. Beaman, I do not wish you to think that I object to her vivacity, to her exuberance of spirit! No, no! Those very qualities are what most attract me to her, and this is most logical since one of the bilious temperament is naturally magnetized by the attributes of the sanguine temperament. I adore her lightness of heart, her frivolity, even! We know, else science is wrong, that happiness in the conjugal relationship is dependent upon the complement of the temperaments. In all that is physical and mental, I feel that Lucy is my complement, yet—yet this cannot be after all, else she would not have become enamored of this young man, this freshman Woods who, as I have come to know him in my classroom, is inordinately stupid and singularly lacking in temperamental qualities that should attract Lucy. He is not even physically prepossessing, that I can see, and if he is entertaining, his entertainment must be of the clownish order such as would evoke heedless hilarity rather than intelligent merriment."

"Oh, professor, you are not jealous of this dunce?"

"Not at all! I am simply amazed at this contradiction of science. I cannot understand it, and—and I am chagrined to think that I should be placed in the same class with this stupid Woods."

"Lucy put you in the same class as Woods?"

"It is evident that she does; it is undeniable! Things equal to the same thing are equal to each other. Suppose Lucy is A, Woods B, and myself C; if B is the complement of A, and C is also the complement of A, then B and C are equal, are they not?"

"Not necessarily——"

"Figures can't lie, Mrs. Beaman."

"Prof. Melgar, don't you know that in love you must not figure? Positively you must not! A little common sense goes a great deal further in love than all the mathematics and philosophy in the world!"

"Perhaps, but is not this common sense? Isn't this reasonable? How could anything be more logical? If Lucy loves Woods and also loves me——"

"She can't love two at the same time!"

"That is just the point which perplexes me! Suppose she does, suppose that theoretically——"

"You are dealing with facts, professor, not theories. It may be possible that she does not love either of you! Never judge a woman entirely by her actions, for she often acts in direct opposition to her true feelings; then where is your logic? If you could read her mind you might be able to draw correct conclusions, but not otherwise."

"I don't mean to be hasty in my calculations, Mrs. Beaman; I may be on the wrong track; mistakes are made, but still, the fact is here, one of Lucy's temperament should not be attracted in the slightest degree by a Woods."

"Do you know that she is?"

"From the evidence I accept that as a premise. Would she welcome his attentions if she were not?"

"She may be trying to make you jealous."

"But why? What reason has she to wish to make me jealous?"

"Oh, how can I help you to understand? Can't you see that if she succeeds in arousing your jealousy it will prove that you love her?"

"What reason has she to doubt me?"

"Must I be brutally frank? Shall I tell you my opinion of the whole situation?"

"I earnestly entreat you to do so!"

"Lucy thinks you are too slow! She wishes to make you jealous to see if you are capable of genuine emotion! There!"

The young self-sufficient scholar winced. He cogitated a few moments in embarrassment, and then said bravely:

"I thank you. You may be right. I thank you. I will—I will try—nevertheless I love your daughter—I will—what shall I do?"

"Act as though nothing has happened; renew your attentions and don't be so serious; liven up and be a trifle romantic once in a while!"

"Romantic? How can I be romantic? I cannot be other than I am. It would not be right. If she does not love me as I am now, how could we expect to be happy together in the future? Be frank with me again, Mrs. Beaman, and tell me if you think I have made a mistake. Would Lucy be happy with me?"

"I think she would in spite of her present objections; if I did not firmly believe it, I would not hold out any encouragement to you; above all things I wish to see my daughter happy."

"You give me hope. I will try again, but I'm sure I would make a mess—that is, a ridiculous—bungle, do they say?—of it if I endeavored to be romantic, and, by the way, what would you call being a trifle romantic?"

"Prof. Melgar, have you ever given Lucy a single flower, a single ounce of candy? Have you ever taken her riding, or to the theater? You can't expect a girl to be enthusiastic on pokey old lectures that she has been used to all her life!"

"Ah, I see! How strange that I never thought of those things! To be sure a girl of Lucy's temperament demands lively pleasures, sweets and flowers and all that. I shall see that she is not deprived of her due hereafter, I assure you. And another thing, Mrs. Beaman, I have heard that women crave admiration; would you advise me to use flattery?"

"By no means! It takes an artist to handle flattery, but, professor, it might be well to be somewhat sentimental occasionally."

"Yes, yes; but how? In what way, for instance?"

"Suppose you tried to put your arm around her."

"Mrs. Beaman! surely you don't mean to advise me to take liberties with your daughter?"

"I do, in this instance. Lucy is no longer a school girl, and the very idea that you, you, Prof. Melgar, would dare such an intimacy would encourage her to think more favorably of you. Your case calls for desperate measures."

"How can I thank you enough for your counsel! I shall try to do all you advise, but—but why must such arts be restorted to? Why are they necessary to the condition of making love? There is no logical reason for these things when, by nature, two persons are fitted for each other."

"Well, if you persist in trying to reason it out, professor, I fear you won't get on very fast. Throw your logic to the winds and make love like a schoolboy! Make love like Woods, and you'll come out all right!"

"Thank you! I feel greatly encouraged; I shall act upon your suggestions at once."

A little later Prof. Melgar was busy for some minutes telephoning; then he retired to his study to think up appropriate trivialities that might be put to good use in his wooing.

It was while the family was at supper that evening that the doorbell rang and a boy entered, bearing two large, long boxes for Miss Lucy.

"Well, this is a surprise!" exclaimed Lucy as she proceeded to open the boxes eagerly. "Oh! oh! Roses! Aren't they perfectly beautiful!"

Professor Melgar's face was all alive with smiles.

"Oh, oh!" continued Lucy in ecstasy. "Who would have thought that Mr. Woods had sense enough for this—and only for a fraternity hop! He must have just received his remittance from home!"

Prof. Melgar blushed uncomfortably and fidgeted in his chair.

"Six dozen roses!" cried Lucy. "Woods sending me six dozen American Beauties for a dinky little Fraternity ball? I can't understand it! I really didn't expect any flowers—mother, did I mention that I was going to a dance tonight?"

"No, daughter, you certainly did not, and——"

"Miss Lucy," interrupted Prof. Melgar, rising confusedly, "Mr. Woods did not send you those flowers."

"Then who in the world did?" gasped Lucy, searching the faces of those present in amazement.

"I did," answered Prof. Melgar.

"You sent me six dozen roses?" Lucy's voice ascended into a whisper; she stopped short and gazed at the young professor in utter bewilderment.

"Is it so unusual for one to send flowers to a young lady whom one admires?" inquired the professor with assumed indifference.

"Lucy," said Mrs. Beaman in severe tones, "is it not customary to return thanks——"

"Mother, don't you suppose I know enough for that?" said Lucy, regaining her self-possession. "Really, Prof. Melgar, it is too awfully good of you for anything! Really——"

The doorbell sounded again.

"I will answer it," offered Prof. Melgar, and he disappeared into the hall. He returned bearing a large, oblong box which he graciously presented to Lucy. "This is also not from Woods," he remarked facetiously.

With determined calmness Lucy removed the cover of the box and gazed upon ten pounds of confectionery. What her feelings were can only be attested by her diant blushes and astonished looks, for she was less.

"I thought you might fancy sweets," said Prof. Mel

"I'm sure Lucy does not deserve this extravaga commented Mrs. Beaman, alarmed at the degree at her advice was being acted upon.

"Indeed I do not, but it is splendid of you, profe it is an inspiration!" cried Lucy. her tongue re at last.

"Thank you—I——"

"It is splendid of you! Perfectly splendid!"

"Don't mention it, Miss Lucy. It affords m greatest pleasure to be able to please you—indeed, spectacle of your joy, your genuine expression of ture, is most interesting. As much as I have st the emotions—theoretically, that is—I must say am puzzled at your present outburst; it seems illogical. Great joy, as you know, is or ought to the result of some vital good. Why such trifles as ers and candy should call forth this exaltation is beyond my comprehension. I wonder if I have bee error as to the fundamental source of mirth. To sure, the child delights in a new toy and a petty is a cause for elation to the savage, but——"

"Prof. Melgar," opportunely interposed Mrs. Bea "won't you please go into the living-room and have play something lively on the piano?"

"Yes, yes, that would be delightful," acquiesced professor. "You will play something sprightly, you, Miss Lucy?" he added.

Lucy meekly led the way to the other room and herself at the piano. Conflicting emotions must stirred her breast, for she alternated ragtime with pin; dance music with Wagner, and at times fingered the keys meaninglessly, discordantly.

"Do you ever sing, professor?" she asked at leng

"Do I sing? I wonder if I do! I used to sing student days; I suppose I can sing now. We sing—what is it? let me see—oh, yes, remember— frog on the Bank'—play 'Bullfrog on the Bank,' Lucy."

The two were enthusiastically engaged in the intricacies of "The Bullfrog on the Bank and the frog in the Pool," when the ringing of the doorb terrupted the performance.

"There's that bell again! Oh, it must be Mr. W said Lucy, as she rose to answer the summons.

"Woods, this inconvenient Woods," muttered the fessor impatiently to himself.

n a few minutes Lucy reëntered the room and, ing violently, said:

"There is the liveryman out there who says th ordered a sleigh for tonight, and he has it outsid

"So I did. It quite slipped my mind. I thoug haps you might enjoy a sleigh ride. Sleighing and the nights are so pleasant now—it is b moonlight out——"

"But the dance——" Lucy cut herself short, and ated by a sudden impulse, said: "I'll go get my on this minute!"

"Now I must be a trifle romantic, and sentim I must not forget—arm around her waist—her advised it. I might even venture to steal a kis haps," mused the professor during Lucy's absen the room.

"Mother! Mother!" called Lucy, as she stood front door, ready to depart.

"Well, daughter?" responded Mrs. Beaman fr head of the stairs.

"Tell Mr. Woods, when he comes, that I've g sleigh riding with Prof. Melgar!"

In the Ink Well.

STORY OF LUCANA AND THE MYSTERIOUS STRANGER.

By a Special Contributor.

LUCANA loitered along in the dark, chanting a hymn. She sang very softly, for no one but a very bold person would sing out loudly into the night like a mocking-bird, and this was a dark night. Later there would be the moon, but just now El Tintero seemed truly to merit its name. As Lucana slipped along she could see nothing but a faint lightness of the dusty summer road, and against the sky a hint of the far-away mountains.

El Tintero is said to have been named thus by a band of Franciscans who had the naming of the broadest valleys and the highest mountain peaks in the Southwest. One night they reached the summit of the mountain to the left of this valley too late for the sunset, and though the western sky was a glow of red, and the distant ocean a streak of gold, yet the valley lay a well of shadow under the mountain. So they called it El Tintero, which means "the ink well."

It is a great happiness to go through a beautiful familiar place in the dark. So Lucana loitered in the cool blackness, fresh with the pungent salt air from the ocean. In the darkness one may be another self, and walk slowly and think of nothing, and sing softly. Lucana in daylight, before the black eyes of the Mexican people of El Tintero, was quite another girl. Her black hair was wound in smooth braids about her head, and she carried her head high. Her skirt, trim about the waist, was so short that it showed a pair of small feet that had a way of stepping short and brisk. This way of stepping brisk made the lazy Juans and Josés and Diegos of El Tintero turn to stare. They laughed at her manner of scorn—all but Domingo, who scowled and thought of the days when Lucana was a mischievous imp and he a great unruly boy at the little schoolhouse on the hill. That was before she went away to the school of the Sisters, where she had learned useful and pleasant things—to sweep the house and keep it neat, to sew the skirts and waists that fitted so neatly, to make wonderful spidery stitches in drawnwork, to play the music of the mass and the rosary on the organ. Besides, she had learned the air of scorn and the way of stepping so brisk, for in finding the pleasure of work and thrift she had come to have a great scorn of the shiftless happiness of her own people. Only at night she might loiter and enjoy the beautiful laziness without feeling a part of the slothful laziness of El Tintero. An errand of thrift was her excuse for coming out, to buy eggs and bread at the store for the breakfast.

When she came out of the still dark into the strip of light that shone out of the store windows, Lucana dropped her loitering. There was a crowd in the store. The Americano proprietor had learned that there was likely to be more business from 7 till 9 in the evening than from 7 till 6 in the day. It was cool then for the men to stroll in and loaf about the counters. Because the men were there at night the girls came and bargained over bits of coarse lace and gaudy ribbons. Also the gangs of patient cholos, who worked on the railroad construction all day, came in the evening to ask for the letters from Mexico and to buy their food and clothing supplies. There was no friendship between the cholos and the inhabitants of El Tintero. The cholos worked patiently and minded their own business. The men of El Tintero scorned them for working, and lazily envied them the money which they drew on pay days.

Lucana passed the group of girls at the dry-goods counter with a careless nod or so, and went over to the grocery side.

The Americano, and Ramon and Mariano, who helped in the store, were all busy. Lucana, in the darkest corner, leaned against the counter and waited her turn. Florinda Morales was flirting with Pedro, who had already his second wife. There was Ysabel with a pair of new white canvas shoes, but her stockings were black. Diego was singing, half-drunk. He would go to the saloon after a time and become quite drunk, then home to terrify Maria, his wife, who used to giggle and flirt at the dry-goods counter.

Lucana turned from the observation of these things to watch the group of cholos. There was one great, stalwart fellow, the biggest of all, whom Lucana had watched often. Tonight he was leaning against the cigar case. The brim of his high-crowned hat hid his eyes in its shadow. Lucana had wondered many times about his eyes. There was a certain patience in the rest of his face, and a great strength. As Lucana watched he lifted his hat and laid it on the glass showcase over the cigars, while he drew out his bandana and wiped his forehead. Then he stood for a while with his head bare, under the glare of the gasoline light.

"His eyes tell," thought Lucana, "that he is waiting for something. And he fears that it may never come. He is waiting for some girl, maybe."

Just now Ramon suspended his weighing of beans and potatoes long enough to set "La Paloma" going on the phonograph. It was a power in holding the crowd, this phonograph, and its music easily swayed the impetuous Mexican souls into a mood which was likely to end in the purchase of trinkets in the cheap jewelry. The Americano had often congratulated himself on the buying of the lot of chewing gum which had brought with the phonograph.

The music that beat out through the metallic hum of the machine worked a spell over these people. In the [illegible] Lucana kept on watching the face of the biggest of the cholos. "No," she said at last, "he is not waiting for any girl. For now he has quite forgotten that for which he waits, and he is happy, listening to the music. If some girl were to come while he feels like that he might forget the other for always. I wonder——"

"Que quieres, Lucana?" demanded Ramon, and Lucana turned to ask for the eggs and bread.

At the same time came the turn of the big cholo with the Americano. He presented his pay check, took the money and put it carefully in a little wallet. Lucana, waiting while Ramon counted out the eggs, noticed the cholo's face. "Money helps him toward that for which he waits," she concluded astutely.

With the loaf of bread tucked under one arm and the sack of eggs in the other hand, Lucana stepped briskly out the store. As she passed out of the strip of light and began her loitering journey homeward, she heard the store screen squeak open and slap shut. Turning, she saw the big cholo pass through the strip of light. "But he thinks of no girl, now," reflected Lucana. "He is a cholo. He looks better than our men. I wonder——" but in the dark Lucana stumbled over something, something alive that grunted and whined. She sprang aside with a little scream of fright. The biggest of the cholos ran a few steps. He kicked the something, which caused it to whine some more, and to swear in guttural Spanish.

"Oh!" said Lucana, relieved, "old Diego drunk again."

The cholo walked along beside her. They said nothing at all until they came to the tumble-down adobe at the left of the road.

"Buenas noches," said Lucana.

"Buenas noches," he answered.

"And tomorrow he would not know me from Rosa or Rudecinda or Viola," thought Lucana, as she walked up the hard dirt path to the doorway.

The next evening Lucana went again to the store for butter and some bacon, and for the walk in the dark. When she started home she again heard the screen door, and turned to see the big cholo pass through the strip of light. Where she had stumbled over old Diego the night before, he overtook her, and walked along beside her until they came to her gate. The next day Lucana planned some things to say if that should happen another night. And in this way it happened that Lucana, who disdained the men of her own village, walked from the store with a cholo—through the dark nights and the starry ones and the moonlit ones, for nearly a month. Often in the daytime she laughed and thought: "It is a fine thing that Domingo is off with the sheep herders all this time. He would find out about it, and be a bother." Then she would fall to thinking that this cholo had a strange way of talking, and that she knew him no better now than on the night when she stumbled over Diego.

"Tomorrow I go back to Mexico," he said one night.

Lucana, because she was surprised, said nothing for a time. Then she laughed. "You will have much American money to turn into twice as much Mexican," she said. "It was that for which you waited, that you would go back to Mexico a rich man."

"I am not a cholo," said the biggest of the cholos.

The vision of a prince in disguise flashed through Lucana's brain.

"I am an Indian"—the vision faded. "A Yaqui Indian."

Lucana shuddered and said nothing.

"I came here to work for money to buy guns. Tomorrow I go back!" he finished.

"There was an American newspaper wrapped about some clothes that the Señora Lewis sent for my mother to wash, only today. I read in it about some Yaquis who were captured and shot by the Mexican government."

"Yes," said the man impassively

"Don't go," pleaded Lucana suddenly. "It is a dreadful thing to die like that."

"I shall not die like that!" said the Yaqui. "I had some more money beside enough for the guns. I bought this for you. I am sorry that I must think always about guns instead of about girls," and the Yaqui laughed a bit unsteadily.

Lucana took the little package stupidly. "Buenas noches," she said, beside her own gate.

"Buenas noches," answered the Yaqui.

As she went up the path, Lucana heard his heavy shoes crunch through the gravel that had been put on to fill a hollow in the road. Then his footsteps were lost to sound in the dust beyond.

"I did not thank him for the gift," reflected Lucana, aghast. "I did not even say, 'God go with you.' "

In the house her mother and the smaller children were in bed. Her father and the big boys had not come home. Lucana unwrapped the tissue paper from that which she held in her hand. It was a brooch, gold and diamonds in the eyes of El Tintero. He had bought it at the store. "And I did not say my thanks!" gasped Lucana. "I will write a note and send it with Niño in the morning before the train comes through."

The next night Lucana walked again to the store, very slowly. When she came to the strip of light she stepped more briskly than ever, and held her little head more firmly than ever. Among the loafers was Domingo, back from the sheep shearing, and he watched every motion that Lucana made, from the moment she entered the store. When she had gone a little way in the darkness, going home, she heard the screen squeak open, but looking back, she saw Domingo step out. The screen slapped shut. Lucana held her head high and walked fast in the darkness. Some distance beyond the place where she had stumbled over Diego, Domingo overtook her.

"Lucana," he began.

Lucana stopped short. "Cochinillo!" she commanded—she had called him "Pig" in the days when he teased her at the little school. She said it laughingly now, with her feet glued together and her nose in the air. "Cochinillo, go back to the store for the half of an hour. Then you may come to my house and bring your guitar."

Domingo, the Pig, turned back to the store, and Lucana knew that he would do as she said. She slipped along wearily. "Gone with the guns," she said. "Oh, well, El Tintero is pleasant enough in the daytime." Lucana walked faster—some places seemed very dark. Then she started and ran swiftly till she reached the door of the adobe.

Lucana went into the bedroom where already the smaller children were asleep. Standing before the old mirror, she made her waist very neat, and fastened a pink bow at her throat with the brooch of gold and diamonds. Then she made her smooth, dark skin quite white with face powder, and added a touch of rouge high up on the cheeks, although she had learned at the school of the sisters not to do that.

She went into the kitchen. Her mother, fat and wrinkled and untidy, sat napping over the dying fire in the cookstove. "Domingo is coming to play on his guitar," said Lucana. Her mother nodded a sleepy and careless approval. Then footsteps sounded on the path. As Lucana opened the door, the light from the little glass lamp streamed bravely out into the dark. There stood Domingo, the Cochinillo, with his guitar tucked cavalierly under one arm. Back of him Lucana caught a glimpse of the thick darkness. Some one was passing by. The footsteps crunched in the gravel of the filled-in place and were lost in the dust of the road beyond. Lucana graciously bowed Domingo into the tiny parlor and shut the door, so that the only light which shone out into the black of the night was that which filtered through the leaves of the rose vine over the window.

Lucana, as the old record in the church shows, married Domingo. She managed him so that he was more diligent and thrifty than the other men of El Tintero. Often he laughed at her for being afraid of the dark, and then laughed harder when she asserted that she was not afraid of it, but did not like it.

THE HENRY HUDSON BRIDGE.

GREATEST ARCH OF CONCRETE OR STONE TO CROSS SPUYTEN DUYVIL CREEK.

[New York Sun:] There is not in the world a bridge span in either stone or concrete which approaches the dimensions of the proposed Henry Hudson memorial bridge to cross Spuyten Duyvil Creek.

The central span of that structure is to be 703 feet in the clear. In steel there already exists a longer arch, that of the upper Niagara span, which measures 840 feet. The design of the Hell Gate bridge calls for a thousand-foot arch of steel.

But in concrete there is nothing like the big span which is to link Manhattan to the mainland. The Engineering News declares that the largest completed concrete arch is that of the Grunwald Bridge over the Isar, at Munich. It is only 230 feet wide.

The Walnut Lane concrete arch bridge, now being built, has a slightly longer span, 233 feet between faces of abutments. These spans become insignificant, even trivial, when compared with that now proposed for the Hudson Memorial Bridge.

A better idea of the boldness of the proposal is had from a comparison with the general field of masonry arch construction, since the problems of design and erection for arches of stone and concrete are in a measure the same. The Cabin John arch of the Washington aqueduct, 220 feet in span, built about half a century ago, was for a long time looked upon as an exceptional achievement, being the largest stone arch in the world.

Only in the last eight years has it been exceeded, and there are now three larger spans in stone, beside the 230-foot concrete arch at Grunwald—Adda, 230 feet; Luxemburg, 278 feet, and Plauen, 295 feet. In fifty years designers have ventured only one-third beyond the limits set by the Cabin John arch, and only in three cases have they found it necessary. Now in one leap the present limit is to be multiplied by two and a half.

The Henry Hudson arch carries a double deck. The upper or main deck is a highway floor, 80 feet wide between railings; it has a 50-foot roadway and two 15-foot sidewalks. The lower deck is to carry four tracks of a rapid transit railway, but as no such line is yet in prospect, the lower floor system is not to be put in place at first, but only the necessary connections provided for it.

The total length of the bridge, including the approaches, is 2840 feet. Its cost, excluding special ornamental features, is estimated at $3,800,000. About one-half of this is chargeable to the large arch and its superstructure.

A TAILOR TALKS.

"The average man has five pockets in his coat—two outside, two inside, and a ticket pocket," says a tailor. "There are, however, certain professions which render special pockets desirable.

"Most people know what a 'poacher's pocket' is, but how many have heard of a music pocket? Many professional singers have their overcoats fitted with such a receptacle. Usually they are placed in the back of the coat, just above the waist line, and will hold half a dozen pieces of music without crushing.

"Some detectives, too, have their business suits fitted with a handcuff pocket in the sleeve. The special advantage of this is that the manacles can be withdrawn unseen. When an obstreperous prisoner sees the officer's hand seeking a pocket, he knows what is coming, and acts accordingly. But with the special pocket the 'bracelets' are out and snapped on his wrists before he can resist.

Red Cross of the Sea.

AN IMPRESSION OF A THRILLING LIFEBOAT RESCUE.

From London Express.

DURING a recent gale, whose record is writ large in havoc and the toll of human life, I found myself one of a considerable crowd of people congregated upon the Ramsgate pier head. We hugged the lee of the little harbor watch house, so as tò get some shelter from the ceaseless showers of spray which burst in great steam-like volumes over the parapet of the pier.

The wind was pouring in a steady level rush of hurricane fury from out of the southwest. The olive-green seas, flickering ghastly against the leaden scud of the heavens as they curled into foam, chased one another in a rapid, roaring tumble from beyond the vague ridge of the murky horizon.

The air was charged with wet that stung the skin like a fusillade of darts, but whether this was rain, or "slish" from the whirling spray which veiled the ocean in a scurrying mist, it was impossible to say.

A vessel was ashore on the Goodwin Sands. The Gull lightship had fired several times, and the Ramsgate tug and lifeboat had gone out. This was some five hours earlier in the day, not long after dawn. I had watched them depart—a scene to set the pulse thrilling as they tramped out across the furious billows, amidst which they alternately vanished and reappeared, like the moon among gale-driven clouds.

Then they disappeared into the narrow horizon, and nobody ashore knew anything further—what the wreck was, whether any of her people had been drowned, whether the lifeboat would be able to get alongside of her in the boiling cauldron of surf which would be playing upon the Goodwins in such weather.

And so we were waiting to see.

I was talking to a bronze-cheeked, blue-eyed old longshoreman, who in quavering notes, which he pitched into an occasional falsetto as he sought to make himself audible above the gale, was telling me of some of his own experiences in the Ramsgate lifeboat.

Suddenly he broke away and peered hard into the palpitating seascape, folding his hands upon the bridge of his nose to protect his sight from the driving slish.

"Here they come" he piped, with a quick gesture of excitement, leveling a rheumatic arm and crooked forefinger directly seaward.

The little crowd fell into silent postures of intent staring. That old longshoreman must have had gimlet-like eyes, for nobody uttered a sound for fully a minute—and you may know from experience what sixty seconds of suspense really means.

Then we all seemed to see them at once, a pair of shadows fitfully emerging from out of the fleeting haze, one bigger than the other, a considerable distance apart, and both careering in wild capers upon the warring waters.

"The tug and lifeboat—well, thank heaven, they're safe anyhow!" exclaimed a burly young fisherman. "I allow as they've had a punishing they won't forget in a hurry."

"Anybody see whether the lifeboat has got a red flag up?" inquired another. There was no answer to this. In truth, the two objects were too vague to distinguish any details as yet. I asked what the red flag meant.

"Life saved," came the brief, significant reply.

The two smudges shaped themselves out of the storm grayness with considerable rapidity, for they were making a leading wind of the gale. First came the tug, a yellow-funnelled, paddle-wheeled vessel, pouring forth a low-whirling, sooty coil.

You got a very good idea of the anger of that run of sea by watching the antics of that laboring vessel. At one minute she would be poised with her forefoot sloping skyward, and white cascades sluicing from under her high, racing paddle wheels; then, amid a great fountain-like burst, she would swoop, diving into the creaming smother till nothing save her funnels, bridge, and mast was visible from the pier, and I regularly found myself catching my breath as I wondered whether she could possibly ever emerge again.

The lifeboat had sheered out on to the weather quarter of the tug. Her pale blue and white hull blending with the flickering crests of the surges would have been difficult of discernment were it not that the little craft was carrying a reefed foresail—a mere strip of dark red canvas, hoisted, I suppose, to steady her as she shot the quartering billows.

As for her, had I not known that she was self-righting, unsinkable, and therefore proof against the ravages of the sea, I could regularly have sworn that every plunge into the hollows was her last. Her evanishment was as complete as that of a dipchick diving for brit. Then came her buoyant upward flight, like a seagull skimming but the kiss of the yeast—a dizzy spectacle of coming and going to stand and watch.

The two vessels were within three-quarters of a mile of the east pier head when I caught sight of a little square of scarlet bunting, flaming from the reeling masthead of the lifeboat.

"There is the red flag!" I cried.

"She's got 'em then, poor chaps!" ejaculated the old longshoreman.

A new and strangely stirring significance came into the wild picture of those two little vessels with these words. They were returning triumphant from their mission of salvation. One needed not to be a sailor to understand that nothing short of that noble little craft, with her bulging air boxes and cork-jacketed crew, could have crossed the boiling surf of the Goodwins, and snatched away those shipwrecked sailors in the teeth of death.

The tug went swirling alongside the pier to take up her berth as the lifeboat let go the hawser.

"Have you got them all?" roared the harbor master as the lifeboat went driving by toward the landing steps.

"Every mother's son!" shouted the coxswain with a flourish of his arm.

And then we fell to cheering with one common irresistible impulse, which was just about expressed by the old longshoreman when he exclaimed, in a voice husky with emotion: "I always says 'Bless that there red flag!' "

Told in the Night Watch.

STRANGE AND STARTLING STORY OF WALLY THE RUSSIAN.

By a Special Contributor.

HE was a Russian, of course, and a Finn. We signed him on as Vladmir Hjalmir, but we knew him as "Wally" and as hailing from "Wallywadstock." He was a tall man, with a flat face, the nose and lips thick and of the most pronounced Slav type, the chin and jaws covered by a black growth of hair as coarse as rope yarn. His eyes were shifty and bright, and he seldom spoke, maintaining a kind of somber dignity that was strangely not in keeping with his physical appearance.

The war had made us a bit careful about shipping either Russian or Japs, but we were short-handed, and "Wallywadstok" was a good place to get away from before the warm weather set in.

We ran to the southward, and managed to get well into the heat of the China Sea before the wind failed us.

"Wally" was in my watch, and as I held the chief mate's berth, I had a chance to see much of him.

In the quiet moonlit nights I allowed the watch to lie about the main deck and rest as they saw fit. They had plenty of work in the daytime, and the man on lookout was the only one that I saw kept awake.

"Wally" had a way of climbing upon the rail at the fore-rigging and sitting looking at the moon, with his legs hanging over the side. It was manifestly an improper position for a sailor on duty, but I never bothered him, save to try and find out something of his past. He had much of the anarchist about him, and his desire to leave Vladivostok at a time when most of his countrymen wished to remain and fight the Japs was a source of some speculation to us. I tried to win his confidence on several occasions and treated him as he had never been treated before aboard any ship, but my reward was only a great deference of manner, coupled with an alacrity at obeying orders. "Wally" would not discuss his countrymen or their affairs. He could speak English very well, and with only a slight accent, which showed that he was above the average Finn in intelligence and that he had traveled much in foreign vessels.

He was sitting in his favorite position one night when I happened forward.

"You don't mind, sir?" he asked, quietly, meaning my discipline concerning his seat.

"No, sit still," I answered. "But you'll get overboard, and if you do, I'll not stop for you."

"It is no matter, sir; you would waste time. Ah, what does it matter?" He spoke in a low tone, hardly above a whisper, and I leaned on the rail and looked over the moonlit ocean. "What does it matter when this little consciousness is over? It is nothing. I've gone out and come back and I might as well have stayed."

"There are easier ways than drowning," I remarked. "Then there are the sharks."

"I doubt it, sir, I doubt it," he answered. "I've seen hundreds go down, sir, hundreds and hundreds, in wriggling masses, yelling, screaming, cursing and all trying to stay up—for what?—yes, what? I was in the Petropavlovsk when she sank."

"You?" I said, and I looked at him. He was not joking. He was quiet for a minute, and then began again:

"Yes, sir. There were 600 of us in her when she sank, you remember. It took but a few minutes, and then the sea was just as smooth and quiet as before—a few minutes of struggling, crying, straining—just a madness of fear as her bottom opened under her and she went down like the great mass of iron she was. Did they know what sunk her? Did they? Not less than 100 of them knew it."

"Do you know?" I asked, abruptly, somewhat sharply, for he seemed so unnaturally garrulous that I began to wonder if he had stolen any of the rum in our stores.

"I was aboard, sir," he said.

"Who were picked up?" I asked, hoping to start him again.

"About seventy of us, sir. I was in the crew of the forward torpedo-room, below the water line. There was a big dark man in that crew, Janski—a powerful man—and he went down in her. He's down there now with the rest. But what difference does it all make—what difference does it make to all those who lie under this ocean?"

He spoke so low that I could hardly hear him. The creaking of a block and the soft wash of the sea alongside sounded loud in the still night.

"There's no blaming any one for certain things. It's the social conditions existing that cause so much of our troubles. We are taught to look up to the wealthy and superior class as higher beings of greater knowledge and education. We are taught to look down upon the drone in the same breath, and no one seems to see the paradox. We are all striving to reach the higher sphere of life, to walk in the higher social paths, to mingle with the class of people who do little or no work. The whole thing is so absurd that one cannot blame any one for anything. He's liable to get confused ideas.

Good Short Stories.

BRIEF ANECDOTES GATHERED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES.

Compiled for The Times.

The Mercenary Willie.

CRAIG WADSWORTH, the best cotillion leader in America, admitted at a dinner in New York that men were colder and more mercenary than women. "It is born in us," said Mr. Wadsworth sadly. "Even as children. When I was a boy," he said, "I had a little friend named Willie. Willie appeared one day with a fine apple.

"'I'll give you this apple,' he said to a little girl, 'for twenty kisses.'

"The little girl was amazed. That was not at all like Willie. Nevertheless she consented.

"'Shut your eyes,' said Willie. 'Sit down here and shut your eyes. And mind, if you open them, the bargain is off.'

"The little girl obeyed, and slowly, very slowly, the kisses began to fall upon her lips. One, two, three, four—a long pause—five, six—another long pause—seven—pause—eight, nine, ten—intolerable pause.

"'Oh, Willie, hurry!'

"'I'm not Willie.'

"The little girl opened her eyes in astonishment, and drew back her pretty mouth from the advancing lips of a strange boy, a very common, shabby sort of boy, whom she had never seen before.

"'Why, where's Willie?' she cried.

"'He's down the street,' was the reply, 'sellin' yer kisses for two apples apiece. Better shet yer eyes agin. The next three boys is terrible ugly.'"

Pshaw!

ONE of the consuls to Persia, during a recent visit home, said at a dinner in Chicago:

"The present Shah will never be the equal of his predecessor. What a character the late Shah was! He never opened his mouth without saying something worth repeating.

"Lady Drummond Wolfe once got permission to visit the Shah's harem. She took a friend with her, a Miss Blank, who was about to be married. The two Englishwomen wandered over the splendid palace, among the hundreds of beautiful young girls, and presently the Shah encountered them.

"'Come here,' he said to Miss Blank, in his crude French.

"She approached. He looked closely at her.

"'You are about to be married?' he said.

"'Yes, Your Highness.'

"'It's late!'"

e Gave Himself Away.

APROPOS of the movement in New York toward the abolition of race-track gambling, Mrs. Jack J. Warren, the witty Vermont reformer, said the other day in Burlington:

"Race-track gamblers always claim that everything about the game is square, absolutely square. Cross-examine them very closely, though; look into all their methods; question them on every point, and usually, like Col. Toddy of Tin Can, they'll give themselves away.

"Col. Toddy of Tin Can was a whist sharp.

"'I once, and once only,' he said in the smoking-room, 'I had all thirteen trumps dealt me.'

"'You, I suppose, were—er—the dealer?' some one asked.

"The colonel turned purple.

"'No, sir,' he roared. 'No, sir, blast your impudence, I was not the dealer!'

"The other nodded calmly.

"'Then may I ask,' he said, 'what happened to the trump which the dealer turned up?'" tory So-called.

JAMES CARROLL, the amateur lightweight boxing champion of San Francisco, said at the end of a recent women's boxing and fencing exhibition:

"Physical culture among women, women's growing strength and pluck, lend interest to marriage, change marriage's complexion.

"'How is poor Smithers gettin' on?' said one man to another.

"'Well,' said the other, 'Smithers is now almost recovered from the beatin' he gave his wife last Saturday night.'"

Great Smoker.

A PITTSBURGH millionaire said at a dinner:

"I lunched with Sir Thomas Lipton at the Ghezi- Palace in Cairo just before he set out for his tea plantation in Ceylon, where the ex-Empress Eugenie came to visit him.

"When the coffee and Tarragone came on, I opened my cigar case and offered Sir Thomas a beautiful aromatic cigarette fresh from the factory down the street.

"'No, thank you,' said he. 'I am, with one possible exception, the biggest smoker in the world, but I never smoke cigars nor cigarettes.'

"'What do you smoke?' said I.

"'Bacon,' he answered."

t an Ideal Juror.

DURING the selection of the Thaw jurors, Martin W. Littleton, the brilliant defender of the young millionaire, told at luncheon a story about a juryman.

"It was in the far West," he said, "in the distant days when our western percentage of illiteracy had fallen to the lowest in the world.

"A juror had been selected in a murder trial, and they were about to swear him in, when the judge, to be on the safe side, bethought himself to say to the man:

"'I trust, sir, you fully understand the duties and responsibilities of a juror?'

"Straightening himself up to his full height, the man nodded calmly and replied:

"'I'm a plain chap, and I believe in being fair to all. I don't go by what the lawyers say, and I don't go by what the judge says; but I look carefully at the prisoner in the dock, and I say to myself: "He must have done something or he wouldn't be here;" so I bring 'em all in guilty.'"

The Story of Starlight.

AUGUST BELMONT, president of the Jockey Club, at a dinner in New York, said of racing:

"Racing is honestly conducted in the main. The stories that one hears about it are rather absurd. They are like the story of Starlight.

"Once there was a group of sportsmen who were all quite broke. They must, however, get in to the races. And one at a time they presented themselves at the paddock gate.

"'I am the owner of Starlight,' the first said. He was well-dressed and imposing. They believed and passed him in.

"'I am Starlight's trainer,' said the second. His red face and bluff manner bore out his story, and they admitted him.

"The third man, small and thin, next appeared.

"'Starlight's jockey,' he said shortly, and hurried through the gate.

"The fourth and last man of the group was very shabby indeed.

"'Well, who are you?' they said impatiently, when he presented himself.

"'I am Starlight,' was the meek reply.'"

No Reason at All.

JOSEPH RICHARDS, the Detroit jockey, complained on his return from Russia of the fall in jockeys' fees there.

"Of course they give you reasons for this fall," he said. "People always have their reasons, their more or less ridiculous reasons. It's like a Detroit fish man. Once a relative of mine went to this man to get some fish, and found that they were selling very high. She complained, and the man said:

"'Fish is dear, ma'am; oh. yes, very dear. You see, it's getting so scarce on account of all these here aquariums.'"

Getting Round It.

A CHICAGO physician said the other day of the late Dr. Nicholas Senn, the celebrated surgeon:

"I studied under Dr. Senn when he was professor of surgery at Rush Medical College. I remember how, one day, he asked me a question that I did not know, and, in order to hide my ignorance, I gave an ambiguous answer.

"Dr. Senn smiled.

"He said I reminded him of a schoolboy who, taking a written examination in history, came to the question:

"'Which was the greatest general, Caesar or Hannibal?'

"The boy answered this question as follows:

"'If we consider who Caesar and Hannibal were, and ask ourselves which of them was the greater, we must unhesitatingly answer in the affirmative.'"

A Hard Fall.

JACOB H. SCHIFF, on the way to Egypt on the Caronia, was criticising, in the smokeroom, the tenor singing of a young man who gave, all by himself, a little musicale every night after dinner.

"With a voice like that," said Mr. Schiff, "one is apt to meet with extraordinary experiences. I have a friend with a voice like that, a young broker. For his Christmas holidays my friend made a little tour of New England, visiting many quaint old houses, many picturesque churches.

"One Sunday he went to church in Salem or Gloucester or some such place, and lifted up his tenor voice in the hymns and responses with a fervor and force that made the congregation stare.

"Pleased with the attention he attracted, my friend threw back his head, puffed out his chest, and, abandoning the last vestige of restraint, sang with all his might and main. A high note was approaching. He collected his powers to meet it. They were staring now—well, he would give them something to stare for. What a glorious thing this congregational singing was. He must have more of it. Every Sunday, on his return to New York——

"A heavy hand fell on his shoulder. He turned with a start, and saw the sexton, an old, bent man, glowering at him.

"'Here, young feller, hold yer noise,' said the sexton, in a wheezy whisper audible all over the building. 'We pay people to do that here.'"

Two Legal Ones.

SENATOR GALLINGER, lunching in the Senate restaurant, said of a new and unsophisticated young office-seeker:

"He reminds me of a witness in a damage suit in Newport. This witness, a farm hand, when he was called to give his testimony, said excitedly and earnestly, as he took his place in the box:

"'Which side am I on?'"

Senator Aldrich smiled.

"An ignorant, uninformed chap he is," said he. "As ignorant and uninformed as a cross-examiner I once heard in Providence in a perjury case.

"This lawyer, with a terrible frown at a witness who had just been handed for cross-examination to him, said:

"'You say you made an examination of the premises. Tell us again, sir, and I warn you that you had better tell us carefully just what you found there.'

"The witness, not at all awed, said lightly:

"'Oh, nothing of any consequence. A beggarly account of empty boxes, as Shakespeare says.'

"The lawyer struck the table a crashing blow.

"'Never mind what Shakespeare says, sir,' he roared. 'He will be summoned and can testify for himself in due course if he knows anything about this case.'"

Nor Fire Nor Water.

SECRETARY A. M. DOWNES of New York's Department of Fire, related at a dinner a fire story.

"At the end of the first act of a drama," he said, "a man leaped hurriedly to his feet.

"'I heard an alarm of fire,' he said. 'I must go and see where it is.'

"His wife, whose hearing was less acute, made way for him in silence, and he disappeared.

"'It wasn't fire,' he said on his return.

"'Nor water either,' said his wife coldly."

A Realistic Painter.

THE late John Lambert, the Philadelphia artist whose blindness, brought on by the dazzling sunshine of a Spanish summer, caused his death through grief, was a portrait painter of rare talent.

"Lambert," said a member of the Philadelphia Club the other day, "was a realist. His portraits were true and unflattering. It annoyed him tremendously to be asked to make an ugly woman beautiful—it was the same thing, he used to say, as being asked to lie.

"A Spruce-street matron sat to Lambert once. At the end of the third sitting she professed to be quite satisfied with the progress of the work.

"'All but the mouth," she said. 'Please make it small and curved. I know it is a straight, long mouth really, just as you have drawn it, but in the portrait I want you, if you will, to make it very tiny. Will you?'

"'Certainly, madam,' said Lambert. 'I'll leave it out altogether if you wish.'"

Clearing the Way.

"THE late Edmund Clarence Stedman," said a Chicago publisher, "used to entertain his friends with amusing memories of country journalism. He once edited, you know, a little paper in Connecticut.

"At a dentists' banquet in New York, where he read an original poem, he told a story about an amateur Connecticut dentist, one of his oldest subscribers.

"This man's name was Jake. Jake was at work in a cornfield one day when a neighboring farmer came to him, holding his jaw.

"The farmer had the toothache, and to save a trip to Winsted and a dentist's fee, he wanted Jake to pull the aching tooth.

"Jake led him to the barn, seated him on a saw horse, and took from the harness-room a pair of very large, rusty pincers.

"'Here goes,' he said, and bracing himself, extracted a huge tooth.

"The farmer clapped his hand to his jaw. He pointed reproachfully to the large white tooth in the pincers.

"'Why, Jake,' he said, 'that's the wrong one.'

"'I know,' said Jake, bracing himself again; 'but now I can get at the other handier.'"

Observation Confirmed.

A ONE-ARMED man entered a restaurant at noon and seated himself next to a dapper little other-people's-business man. The latter at once noticed his neighbor's left sleeve hanging loose, and kept eyeing it in a how-did-it-happen sort of a way. The one-armed man paid no attention to him, but kept on eating with his one hand. Finally the inquisitive one could stand it no longer. He changed his position a little, cleared his throat, and said: "I beg pardon, sir, but I see you have lost an arm."

The one-armed man picked up his sleeve with his right hand and peered anxiously into it. "Bless my soul!" he exclaimed, looking up with great surprise. "I do believe you're right."—[Everybody's Magazine.

He Wanted Pie.

WILLIAM J. RYAN, president of the Supreme Council of Public Hackmen of New York, said the other day that the winter panic had reduced the hackmen's receipts considerably.

"We'll have to come down to English rates—12 cents a mile instead of 50 cents—if we have many more such panics," Mr. Ryan said. "Everybody felt the pinch. I overheard a tramp grumbling in a public square.

"'The trade ain't like it used to be,' he said. 'Here ten times running today I've asked for a bit o' bread, and what do they give me? Why, durn it, just a bit of bread.'"

A Mountaineer's Reply.

A NORTHERNER riding through the West Virginian mountains came up with a mountaineer leisurely driving a herd of pigs.

"Where are you driving the pigs to?" asked the rider.

"Out to pasture 'em a bit."

"What for?"

"To fatten 'em."

"Isn't it pretty slow work to fatten them on grass? Up where I come from we pen them up and feed them on corn. It saves a lot of time."

"Yaas, I s'pose so," drawled the mountaineer. "But, h——! what's time to a hawg?"—[Everybody's Magazine.

A PLEASING ENTRANCE.

IT IS VERY ESSENTIAL TO A FEELING OF WELCOME.

By Ernest Braunton.

EMERSON said: "Give a boy address and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes; he has not the trouble of earning or owning them; they solicit him to enter and possess." A pleasing exterior is just as desirable in a home; there are entrances so kindly and homelike in appearance that you feel sure of a gracious reception within; they seem to invite you to enter and possess. If such a home is for sale, the bargain is half-closed when the expectant purchaser comes within sight and feels that "come right in" charm which is ever present about the portals of every well-planted home garden. A favor may be performed so grudgingly as to prevent any feeling of obligation, or it may be refused so courteously as to awaken more kindly feelings than if it had been ungraciously granted. One may pass by a garden without receiving a formal invitation to enter and yet feel more pleased and satisfied than he could through a visit to another where all time and material were his for the wishing. Some gardens are inviting, others repellant, in no whit less than is true of people. The applicant for a position desires above all else to make a favorable first impression; it is a good thought to bear in mind when building the home, and it is first the garden entrance and secondly the house entrance that will deliver the message of welcome or cold reception. Both will, of course, need proper support, but "well begun is half-done," and he who succeeds admirably at the fundamentals will not be found wanting with the incidentals. Aim at simplicity and comfort and you cannot go far astray but, as a ceiling beam at the entrance to the Glenwood Tavern records: "Ye canna be baith grand and comfortable."

HOWEAS IN SUN AND IN SHADE.

In a stroll about Pasadena last Sunday a place was found having huge stone pillars at the entrance and from each of these up to the porch was built an uninterrupted stone wall; no divergent paths led into the front yard inviting you to enter and enjoy; evidently one would have to go through the house to get into the garden at all, and all of the latter in plain view was coldly conventional and cheerless; not a touch of color but greensward, skirted by a single straight path. No graceful festoons of vine hid the harsh, monotonous lines of a severe style of architecture, and altogether the premises gave one the impression of being a huge receiving vault; which no doubt, after a fashion, it was, for one would never expect to find health and good cheer within. Upon the writer's being asked by his companion what improvement could be made to strengthen the homelike charm of the place he suggested a chain across the entrance to the yard and an iron bulldog on the front porch. In fact, a cannon's muzzle thrust out the front door would not be inappropriate. This case is one of many hereabout where the delicate tracery of a vine and the dazzling scarlet of a geranium would work a truly wonderful transformation, and yet "some one calls it home."

Carnation Fertilization.

The American Carnation Society met in Washington the last week in January, and among the many valuable and interesting addresses was one by Dr. B. T. Galloway, chief of the United States Bureau of Plant Industry, on various experiments. The only point of interest to the rank and file of House Beautiful readers lies in his statements concerning feeding the plants for best results.

The speaker used a chart to illustrate his remarks upon the fertilizer experiments which the department had carried on. He said that this experiment had been planned to bring out, if possible, the fact that growers as a rule are too prone to count on the value of commercial fertilizers in crop production, and he said he believed the results of the experiment would show that there is no fertilizer so good, reliable and sure as well-decomposed organic manure—something which could be secured anywhere in the country. He said, however, that experiments of this kind to be conclusive, must be carried on for a number of years in various places. He cautioned the growers to go slow on commercial fertilizers and to put their faith and work into good composts.

The Philippine Lily.

For several years a few growers in Southern California have been experimenting with the Philippine lily, but it has not been altogether a success or up to expectations. It may be that we have not accorded it the proper treatment. W. S. Lyon, for many years in the nursery business in Los Angeles, formerly State forester of California and a frequent contributor to The Times Magazine, is now horticulturist for Uncle Sam in the Philippines, and has grown this lily in field and garden and studied it upon its native heath, and has none but good words for it.

"The catalogue descriptions of the Benguet lily (Lilium Philippensis) are in many cases misleading, and in view of the part it is likely to play in the cut-flower trade, some notes upon its habits and appearance, taken on the spot in its native wilds, as well as its behavior under cultivation during two years, will doubtless prove of general interest. The plant occurs on the Benguet plateau of Northern Luzon in a light yellow and rather impoverished clay, at an elevation of 4000 to 5000 feet and where during the growing season—June to November—a cool greenhouse temperature accompanied by much rain and humidity prevails.

"The bulbs begin to grow shortly after the rain monsoon sets in, and in August-September the hills become spectacular with the glory of countless white, fragrant flowers. The slender stem in the wild state is well supported by the surrounding grasses, but in cultivation requires staking. If staking and training are carefully upright, so strong is the stem that, unless exposed to high winds, the stake may be withdrawn when the plants are in bloom, and, notwithstanding the weight of three or four immense flowers, will not break down. One of the features that even the most glowing catalogue descriptions have failed to extol sufficiently is the charming grassy foliage that adorns the flowering stem quite to the peduncle. This, a feature in which L. Harrisii is weak, is one of the traits that will prove a formidable auxiliary in wresting from the Bermuda lily the supremacy it has so long enjoyed."

Brilliance of Poppies.

We grow few flowers that make a grander show during their short period of bloom than the annual poppies. They come, single and double, in a great variety of shades and colors, different heights, habits, foliage, etc., and all are good. Some sorts become so well established in California that each year they are self-grown and so always with us. If your space reserved for them is limited it will pay you well to give them a judicious thinning as best results never come from plants too thickly grown. Now is the season for planting.

Improved Freesias.

Freesias have always been an old garden favorite, not only for the ease with which they can be grown, but because of their exquisite fragrance, the strongest of all garden flowers yet offensive to none. The latest improvements consist in purity of color—an elaborate white, and much larger flowers than are produced in the strains generally grown. Those who have not tried them have but a faint idea of the advancement toward the ideal made by freesia growers in the past few years.

ARBOR DAY.

ENTHUSIASM INSTEAD OF GOOD JUDGMENT TOO OFTEN PREVAILS.

ARBOR DAY is nearly a half-century old at present, and has been officially recognized just forty years, Nebraska giving it recognition in 1872. The celebration of this day has, upon the whole, been beneficial and in many cases a grand uplift from an educational standpoint. Even where the work has been poorly done and afterward wholly neglected (as has been the rule rather than the exception) the agitation in favor of tree planting, especially along streets, has not been without a wholesome effect. The greatest good from celebration of this day has come, however, from planting schoolgrounds, for these are under the eye of many for certain periods throughout the year, and therefore the labor has not always been a dead loss.

The American Forestry Association met in Cincinnati in 1882 and there first inaugurated Arbor Day planting of school grounds. At present the day is so celebrated, to some extent, in every State of our country, and many parts of Europe and elsewhere. Too much of the sentimental and altogether too little of the practical has everywhere marked the celebrations. Even in Los Angeles every Arbor Day programme has been open to serious and well-merited criticism from practical tree planters, and that of the current year is no exception to the rule. No doubt, however, much permanent good will be accomplished, and we must be thankful for slight gains. Self-constituted "committees" without any knowledge of trees or their requirements are generally at the head and front in every center of population, and these succeed in dragging into the movement nearly all municipal officials from Mayor down to the least in the list. There has not been an Arbor Day celebration in Los Angeles for a number of years except one or more of the most practical of our public officials has told the writer that he (or they) thought the exercises, in whole or part, mere foolishness. Too many of the trees planted with enthusiastic ceremony in March have died of neglect by July, and others dedicated to Washington or Lincoln by some "society" have shared the same fate, or if living are never again seen by the planters, who next year repeat the same foolishness elsewhere. Only suitable trees, properly planted where needed, and assured of subsequent care, should be considered.

Eucalypts in Parks.

In years bygone we have made good use of eucalypts in our city parks by reason of their rapid growth and small requirements in the way of care. The day of their planting is over, the use of those existing at least in the smaller parks, is past, and they should gradually be removed, giving place to better trees. Where they are present our parks have a poverty-stricken appearance, to our own people at least, and the park department will find their work better supported if they give us more to be proud of in the way of richer vegetation. The day of "anything so it is a plant" is past in Los Angeles, for our parks all suffer by contrast with the more richly-planted private premises.

Planting School Grounds.

Schoolyards should not be planted with a view to shade or comfort alone for the same trees that have a added educational value will furnish all that is required of any. Not only in themselves do the value of these lie, but their planting and subsequent care may be used to impart much-needed and valuable instruction to the pupils attending. Too many of our young people, and altogether too many adults think that all that is necessary to start forests or orchards is to dig small holes, put in "nice little trees" and water them at time of planting. It is this class of work that has brought Arbor Day planting into such derisions. Schoolgrounds should be the special pride of every community and those living nearest should watch over the planting and the planted.

Planting the Railways.

In the West we note a growing appreciation of the movement to beautify the steel highways, a movement now in popular favor and under full swing on the Atlantic Coast. Our local lines, both steam and electric, are each year giving the matter more time and attention. It is a highly contagious work, for it stimulates both towns and rural districts to clean up and plant streets and highways as well as to improve private places. We shall yet see the day when all railway embankments will be permanently planted with suitable shrubbery.

Oaks for Street Planting.

There is a growing appreciation of oaks for street planting throughout our own and foreign countries. In California, especially in the south, sentiment has moved us to plant live oaks, largely because they are becoming scarcer each year. When intelligently treated, they form ideal street trees, but large holes for them should be dug and plenty of water supplied for the first five years of their life. After that one would have little to fear. In a list of the best ten street trees, compiled by two men, one of whom traveled in Europe, the other in the United States and Canada, the oaks have the first six places. In our own State the cork oak will certainly prove more satisfactory in every way than our native live oak. In Europe a native deciduous species is largely used, known to us as the English oak (Quercus pedunculata) a tree somewhat grown in Southern California and for a deciduous tree is fairly satisfactory. Grown for a summer shade, it is very satisfactory in the garden, and is a handsome tree. Avenues of this tree are quite common throughout Central Europe, and the city of Hamburg, in Germany, has grown right into the ancient forest of this oak, so that many of these arboreal giants are now in the city proper. Oaks have been extensively planted of late years in Washington, Boston, and many of the larger eastern cities. The red oak (Q. rubra) holds first place, with the pin oak (Q. palustris) a close second. Neither grows well in Southern California, but both do better in the north end of the State. As both are deciduous and we are a land of evergreens, their absence disturbs us not.

EUCALYPTUS IN HOLLENBECK PARK.

White Elm for Streets.

Some of our settlers from nearly every State in the eastern half of our country wish to plant one or more streets that look like those "back home," and nearly all believe this may best be accomplished by using the American or white elm. The question often reaches us as to its requirements and behavior in this State. This tree prefers a deep, alluvial loam which is always moist, not far to water, and rich in plant food. In bottom lands where little alkali is present it may safely be planted and will make a very satisfactorily growth. If one has these conditions and desires a deciduous tree in a land of evergreens, the elm will come as near to the desired standard as any tree that could be grown.

East San Jose and Billboards.

The Superior Court of Santa Clara county has refused to issue an injunction restraining the police from removing obnoxious billboards. The opinion handed down says in part: "That which is offensive to the eyes or to public morals is a subject for police regulation the same as noisome odors or other nuisances. A man has no more right to flaunt a vulgar display on a billboard in the face of the public, than he would to offend the sense of smell by burning sulphur on the corners of the streets of the city." As to the legality of this opinion when the higher courts get through with it, we have some doubts, but as to the justice of it there is none whatsoever. It would seem that on all questions of law the hair-splitting becomes finer each generation until law has become a science to the total exclusion of justice. A noted statistician has proven that the percentage of fatalities in the United States is greater among railroad brakemen than it is in the ranks of our murderers. We have altogether too many fine legal points drawn in cases where a decided public nuisance is manifest and acknowledged by nine-tenths of the public. It may be true, as has been recorded these many years, that "law is founded on justice," but the superstructure has some mighty weak upper floors, and one of these might well be designated "the billboard story;" the "story of the billboard" is written on every landscape, to the shame of our lawmakers or courts, or both.

Practical Poultry Culture in the Southwest.

DEVOTED TO THE INTERESTS OF STANDARD-BRED POULTRY AND THE PEOPLE WHO GROW IT.

OSTRICH INCUBATOR.

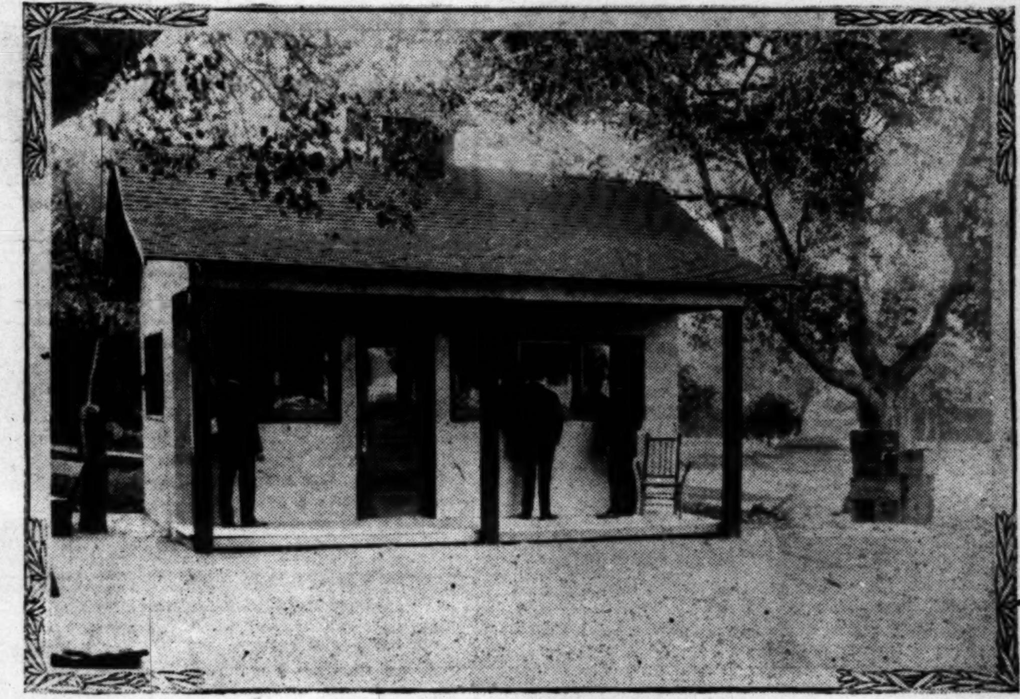
MODEL HOUSE OF CONCRETE AT SOUTH PASADENA FARM.

By Henry W. Kruckeberg.

NOTE.—Short articles of a practical nature are cordially solicited from breeders and fanciers, relating their experience with poultry, giving their successes as well as failures. The writer will be glad, in so far as lies in his power, to answer inquiries of public interest bearing on any phase of an enlightened poultry culture, such as feeding and management, disease and its prevention, market conditions, fancy points, etc. The co-operation of utility breeders and fanciers is cordially solicited, to the end that the best thought and practice in an enlightened poultry culture may find a healthy expression in these columns.

A Model Ostrich Incubator House.

ARTIFICIAL hatching has become so much of a pronounced success that its application is being extended quite a little beyond the incubation of chicken eggs. Turkey, duck and goose eggs are as regularly hatched in incubators and the young reared in brooders as those of the ordinary barnyard fowls. Possibly the most important acquisition to the wooden hen (certainly so in size) is the incubation of ostrich eggs, which has been successfully carried on by ostrich breeders in Southern California for the past few years, the most pronounced success having been attained by the South Pasadena Ostrich Farm. On the grounds of this establishment has been built a handsome incubator and brooder-house, with a capacity of about 100 ostrich eggs, and the brooder apartment capable of accommodating some fifty youngsters. The edifice is built of concrete walls and floors and a wooden roof, this material affording a reasonable even temperature during all kinds of weather. Hatching is done every day in the year.



INCUBATOR AND BROODER HOUSE, CAWSTON OSTRICH FARM.

The period of incubation with ostrich eggs is forty days, fertility averaging about 65 per cent. The chicks are allowed to dry off in the incubator for twenty-four hours, much the same as with chickens. After that period they are transferred to the brooder and given a ration of fine-cut alfalfa, dry bone and fine-ground grit. If the weather is pleasant their duration is quite limited to the brooder-house, as they are given outside runs at once; during the winter and rainy season, however, they are confined to the brooder-house until the weather is more favorable. In about a fortnight the chicks are given sparingly a ration consisting of cracked corn and bran worked up into a mash, and are then allowed range over a field of alfalfa. At the expiration of about three months the young commence to shed their baby feathers, gradually putting on the adult plumage which constitutes such an important article of commerce. The ostrich is a long-lived bird, the average age being about sixty years. It reaches its full growth from four to five years, and its greatest commercial value from the ages of six to forty years.

Look Out for Head Lice.

No, it is not an old-fashioned idea, which has been discarded, that of greasing the heads of little chicks with lard or oil or vaseline. With a hen mother, one should grease every chick head, and the mother's head, but not till the chicks are hatched. If grease get to the eggs, it will kill the chicks in them, if in any quantity, No matter how neat one is in all the appointments of the chicken yard, this little head louse manages to get to little chicks from the mother, and bores down into the head of the chick for its living. When one sees a little chick droopy, standing about with eyes closed, instead of hustling, it is pretty sure to be the trouble—a louse is boring. Pick up the chick, and carefully rub a little lard or oil or vaseline on the top of the head. The thing will let go as soon as the grease gets to it, and one can often take it off with the finger nail. They cannot live in grease. Avoid an overdose, that would run into the eyes and nose. Coal oil has been recommended for the head treatment, and is probably all right, but is more likely to trouble the eyes. Many grease also under the bill. The chicks should all be greased three times, a week apart, and any time one is droopy. If an incubator chick gets droopy, one may find an isolated case of louse in the brooder, though of course without a mother hen there is small source for the trouble, and no greasing of incubator chicks' heads necessary.

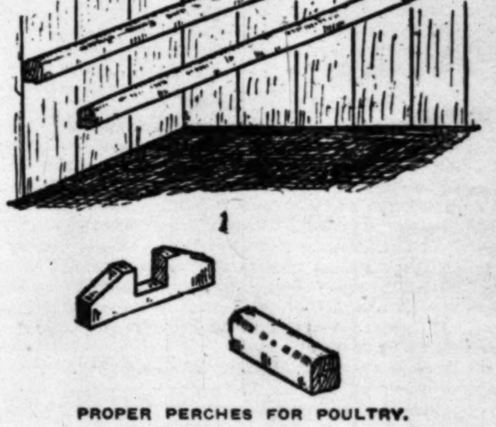
About Coal Oil.

Much has been written and said against using coal oil as a remedy for throat trouble and roup, but the stuff has real value if properly used. The writer has grown black-breasted red game bantams. They take cold easily after a rain, or if out during a rain. They will never perch in a house unless obliged to do so, having wings snugly cut, and no outdoor perching places within reach. They will steal nests in most unexpected places and get caught in the rain, when they will surely take cold. Nothing will help a black-breasted red game bantam with a sudden cold more or quicker than a few drops of coal oil run down the throat from a spoon. Take hold of the lower part of the bill with the thum and finger, and pulling it out, a nice throat way to the crop will present itself, and the oil can quickly drop from a spoon and run over inflamed parts. The bird will breathe hard for a minute only, and be better in an hour. It is better to drop four drops than two. It is a good and simple remedy for any fowl with a cold, but it should not be spilled over the bird carelessly. To give it in the early stage of the cold is being humane, being a preventive of further suffering.

In cases of pip, or where there is a tiny worm in the throat, one dose of coal oil will kill the worm and it will digest. When a stag cock is cross and nervous, if given a dose carefully, he will probably pass a bunch of long round worms, and get promptly over his indisposition. The only trouble with giving coal oil lies in an overdose. It does not blister, as many think, unless bound tightly upon the outer surface of flesh for a long time.

Building Proper Perches.

It is distressing to note the number of chicken-houses built with perches ascending one over anoth like the rounds of a ladder or the gradual rise of steps. Perches of this kind are not only wholly injurious to a flock of fowl, because all make desperate attempts to purchase on the to inducing a corresponding tendency to crowd. A ter of fact, perches should be on a level. In th the heavy breeds, like the Americans and A to 15 inches from the floor is quite sufficient, w the lighter breeds a few inches higher can do Touching their method of construction the acc ing illustration will afford a very good idea. T nary 2x2, champfer off the sharp edges, fit slats as indicated, and you have a first-class perch, easily cleaned and always ready. B keeping the sockets well oiled with liqu killer all chance of vermin getting a lodgm removed.



PROPER PERCHES FOR POULTRY.

Now that the growing stock is coming on, a caution will not be out of place, regarding th sters. Do not allow them to roost on perche least four months old; too early perching is cause of crooked breastbones.

Scratchings.

Offspring will be more uniform if hens in the pen are full sisters, and male somewhat relate Never use a male for breeding under ten mont

The Blind Senator.

From New York Sun.

OW did a blind man ever get into the United States Senate? For that matter, how did a blind man ever have the courage to pick out that par- lar career and to make it the object of his greatest ition?

here is one answer to both questions. He did it by g Thomas P. Gore.

ing Thomas P. Gore means a good many things. It s being 37 years old, in perfect health, of indomi- will and unlimited energy. It means being by s a good fighter and a generous conciliator. It s the ability to get and to keep friends.

means, moreover, having had a good mind to start and having given it twenty-five years of almost un- pied training. And if that isn't enough to explain Senatorship, it means having Mrs. Thomas P. Gore wife and helpmeet.

en the present Senator was only 7 or 8 years old he accidentally struck in the left eye by a stick which panion threw down. The whole thing was an acci- the stick rebounding and striking him on the under of the eyeball. Some injury to the optic nerve re- l and the sight gradually failed in that eye.

would be further from the truth than to pic- as a semi-dependent drag upon his friends. ginative correspondents have described his s inseparable companion, going wherever he ng upon the platform during his campaign nd either leading or following him around ll nonsense. The other day when a Sun reporter called at the hotel where Senator Gore lives in Washington the Senator had gone off to New York on business, and according to his custom he had gone all by himself.

He almost invariably travels alone. He has made a campaign tour of half a dozen States and done it quite alone. That's the kind of man he is. A man who has learned to depend first of all on himself—and then on others.

The stories of his wife campaigning with him are not true. She explains quite simply that she would have liked to go with him, but that "traveling costs twice as much for two as for one, and I felt that we could not afford it."

It is not by being constantly with him that she contributes her share to her husband's success, but by reading to him. He has the courage and the will for everything else, but that is the thing others must do.

Before Oklahoma was admitted, when, as Mrs. Gore says, "we knew Statehood was coming," they spent months reading and studying works on economics and constitutional law and history. When the time came for the campaign for the Senatorship, the trained memory of the blind candidate was stored with facts which he had at his absolute command. As a rule, all he needed to do when he wanted to prepare a speech was to go into a quiet room with a book in his hand and cogitate, as he calls it.

He is an inveterate worker. When he is not gaining knowledge through being read to he is assimilating it by cogitation. Sometimes, out of mistaken kindness, people rob him of the time he wants to spend at the latter occupation.

Another man could surround himself with books and papers so that anybody could see that he was occupied. But they see Gore sitting by himself on the train or in a hotel and think he must be in need of entertainment, which they proceed to supply.

"And I didn't have any time to cogitate!" will be his lament later to his wife.

Not that he doesn't want companionship. It is only when he has a speech on hand, or something of that sort, that he objects to having his cogitation interfered with. He is a good fellow among men, and is also, by his wife's own account, fond of the ladies.

But his one insatiable passion is for reading. Science, especially the science of government, economic subjects, and above all the Bible and masterpieces of oratory, these are the things he cares most for. But although he loves to hear the Bible read, he is "not much of a church goer."

Through his hearing and his speaking he does all his work. He never writes anything himself. He did learn to use a typewriter, but never liked it, and depends altogether on dictation. He can sign his name, but it is not a triumph of legibility.

Ears and a tongue seem to be enough for him. Every morning his wife reads the daily paper to him and anything else that he needs. His younger brother, Dixie Gore, is his private secretary and goes through his correspondence as any one's secretary would.

Even people who are not blind dictate their replies just as Senator Gore does. The difference is that he keeps in his mind, always at his command, a hundred times as much exact information as most seeing persons keep in their minds.

In his home town, Lawton, Senator Gore goes and comes without any escort whatever. In Washington, however, he has not begun to go about alone. There are wide, automobile-infested driveways to be crossed around the Capitol, whose entrances also are complicated medleys of steps and archways, swinging doors and preoccupied pedestrians.

He has the subtle sense of perception which is not uncommon in the blind. Sometimes when he is walking along he will sense the nearness of steps, or a wall, or some object.

In his home town the telephone and telegraph poles are along the edge of the sidewalk. Often when walking with his wife he will put out his hand and touch one of these poles as unerringly as if he had eyes to see them.

He says that it is something he cannot explain and something that he can neither control nor depend upon.

"If I should try to feel the nearness of objects," he says, "I could not do it. I can't depend upon feeling it, anyway. I might walk off a dozen flights of steps for once that I would know enough not to."

It isn't to be wondered at the Senator Gore is not an enthusiast on the subject of outdoor life as it is expounded by the President, for instance. There is not much in it for him. Yet he is a great lover of nature as he feels it.

He loves trees and flowers, especially the fragrant ones, with roses and southern honeysuckle in the lead. Their place in Lawton has more trees and shrubs than any other place in town, though it is what Mrs. Gore calls "a little home."

And most of these trees and shrubs were set out by the Senator himself. But his love for flowers and trees does not include animals. He has no use on earth for either dogs or cats.

In fact, aside from his friends and family there is only one thing of really great interest to him, and that is his work. He has plenty cut out for him in the near future.

As he drew the short term, he will be out of the Senate in two years unless reëlected in the meantime. So next summer, although he has just finished one campaign, he must go to work on another. Fortunately he is perfectly well and strong, so the prospect has no terrors for him.

It is because he has always crowded his life with work that he has made his blindness a matter of such small importance, for it really seems that to him. The handicap which looms so big to the outsider he simply does not waste time thinking about. Here is a little incident which shows how completely he has effaced the consciousness of it from his life.

His wife suffers with asthma in Oklahoma, and a year or two ago her husband urged her to go away for the winter so as to escape it. In talking about it, he said to her:

"Your ill-health is the only misfortune we have."

"Why," said his wife, "most people would think your blindness was our great misfortune."

"Oh," he said, "I never think of that."

Apparently he does not. He is too busy thinking of work. Undoubtedly the fact of his blindness made people feel kindly toward him when he became a candidate for Senator. But he had to fight for success.

There were four candidates, two of them being strong ones, and the blind man asked no quarter. He made the fight as any other man would have made it, and he expects to serve his State as other men serve it.

It may be thought that he will be handicapped when it comes to following a discussion in the Senate chamber, because he cannot see who is speaking. But the voices will soon become as familiar to him as the faces are to other men. Besides this, every person who addresses the Senate is recognized specifically by the Vice-President as "the Senator from ——," whatever State it may be. With the far greater than ordinary concentration of attention which Gore will be capable of giving, he will doubtless keep better track than most members do of what is going on.

THE RISING OF THE SINK.

[The peculiarity of certain western streams in disappearing under the ground upon reaching a stretch of desert, to rise again further on, purer and stronger than before, is probably too well understood to require explanation here. It is this phenomenon which is alluded to in these verses.]

I found it where in crystal it came bubbling from its fount,
And followed where in silver it went tumbling down the mount,
Rolling, flashing, darting, dashing, over boulder-bordered bed,
To the smoother lower levels of the mighty range it led—
And its gay; impulsive spirit, careless, buoyant, free,
Seemed the liquid incarnation of my childhood unto me.

Down the pleasant-visaged valley still it held its eager course,
Drawing freshness from the breezes, from its branches gaining force;
Deepening, spreading, forward heading, undefiled by froth or surge,
Crystal-clear it reached the open where the greater streams converge.
Then the spirit of the streamlet rose before me and, in sooth,
Knew I then the steady purpose and the promise of my youth.

At length it flowed a river, which, resistless, broad and strong,
Carried everything before it as it rushed in might along—
Surging, swirling, roaring, whirling, forcing restlessly ahead,
Through the fertile upland meadows to the boundless plains it led.
In the mist above the waters I beheld a spirit rise;
And my manhood's strong endeavor was unfolded to my eyes.

In a sheet of snowy splendor from the mesa's lofty brow,
A triumphant flag of victory, broke the conquering river now;
Roaring, thundering, tearing, sundering, moistening a mile of land
Ere it settled in the sagebrush, stifled by the desert sand,
At the last, least weed-choked puddle, bitter, salty, alkaline,
Lingered I in sad reflection o'er this misspent life of mine;
And the mocking, imp-faced figures, countermarching in the scum,
Wak'd in me dark premonitions of the end that is to come.

But the cowboys at the rancho tell me how, down at the Pass,
Where the ranges run together and the sand gives way to grass,
There's glorious crystal fountain, where the river comes again
To its own, to ever after roll adown the haunts of men,
Quieter flowing, calmer growing, ever moving peacefully,
Till it finds its final haven in the bosom of the sea.

So I journey on the morrow, full of hope and joy and life,
Burning with determination to essay again the strife:
Eager only for the moment when I stand upon the brink
And once more drink inspiration at the "Rising of the Sink."

QUIPS.

It embitters the poor ropemaker to think that at least a hundred men a day die natural deaths who ought to have been hanged.

When he says: "I am not worthy of your love," many a girl makes the mistake of her life in not taking him at his word.

Nothing takes the conceit out of you so completely as a crayon portrait of yourself done by an amateur.

A man thinks highly of the poetical quality of his love letters till they are read out in a breach-of-promise case.

A Pasadena girl was annoyed, on going to the shoemaker's to get her father a pair of cheap slippers, to be offered the same pair she worked for the minister's Christmas gift.

Many a wife would never know her husband was a jolly good fellow if she didn't hear his friends roaring out the fact every Saturday night while helping him home

FIELD NOTES.

Freakish Orange Bloom.

A FRIEND writes that I ought to see his orange trees. They were in full bloom a month ago, and had ripe and green fruit mingled with the blossoms. He has just a few trees about his dooryard. This phenomenon is very common in the south, but it is not a good indication. On the contrary, it is evidence of unnatural conditions, and should be corrected if any one knew how to do it. I have been convinced for years that this abnormal winter blooming has its origin in the fall treatment of the trees, or lack of treatment. It is less frequent in trees that have regular habits of growth. No doubt it is the inclination of all citrus trees to be ever-blooming. It is a most estimable habit in the lemon, and everything possible is done to keep this tree blooming, especially preceding all seasons of market activities. The subject of off-blooming in oranges should be carefully studied by our pathological authorities, as I know of no one now able to explain the cause of this appearance in a satisfactory manner.

Crane Flies.

LARGE tracts of pasture lands in the upper portions of the Sacramento have been injured by an insect in its larval form, known as the Crane Fly. In some cases the pasture has been entirely destroyed. But the work of this insect will soon cease, as the transformation to the adult and harmless stage is about completed. Entomologists tell us that this fly occurs scarcely once in a decade, and it has been about twelve years since its last appearance here. The fly does its work by eating the grass roots just below the surface of the soil. Though its destruction of verdure is great, no remedy is practicable or necessary unless the fly makes its appearance more frequently. Perhaps the overflow of last March brought about the most favorable conditions for its multiplication. I was told that the great inundation of Sutter county last spring killed every gopher in the district except those burrowing in the levee, and all the jack rabbits were drowned along with the gophers.

Treating Fence Posts.

AS dimension stuffs get scarcer and more expensive the problem of preserving woods used by farmers and city property owners becomes more acute. It is well to know that experiments have shown that many remedies for timber decay and subterfuges such as setting posts small end down are practically valueless in preventing post decay. Piling stone around the base, setting in concrete and drainage do not pay for the cost in protective effect. Charring the posts, painting, soaking in copper sulphate and covering with coal tar have their merits, but there is one preservative so much better than any named above that it is now being generally recommended. It is the creosote process.

In every case, whether treated or untreated, only seasoned timber should be used. Decay is universally attributed to the attacks of fungous or bacterial germs. These influences cannot prevail to any great extent where water, air and other growing conditions are prevented from leading the germs into the wood tissues. Creosote, applied at a temperature of about 215 degrees, is by far the best preserving process ever tried.

The following conclusions as to selection and preparation of fence posts may be of value:

The resistance of all treated posts to decay is alike, regardless of the kind of wood used; hence only the cheaper woods should be used, and the more valuable kinds should be saved for other purposes. Since sapwood can be impregnated better than heartwood, posts with much sapwood are the best.

Posts cut from woods whose heartwood cannot be treated are best left round. When the heartwood takes treatment readily either round or split posts may be used.

Posts should be air dry before they are treated or set. They should be cut at least a month before treatment. Wood dries fastest in spring or summer, but with those species which check badly, such as the oaks, cutting is best done in autumn or early winter.

Even the inner bark should be removed before the posts are treated or set, especially from that part of the post submerged in the creosote. Bark reduces the penetration of creosote into the wood, besides itself absorbing the creosote without increasing the durability of the post.

The tops of posts should be cut slanting, preferably with an ax, so that rain water will not remain on them. When they are cut with a saw the pitch should be greater, especially in posts in which there is a marked difference in hardness between the springwood and the summer wood.

Fruit Fly Damage.

IT is profitable to remind the fruit growers of California that they have to contend against only a portion of the destructive insect species of the world. It may seem to the growers that they have the major portion, but this is not the case, though the number of insect enemies here is certainly sufficient. In looking over a badly-infested district in this State, we should note the absence of the Gypsy moth, white fly, melon maggot, Mexican orange maggot, white scale, brown-tailed moth, most of the destructive webmaking caterpillars, possibly the phylloxera, the army worm, Florida red scale, chinch bug, tomato fruit worm, the long scale, Colorado potato "bug," and above all the absence of the many fruit flies. Many other major and many minor pests could be added to this list of absentees, such as the seventeen-year locust, the green bug, the Hessian fly, the Japanese apple borer and so on almost indefinitely. These lists present strong though negative encouragement, for we may get many of these pests, "if we don't watch out."

According to the Journal of Agriculture, West Australia is suffering from wide destruction in fruits caused by the work of the fruit fly. A late number states that the damage from this source is great. The Journal says:

"The destruction of condemned fruit this year was a heavy burden on our facilities for such work. Owing to the inability of the City Council to deal with our condemned stuff at the rubbish destructor, from the beginning of February onward, our steam boilers were used for the purpose of burning all rejected stuff. The quantity, some days, was far beyond our capacity, and the nuisance of the congestion of such stuff can be readily imagined. After destroying about 1200 cases of all sorts we are satisfied that some better arrangement will have to be made for next season.

"Besides the coal and labor chargeable to this work there is also the corresponding cleaning of the boiler tubes and flues, which become coated with the products of combustion, all of which tend to reduce the steaming power of a boiler and impede our routine work. A small fruit incinerator will have to be provided for this special work, as the probability of the quantity of fly-punctured stuff diminishing is remote."

Pear Blight Conditions.

I HAD the pleasure of driving through a large portion of Sutter county a few days ago, and wish to convey to the readers of The Times some idea of the devastation of one fruit disease in that section. Pear blight in the upper Sacramento Valley has so nearly ruined the pear industry that even real estate agents have ceased to avoid the subject. A few years ago this part of California was famous for the quantity and quality of its Bartlett pears. It is yet famous for the quality where the growers have taken extraordinary care in fighting the disease, but growing this fruit will soon be abandoned altogether unless concerted and thorough means of control are adopted. Now there are less than a half-dozen pear orchards in Sutter county that will stand the strain two years longer. It is a pitiful sight to see these once typical, perfect orchards now coming to absolute ruin, and scores have already arrived at that point and have been removed by the stump puller. My visit was to see the conditions, and with a convention of pear growers to try to decide whether it will pay to fight the blight further or abandon the industry for a few years, clean out all the pear trees and make a new start.

One of the reasons that will make for the abandonment of the pear in Sutter county is, the magnificent results in other lines of fruit culture that have blessed the growers lately. Large plantations of splendid peach trees everywhere greet the eye. At twenty years of age these trees are full of vigor. No signs of tree decay are visible. Every other farmer seemed to be putting out another peach orchard, canning clings being the varieties in nearly every case. Sutter county is planting grapes this spring by hundreds of acres, and the vineyards already growing are free from all insect pests and diseases. It is a fact that the phylloxera is not known in this county, and the local authorities are watching at every turn to prevent the introduction of this pest. No rooted vines are allowed to be brought into the county. I think I saw a million vines of the Thompson's Seedless grape, every vine as sturdy a specimen as could be found. Apricot culture has been abandoned in the section I visited, but prune orchards were a veritable gold mine last season. I was shown orchards that netted $300 and $400 per acre. No new prune planting was observed, however, and this leads to the statement that peaches and grapes will be the leading fruit industries of Sutter county. A fig orchard of 100 acres is to be planted this spring by a man who has made a fortune drying figs purchased near Yuba City, the county seat. He told me he would plant entirely to the White Adriatic. I saw near the city one of the largest and finest fig orchards in the State, and these trees make the prettiest sight of any deciduous trees in the world, standing beautiful, picturesque and of extreme vigor, in the summer time actually covering the ground with shade. I saw a row of black walnut trees that had 100,000 feet of lumber in it.

White Fly Campaign.

I HAVE just gone over the formerly infected territory at Marysville and Oroville. It may be infected yet. It will require a year of constant watchfulness to determine whether the fly will appear again at these points of infestation. Within a few days I expect to visit the Tevis ranch at Bakersfield, and will then have a pretty fair idea of present conditions at all places. This is a short sketch of the outlook at the present writing.

At Marysville three trusted employés of the State are on guard. They are making a plant-to-plant inspection, examining especially all the foliage of the citrus trees that had grown last fall and looking out for all possible food plants not included for defoliation in last summer's order. After these men have thus gone over the whole town two of them will be removed and the foreman of the work left on guard for a year, if any of the flies appear at emergent times. The workmen have all the plats and records of last summer's campaign and are making a most systematic inspection.

At Oroville the work planned last fall has all been completed. This work included the complete defoliation of twelve full blocks, including and surrounding all the trees upon which the fly had colonized. Whol of fine orange trees now bear only the main tr mark the place so recently embowered in orang Outside this twelve-block district every citrus or food plant has been defoliated, or fumigated, moved. This work covered eighty-seven blocks city—the entire area with the twelve defoliated making ninety-nine blocks treated during the months. As it was impossible to find a single men of the fly outside the twelve-block district, it fair to say that the pest is now entirely under Two men will be on constant watch at Oroville out the year. At the Tevis ranch, Bakersfield, Carnes and Strong are fumigating for the thir while this is being written. Our most careful could not find a living fly after the second fu and the present treatment is only to make doubly sure—a good policy where such a peril met. The outlook is most encouraging for th wiping out of this pest. Six months hence we know more positively. If it is done the work most remarkable. I have heard of only one case an insect pest had been wiped out after having come established. At Liverpool a large field had infested with the Colorado potato bug. The auth cut away all verdure and sifted the soil with a fine for several inches deep. I wish it were possible to thorough in fighting our insect foes without de all verdure. Let us hope that care and persiste utterly destroy the white fly.

The veteran, stroking his long, white whiskers, over the landscape with glittering eye.

"Yes," he said excitedly, "here's where we fo licked 'em. Have you got any relics of the bat

"Sure," replied the guide. "John, go back to the and mould the gentleman a pound of bullets, the blacksmith to hammer out one of them brok cers' swords."

Pines and Bananas.

SENOR MANUEL CUESTA, Mexican Consul stationed at Calexico, has plans maturing for a series of experiments at Mexicali, just across the international line, to demonstrate the fitness of the soil and climate for raising pineapples, bananas and Smyrna figs. The Calexico Chronicle says Señor Cuesta has experimented on a small scale in this line, and within a few weeks will have experimental gardens installed at the Mexican town, which gives promise of becoming one of the show places of the Imperial Valley.

Consul Cuesta is convinced that a highly profitable industry in the growing of bananas and pineapples can be developed in the Mexican territory, and that the growing of beniquen, or sisal hemp, will also prove a source of much profit. He has samples of fiber and rope manufactured from it produced near here which he claims is superior to much of the fiber now on the market. Another feature of Señor Cuesta's experimental garden will be an attempt to mature coffee plants.

Indio's Dewberry Gardens.

INDIO is the pioneer in many of the profitable crops of the valley, and with none has she met with more success than with the raising of early dewberries. At F. [illegible]. Johnson's ranch, just west of town, can be seen vines of the Guardino variety, which yielded this past year at the rate of $900 an acre. Pretty big money, isn't it? But it's true, and isn't just the result of a lucky year, but is standard crop, which gives assurance of such large returns because the berries ripen one month earlier than they do in Los Angeles. They sold last year for $1.35 a three-pound basket f. o. b. Indio. Commencing to bear about April 15, they last until the middle of July. The best method has been found to allow the vine to run along the ground, getting in this way the heat of the earth.—[Submarine.

Onion Scenter.

GRIDLEY is getting to be a center for growing of the odoriferous onion, and in the future it may be possible that a Gridley man can be identified by the smell of that vegetable on his breath and clothes.

During the past few weeks a local dealer has sold for planting over 5000 pounds of onion sets, besides many pounds of seed. This is, according to the Sacramento wholesalers' figures, more onion sets than have been sold to all the other towns of the Sacramento Valley put together this spring.

This same firm has sold two carloads of Early Rose potatoes for planting this spring. The most of the vegetable planting is being done by the residents of the Gridley Colonies.—[Gridley Herald.

Peat Alcohol.

ALTHOUGH alcohol was obtained from peat as long ago as 1870, the first attempt at manufacture on an industrial scale seems to have been begun by Reynaud in nmark in 1905. The peat was heated with dilute sulphuric acid, and the sugar solution so obtained was fermented with a special yeast. In this way some thousands of gallons of alcohol were produced last year at lborg. The fermented liquid, however, contained not more than 1 per cent. of alcohol, and the concentration of so weak a spirit promised very doubtful profits. But better results, however, are claimed from independent experiments by Herr Frestidius and Baron Fock. Ordinary peat containing 62 per cent. of water was boiled fifteen minutes with dilute sulphuric acid in a copper vessel, under a pressure of three atmospheres, and the liquid was then pressed out, the excess of acid neutralized with chalk, and after filtration the resulting solution was fermented. This product yielded 5½ per cent. of alcohol, corresponding to about twenty gallons of absolute alcohol from 500 pounds of peat.—[American Cultivator.

Taro.

A VALUED subscriber sends us an interesting article prepared by Dr. Charles B. Cooper, of Hawaii, regarding a plant which is quite common in Florida, from which the following is extracted, the entire paper being a little too "professional" for the Agriculturist:

Taro, botanically known as colocasia, antiquorum esculentum, is a perennial plant from one to three feet high, with heart-shaped peltate leaves and large fleshy rootstocks.

From remote antiquity taro has furnished an important item of the food supply of the nations of Southern Asia, Australia, portions of Africa and many of the islands of the Pacific, and is today one of the plants most commonly cultivated throughout the Tropics. The taro cultivated for food may be one of a number of the varieties of colocasia, there being no less than forty-five separate strains known to the Hawaiian people. Chinese literature makes mention of this plant as far back as 100 [illegible]

The chief food of the native Hawaiian is still, as it has been from time immemorial, poi, a fermented paste prepared from the farinaceous tubers of the taro.

Foreign residents also make extensive use of the taro [illegible], and it can be prepared in a great variety of ways to make most appetizing and nutritious dishes for the [illegible] bill of fare. The leaves of the young plant when cooked as spinach are very delicious, rivaling that palatable dish.

The dry-land taros of which there are many varieties, usually require two years to reach maturity; while the [illegible]-land varieties mature in twelve or fourteen months and are depended on chiefly for the poi supply.

Taro is cultivated in patches of varying sizes. Each patch is surrounded by a dyke containing openings admitting water and allowing its exit. These patches are extremely irregular and depend on the contour of the land both as to size and shape. A valley containing one or two square miles will have, perhaps, 200 taro patches or fields, and hardly two of them will be alike in size or shape. Before planting the taro the water is allowed to drain off the fields; the ground is then dug up or plowed up and fertilized. The taro plant feeds heavily on phosphoric acid and potash, and removes a large amount of these elements from the soil. It is essential to add lime to the soil from time to time, and this dressing is applied after the removal of the crop, when the soil should then be thoroughly mixed and left bare for several weeks. The taro plant does not absorb fertilizers from the water except through its roots, and as its roots are in the soil beneath the main body of water, even though a large amount of soluble fertilizer is added to the irrigation water only a comparatively small portion will be absorbed by the mud at the bottom of the patch and in turn be taken up by the roots. Land taro or taro grown without irrigation, makes excellent poi, and does not seem as readily affected with the root rot as that grown under irrigation.

The land suitable for the cultivation of the water taro, the variety which is principally grown, is a rich, deep, muck soil, bordering the streams, or occupying the lowest portion of the valleys extending back into the mountains. Land to be capable of growing taro must have an abundant supply of running water, and it also needs to be very rich.—[Florida Agriculturist.

The Nasturtium.

THE nasturtium is one of the best annuals, both for bedding and for cut flowers. For bedding the foliage and flowers are attractive, and if the latter are cut regularly, both foliage and flowers are seen at all times. If allowed to go to seed they do not bloom well. It is best to cut the flowers every evening, and if beds are large this is quite a big task, but it keeps the beds gay all the season.

This, unlike most plants, flowers best in rather poor soil. When the soil is very rich there will be more leaves than flowers.

Do not be stingy with the seeds, but plant where there is a place for them; have them in large beds, but do not plant in the shade.

It is a good idea to plant a number of seeds in the vegetable garden for cut flowers. There is nothing prettier than a large bowl of the nasturtiums; then, they are such a cheerful flower.

It is best to plant them in beds on the level with the surrounding surface, as the raised beds dry out so quickly. I find best, unless one has some special provision for watering them, to have them where so much moisture will not be required.

A Remarkable Pecan Tree.

A PECAN grove is generally considered as being a probably profitable investment, but we do not think that the possibilities of pecan trees are well understood. The following, from the American Nut Journal, will give one instance of the remarkable productiveness of these trees in favorable conditions:

While it is never safe to draw general conclusions from a single tree or a single specimen, yet an individual pecan or any other fruit or nut tree of remarkable productivity is always interesting.

We generally associate heavy pecan crops from individual trees with the alluvial bottom lands of Texas or Louisiana or somewhere else in the lower South. But we have in mind a pecan tree in Raleigh, N. C., growing on the Piedmont clay with perhaps a little sand mixed with it. At any rate the land is very different from river bottom land, and in fact is in general very much like the soil on which a large number of pecan orchards have been planted west of the Mississippi River.

The tree in question stands on the property of Capt. B. P. Williamson, treasurer of Wake county, Raleigh, N. C., just behind his residence. It was grown from a nut obtained in Texas and planted by the late James F. Taylor. The tree is probably thirty-five years or so old. It commenced to bear when twelve years old from the seed and has not failed to produce a crop every year since. In the fall of 1905, when the editor photographed the tree, the crop was a little over 300 pounds. This season the crop will go about 400 pounds. In regard to the price obtained, Capt. Williamson writes:

"We sell all we can spare at 25 cents per pound; 400 pounds at 25 cents will bring $100, or 10 per cent. on $1000, or 5 per cent. on $2000." It is interesting to note how a business man regards his pecan tree.

The nuts are small in size, ovate, and of very fine quality, and the tree is a well-developed and exceedingly handsome specimen. There are a number of very fine pecan trees in the "City of Oaks," but this is the largest. A pecan tree like this is valuable.

Alaskan Farmers.

I READ in late dispatches that Uncle Sam will include in his census undertaking Alaska and Porto Rico. For the first time in its history, Alaska may report a few farmers. The President, himself once actually engaged in agriculture, has proclaimed a reservation of 1400 acres near Fairbanks, and farming has progressed to the planting of a few acres of this tract already, and next spring ten acres will be sown to grain and hay. It is believed by the special agent in charge that farming on an extensive scale will be practiced in the most favorable portions of Alaska soon. The expression "Good as old wheat in the bin" may be transplanted to the American polar regions. It would be curious to know what the price of home-grown hay at Fairbanks will be—whether it will be higher than that article in Southern California following a dry year.

EPHRUM AND HIS DOGS.

Ephrum Eels, he had to scratch durned hard to keep ahead—
 But he always kept three dogs.
He couldn't keep a dollar bill to save his life, they said—
 But he always kept three dogs.

He said he might have some one if he'd had half a chance,
But gettin' grub from day to day gave Ephrum such a dance
He never got where he should shed the patches of his pants—
 But he always kept three dogs.

Ephrum's young ones never looked as though they was half-fed,
 But he always kept three dogs.
The house would be so cold his folks would have to go to bed—
 But Ephrum kept those dogs.

One was a sort of setter and two of 'em was houn's.
Their skins was full of Satan; they was always on their roun's
Till people durned their pictures in half a dozen towns,
 But Ephrum kept his dogs.

They 'bated Ephrum's poll tax 'cause he was too poor to pay—
 But Ephrum kept his dogs.
How he scraped up cash to license 'em, it ain't in me to say,
 But I know he kept his dogs.

And when a sufferin' neighbor ambuscaded 'em, Eph swore—
Then in a kind of homesick way he shuffled round for more;
He struck a lucky bargain, and by thunder, he bought four—
 Jes kept on a-keepin' dogs.

The Contagion Superstition.

A VENTURA correspondent sends the following communication:

"In the Care of the Body of January 26 you seem to scout the idea that disease of any kind is contagious. Will you please explain the following coincidence?

"I was engaged in school teaching in the State of Iowa some forty years ago and had what was common in those days, an old-fashioned spelling-school. The people turned out, old and young, to this school until the schoolroom was packed. There was a young man in the room who came from an adjoining district where measles were prevalent and 'came down' with the measles. There had been none in my district prior to this time. A few days afterward, perhaps a dozen or more of my pupils came down with the disease in one afternoon, and it spread so rapidly among my seventy-five pupils that the school had to be discontinued for a time. Now, if they did not take the disease from this man, where did they get it?"

In reply to this, the editor of the Care of the Body cannot do better than once more to instance the case of seasickness, where a number of people are taken with the same symptoms, at one time. Nobody thinks of calling it an epidemic, or contagious. Nor do they when a number of people, being caught on the streets without an umbrella, during a rainstorm, get drenched.

Certain atmospheric conditions favor such diseases as smallpox, typhoid fever, diphtheria, etc. Then we have what is known as an "epidemic," the disease attacking those who have impurities in their blood, and graduated in severity according to the amount of impurities present. Cold, or damp, or hot, or impure, stagnant, unelectrified air and air pressure upon various functions of the body favor epidemics, but they will only affect those whose blood is impure.

By the way, if these diseases are "catching," will some eminent defendant of the contagion theory kindly explain how it is that some people who are fully exposed don't "catch" it? The only rational explanation is the theory mentioned in the preceding paragraph.

The following Associated Press dispatch from San Francisco was recently published, in The Times:

"Willard P. Hatch, who is delivering a series of free lectures on health throughout the State, contending that the use of medicine is unnecessary, has announced that he will allow himself to be inoculated with the germs of any disease, and will agree to work such germs out of his system without the use of medicine.

"Mr. Hatch says that pure blood is all that is necessary to secure immunity from disease, and in his lecture tells the public how, by a proper understanding of natural laws, perfect health may be secured and maintained. He says:

"'In the past fifty years the average human life has lengthened ten years. I prophesy that by the expiration of fifty years, thirty years more will be added to the average human life, and within the same space of time there will be a class of understanding people who will live without disease and without medicine, and who will be able to die with as little pain as they now go to sleep."

Mr. Hatch is quite right. In his book "As It Is," reviewed here a few months ago, Dr. M. J. Rodermund, of Milwaukee, told how, without any evil results, he sprayed the poisons of diphtheria, smallpox, scarlet fever, or consumption into the throat, or had them breathed into the lungs, repeating the experiment, in most cases, every one or two weeks, for months. He did not make "cultures" of these poisons and germs, but took the genuine stuff, directly from the patients, sometimes carrying quantities of smallpox and scarlet fever scale in his pocket for months. As he says, scarlet-fever scales, considered so terribly contagious, are nothing but sweat drops, with the water evaporated—principally urea and uric acid. We can scrape these same supposed dangerous scales from our body any day, especially those who bathe about once a year. The basis of all other "contagious" diseases is just as simple as this one. Yet, let a case of scarlet fever be discovered, and there is a great hue and cry. A minion of the political doctors comes around, tacks up a scarlet card—of itself enough to scare nervous people into fits—and the inmates are locked up, like dangerous wild beasts, although they have, perhaps, talked, and shaken hands, and even slept with scores of people, during the preceding twenty-four hours.

Leprosy is one of the most awful and most dreaded diseases that afflict humanity, and is generally regarded as being the most contagious, so that the very word "leper" has become a synonymn of something to be carefully avoided. In the Woman's Home Companion for January, Jack London, the writer, describes a visit he and his wife paid to the leper colony on the island of Molokai, where they remained a week, associating intimately with the unfortunate residents. London says:

"As regards the fear of leprosy itself, nowhere in the settlement, among lepers or non-lepers, did I see any sign of it. The chief horror of leprosy obtains in the minds of those who have never seen a leper, and who do not know anything about the disease. At the hotel at Waikiki, a lady expressed shuddering amazement at my having the hardihood to pay a visit to the settlement. On talking with her, I learned that she had been born in Honolulu, had lived there all her life, and had never laid eyes on a leper."

Leprosy, or any other skin disease, may be communicated from one person to another, as may syphilis, by direct contact, but the idea that you can catch this, or any other disease, from merely being in the vicinity of a person suffering therefrom, is a relic of barbarous superstition, that is kept alive by the political doctors, and causes a vast amount of unnecessary suffering.

Again, take the bubonic plague, that is giving trouble—and work for political doctors—in San Francisco. Following is from a recent editorial in the Medical Record, an "ethical" medical publication:

"In a report to the Fourteenth International Congress of Hygiene and Demography, Dr. J. A. Thompson, chief of the Department of Public Health of New South Wales, set forth his views on this subject, basing them on a careful study of the plague epidemic in Sydney, among civilized people and under circumstances in which particulars concerning the infection of the individuals attacked could be learned with accuracy. He found that the fundamental question as to the share taken by the sick in diffusing the infection remained unsolved. In the first epidemic of 303 cases, he had a complete history of 289 patients, 276 of whom occupied dwellings widely separated from each other; in 266 of the latter only a single case occurred, although the greater majority had lain at home three days before being reported. Ten houses harbored multiple cases, which he divided into several groups; in the first, the time of onset of the successive cases was almost simultaneous; in the second, twenty-two or more days elapsed after cleansing before a second patient was taken ill; in the third group, the time relations of the successive cases were such that communication from primary patients was possible. In the first two groups, exposure of both of the infected members of each household to the same conditions appears to have been the determining factor; the cases in the third group really also admit this explanation when we consider that in 266 households no secondary cases occurred. Two other observations which bear on the question of communication from the sick were made. Total want of connection between successive cases in the same house was most often established with certainty, and the interval between them was often much longer than the incubation period. All this evidence, according to Thompson, warrants the formulation of the general rule that the epidemic spread of plague occurs independently of communication of the infection from the sick, and it spreads by means which are external to man."

Not being able to establish proof of contagion between man and man, the eminent medical "authority" turns to the question of communication between rat and man. Here, again, he is forced to admit failure, as follows:

"The facts that the handling of dead plague rats by man was rarely followed by infection, that it was often possible to exclude contact or even close neighborhood between rat and man infected with plague, that plague rats were found in forty dwellings, in only four of which plague in man was found, go to show that the disease is probably not directly communicated from rat to man."

Next, the rat-flea theory was advanced. Probably we shall, ere long, be told that it is not the rat-fleas, but a certain parasite on the flea, that does the damage.

Always looking for something external—some more or less mysterious and malevolent "bug." Always ignoring the plain and simple cause of disease—filth—inner and outer filth. Wasting hundreds of thousands of dollars in killing rats, instead of concentrating effort on removing the filth, on which the rats feed. They are, like other vermin, beneficent scavengers. If we hadn't flies, and rats, and buzzards, and other scavengers, the human race would be wiped out of existence by one big epidemic. Remove their food, and these vermin will, of themselves, disappear. To remove them, and leave the filth on which they feed, is to provide an increased menace to the public health—or rather to the health of those whose blood is impure, for others are safe.

Here are a few more instances, showing that bubonic plague, like other virulent and dreaded diseases, is not "contagious:"

In Egypt, in 1835, when 9000 persons died, out of ten French physicians engaged only one died. Nor was this immunity secured by any precautions. More than a hundred postmortem examinations were made, without precautions, and without harm. The clothes and effects of those who had died were sold, without communicating the disease. The hospital at Cairo, where 3000 plague patients had been treated, was used for other patients, without even changing the bed coverings, immediately after the epidemic, and without harm. The exportation of cotton from government warehouses was never interrupted, though the plague was most destructive in those very buildings. It was loaded on English and other ships, without any precautions whatever. Twenty-five ships, eight of which were infected with plague, conveyed cotton, amounting to 31,000 bales, to England. Nevertheless, no case of plague is known to have occurred among the quarantine officers, or others engaged in unloading these ships, or disinfecting their cargoes in quarantine.

Yet, the political doctors, in San Francisco, are actually threatening to forbid the landing of Admiral Evans's men, because of a few sporadic cases of plague, unless the people kill a sufficient number of rats to suit these high-salaried officials.

One of the main causes of sickness and death during

Many have fasted, with benefit, for over forty days. There is no expenditure of vitality while a person is thus quietly sleeping. To administer food every three hours is absurd. Same old crazy idea, that a sick person must "take something." Let such a patient rest quietly in bed, with the window open.

Two years ago this same woman slept forty days, being conscious but unable to speak. When she awoke she was as well as when she first slept; her pulse was normal, her mind clear, and she had lost little weight.

Teaching by Mail.

THEY offer, nowadays, to teach you almost anything by correspondence—for a consideration. Languages, painting, music, authorship, locomotive engineering—any old thing, in fact.

Some things may be taught by correspondence, others may not. Among the latter is osteopathy. You may learn, by mail, how to practice on a human being, but not how to heal him—or rather, how to aid nature to heal him. That requires practice—years of practice.

Horses That Like Mineral Water.

WILLIAM PLOTTS of Whittier tells how horses watered from a well 2700 feet in depth, the water issuing at a temperature of 124 degrees, and containing about 55 grains of carbonate of soda and 70 grains of common salt to the gallon, not only became accustomed to it, but seem now to prefer it to any other water.

Yes. Animals and men can become accustomed to many unnatural and unwholesome things. Horses and dogs have been taught to drink beer, and monkeys to chew tobacco. As Mr. Plots writes:

"I think that the healthy animal body can take care of (or dispose of) an enormous amount of 'poisons,' as in the case of the lifelong consumer of alcoholic stimulants."

Undoubtedly. It does not, however, by any means follow that such poisons are harmless.

• • •

The Salt Superstition.

A CORRESPONDENT sends the editor a clipping from an unidentified exchange, on the value of salt to man. It is shown to be an important constituent of the blood.

The editor has said about all he has to say on this subject during the past few months, and cannot be constantly repeating. Chlorine and sodium are, it is true, found in the blood. They are also found in natural foods, especially fruits, leaves and vegetables. It is only when taken in this organic form that they can be utilized in the system. In the inorganic form chloride of sodium—common table salt—is a poison—a slow poison it is true, but still a poison. It cannot be utilized by the body, and nature therefore proceeds to cast it forth, at great cost to the kidneys, which have the main job of bouncing the unwelcome intruder.

Get your chlorine and your sodium from vegetables and fruits and salad plants, and leave chloride of sodium strictly alone. Of course you will miss it at first, if you have been largely addicted to its use, just as you will miss whisky, or coffee, or any other abnormal stimulant, or condiment, but you will soon find great benefit from the change.

"Vell! Vot of it?" There are hundreds of men, working in the Chicago stockyards for a few dollars a week who can beat this record—if not in variety at least in quantity—and who make no boast about it.

Causes, Prevention and Treatment of La Grippe.

FOLLOWING is from an article by Dr. Latson in his excellent hygienic magazine, "Health Culture:"

"As to the causes of influenza, most of the text-books tell us that it is a certain evil-minded and unconscionable microbe rejoicing in the name of 'the bacillus of Pfeiffer.' As to exactly how this ravening microbe gets in its deadly work, however, even the omniscient textbooks do not pretend to explain. The fact of the matter is that influenza, like all other disorders, is the result of the combination of a number of factors. Chief among these is the accumulation of undigested and putrifying food in the stomach and intestines, and the presence in the blood of the poisons produced by such putrifaction.

"The particular 'symptom complex' which we call 'grip' is produced by these accumulations, and in addition by certain other influences, such as debility, fear, nervous irritability and by adverse outside influences, such as cold, damp, or changeable weather, exposure, overwork and so on.

"That digestive disturbance is a constant factor in the causation of influenza cannot be doubted; for it is proven by the nausea, vomiting, headache, constipation, diarrhoea, and many other symptoms. It is no less clear to the thoughtful doctor that cold, damp air, by depressing the vital force and interfering with the eliminating functions of the skin and lungs, must be an influential factor in the production of this disorder. That age, overwork, lack of fresh air and exercise, anxiety and other injurious influences must conduce to this, as to all other diseases—that, of course, is obvious.

Care of the Body.

"Knowing the causes of influenza, we can get a clear idea of how to prevent 'getting the grip.' First of all, don't attempt to dodge the microbe. In the first place, you can't do it; for the microbe is like the poor, he is always with us. In order to get away from the microbe you will have to get off the earth. In the second place, the microbe won't hurt you. Generally he is your friend and co-laborer in your effort to get rid of your poisons; for by a wonderful provision of nature the microbe destroys just those poisons which are trying to destroy you. And then to call him a 'disease germ!' Why, it's adding insult to injury.

"To guard against influenza, first of all keep yourself clean—clean inside as well as outside. . . . Eat only plain, simple food and not more than two meals daily. Get much fresh air and exercise. Take a warm scrub bath every day and a sweat bath once or twice a week. See that the alimentary tube is kept clear, if necessary using the colon flushing. Maintain an attitude of spirit "void of offense toward God and man." Don't worry, don't nag, don't overwork. In a word, to avoid 'grip' live a wholesome life."

"Sex Vibration."

FOLLOWING is from "The Life" (Kansas City:)

"Some misguided souls have gone to seed about sex vibration, claiming that spiritual development and bodily immortality may be acquired by it.

"Now, while it is true that the sex distinction means more than mere physical generation and reproduction, there is no spiritual elevation to be acquired through sex vibration.

"What does the term mean, anyhow? It means accord and supplementation of generating waves in sense and matter emanating from two persons or things of opposite genders. It may be pleasant to the feelings, but it is not soul purifying, mind strengthening or body building. In fact, its main office is sacrificial for reproduction of species. There is certainly no regenerative power or tendency in it. The truth of the matter is that the advocates of the sex-vibration practices are impelled only by sensual desire and are attempting to justify their indulgence by claiming a higher office for it than belongs to it."

Lemons Versus Vinegar.

VINEGAR is a bad thing to take into your stomach, even when it is "pure" vinegar made from wine or cider, which little of the vinegar on the market today is. Even then vinegar is a doubly fermented, or rotted substance, making it much more injurious than the wine or cider from which it is made. Should you examine a sample of vinegar through a good microscope you might be discouraged from using it frequently. The free use of vinegar by foolish girls, for the purpose of reducing their weight, has been known to produce consumption.

There is no excuse for using vinegar, so long as California lemons are plentiful, and reasonable in price.

True Paternalism.

FOLLOWING on the demand for a National Bureau of Health is advanced a proposition by Mrs. E. B. Harbert, a noted woman who has come to live in California, for a "Child and Home Department," in the President's Cabinet.

This looks to the editor like too much paternalism. You can't make people moral, or wise, or healthy, by act of Congress. There are certain things a government may properly do along hygienic lines—such as the enforcement of pure-food laws—but beyond that the main thing is to educate—educate—educate, through the press and the platforms. Every family should be a "Child and Home Department." That is true paternalism.

Sound Sense on the Sex Subject.

A SECOND edition has been published of "Sexual Instinct," a book by Dr. James Foster Scott, reviewed here a few months ago. One chapter, on "Perversions," has been omitted from the second edition, and two chapters added, entitled "Pro Bono Publico" and "Marital and Extra-Marital Intercourse." In his preface, the author says:

"The world really is not clean and respectable. A group of men, taken randomly, usually drifts to topics of conversation which are not nice and unprintable, and false sexual philosophy is freely discussed. It is, then, simply nonsense to maintain that any man will take offense at a plain discussion of subjects which are so much spoken about; especially when nothing is presented which can by any possibility encourage any one to passion and immoral conduct."

Here are sensible remarks, in regard to gluttony and lust. The author might have added that lust is the natural consequence of gluttony. As the editor has said, no man who habitually overeats, or who eats largely of overstimulating foods, can be normal sexually:

"To him who has carnally worshiped his belly and his genital functions, by gluttony and lust and sensuous excitations, perverting them into organs of pleasure, nothing eventually is left except what ethics regards as refuse and dross and throws on the dump heap. The deadened sensibilities and exhausted organs of such a man need stronger and stronger irritants, until he is recognized as a pervert, or as a dull and jaded roue. Desire of a normal kind has now ceased prematurely, and all efforts to get enjoyment in the old way are futile. The man may have extracted a lot of wisdom from the avenae fatuae, or wild oats, but with it he has also got the rakish list of a derelict. He is not fit to marry your robust daughter, for you are quite sure that he cannot have a beautiful soul in such a sickly and pampered body.

The additional chapter on marital and extra-marital intercourse contains sensible remarks on the subject of marriage, from a sexual point of view. In regard to continency, the author writes:

"Athletes are enjoined to be continent; the racing stallion is not permitted to be weakened by frequent copulation; and the bull moose, the elephant, and undomesticated animals generally, have their short season of mating, and then are continent for long periods. Among them there is no undue bullying of the females, whose favors are few and purposeful."

Yes, but remember that these animals—except "civilized" hogs—eat only when hungry, and then only enough to furnish heat, and force, and repair waste, so that there is no surplus to create unnatural sexual cravings.

As the editor said, in reviewing the first edition, this is a valuable book. Published by E. B. Treat & Co., 241 West Twenty-third street, New York. Price $2.

Eclectic School of Medicine.

THE so-called "Eclectic" school of medicine was founded in 1830, by Dr. Wooster Beach. It is a drugging system, but is somewhat in advance of the ordinary allopathic, hit or miss practice, of therapeutical guesswork. The eclectics use a line of "specific" drugs, put up by Lloyd Brothers, of Cincinnati, and prepared by a process invented by Prof. John Uri Lloyd. Prof. Lloyd is the author of a unique and interesting book, entitled "Etidorhpa"—Aphrodite, spelled backward. The system should be a good thing, in a financial way, for the Cincinnati firm.

The eclectics reject the use of mercury, antimony, etc., and also profess to avoid the "abuse" of emetics, cathartics, diaphoretics and diuretics, to which extent, as the editor has said, they are in advance of the allopathic school, although they are still far from the exit of the medical jungle, so far as the use of drugs is concerned. From a hygienic point of view, they may be classed about half-way between the allopaths and the homeopaths, the last-named being included by the editor among practitioners of suggestive therapeutics.

Like all other newcomers in the medical field, the eclectics at first met with bitter opposition from the "regulars." Like the homeopaths and the osteopaths, in course of time, they became too strong to be ignored, and now have representation on the State Medical Board of California.

Until the fire, the headquarters of the California eclectics was in San Francisco. Since then, they have moved to Los Angeles. The California Eclectic Medical College is located at 846 Lyon street, Los Angeles. The dean is J. A. Munk, M.D.

A truly "eclectic" school of healing would be a school in which every rational method of aiding nature to throw off disease is adopted. Such, for instance, as diet, hydropathy, osteopathy, massage, deep breathing and exercises of various kinds. The nearest approach, at present, to this school, is that known as the "Naturopathic." It is founded largely on the Kneipp system, which goes too far in drenching people with cold water, and also attaches unwarranted and undue importance to the value of various herb-tea preparations.

"Christian Science" Method of Treating Disease.

THE recent move of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, to a palatial $100,000 mansion, near Boston, presented to her by one of her ardent followers, and the announcement that another suit will be brought for financial accounting by her adopted son, have directed renewed attention to this remarkable woman and her teachings. It is only as they deal with the Care of the Body that this department is interested in them. Here are extracts in regard to the Christian Science treatment of disease, from Mrs. Eddy's book "Science and Health" (1906.)

"Tumors, ulcers, tubercles, inflammation, pain, deformed joints, are all dream shadows, dark images of mortal thought, which will flee before the light. (Page 418.)

"Have no fears that matter can ache, swell and be inflamed . . . Your body would suffer no more from tension or wounds than would the trunk of a tree which you gash, were it not for mortal mind. (Page 393.)

"A child can have worms if you say so—or any other malady, timorously holden in the beliefs, relative to his body, of those about him. (Page 413.)

"The treatment of insanity is especially interesting. . . . The arguments to be used in curing insanity are the same as in other diseases; namely, the impossibility that matter, brain, can control or derange the mind, can suffer or cause suffering. (Page 414.)

"If a crisis occurs in your treatment, you must treat the patient less for the disease and more for the mental fermentation. (Page 421.)

"When the unthinking lobster loses his claw, it grows again. If Science of Life were understood, it would be found that the senses of Mind are never lost, and that matter has no sensation. Then the human limb would be replaced as readily as the lobster's claw." (Page 489.)

In the early days of Christian Science, when Mrs. Eddy was giving personal lectures to students, she established a class in obstetrics. The first class was a large one, and each member paid $100 tuition. Of the six lectures which Mrs. Eddy gave them, five were devoted exclusively to a discussion of what she calls "malicious animal magnetism" and the sixth she merely instructed them to deny premature birth, abnormal presentation, hemorrhage, etc. Following is from the installment of the "History of Christian Science," by Georgine Milmine, in the February number of McClure's Magazine.

"This course in obstetrics, as taken down by a student of that first class from Mrs. Eddy's dictation, is now in possession of McClure's Magazine. It covers less than a page of letter paper, and consists of the 'denials'

His Excellency, Gov. Gillett, Sacramento, Cal.

Sir: I write to ask you to sign the bill le Naturopathy. My son Alfred, when seven yea became paralyzed and had no control whatever ov lower limbs. Dr. Wellborn, of the Deaconess tal, and two prominent physicians and surgeons Angeles, told myself and wife that our boy woul cripple for life, because the spinal cord was away. Dr. Schroeder, our minister, insisted Carl Schultz of the Naturopathic Institute of C be called. The other doctors objected, becau Schultz is not a regular. But, they proposed to boy for six months in a plaster cast, insisting never could be well. I called Dr. Schultz, he my boy and smiled, telling me that my boy woul in less than a week. In three days my boy coul across the room and in six weeks he was as ever. He could run like a deer and is still well, nearly two years.

Six months months ago my little girl Esther, six years old, was taken sick with hip disease. her legs was considerably shorter than the othe Schultz took her into his institute and in one we came home nearly well, going to the doctor only a week for two weeks. She walks now as well

I have seen many cases in the Naturopathic which had been given up by other physicians, Schultz cured many of them in a short time. I for the sake of humanity, these people should be legalized, so that the regulars cannot persecu and their school should stand in the front rank profession.

cannot manage both you and Firefly? If you expect me to drive again, you should keep your promise—wait until after the horse show." Dudley shrugged significantly.

"An English girl would be less hard on a man. You should not blame me for being crazy about you."

Then they both attended to points of driving. The man instructed, while the girl applied his slightest suggestion. With every turn round the track she gained confidence. When she neared the horseless drag, Betty and Agnes applauded her improvement. The first lesson marked success, both for Miss Ainsworth and the horse show.

"You will shortly have the tandem in perfect form," the Englishman encouraged. "Two weeks should give me confidence," she answered. "If I manage the tandem, I shall hardly dread a span?"

"You need fear at nothing," he declared.

The perfect day, gradually cooling with a lowering sun, brought memorable pleasure. Dudley's satisfaction in sitting by her side, her eagerness to do his teaching credit, developed the best of mutual feeling. It seemed as if Firefly had actually kicked away the serious restraints of their friendship. The Englishman no longer felt inclined to speculate upon the future. The present was altogether satisfying.

"Oh!" cried Sydney, "they do go gloriously! I did not dream I could guide them so easily."

"It is pretty sport when the horses run well," Dudley exulted. "Major is the best wheeler imaginable; see how he does all the pulling?"

"Firefly seems to have nothing to do but to show off," said Ainsworth. She laughed gaily, then sobered for a lesson in successful turning.

"A little too short," her teacher criticized. "Keep the tugs as firm as possible. Remember that you have both space and time." He took the reins, explaining patiently the art of curving. His smooth, fine work delighted her.

"Will you not let me try again?" she asked. Her improvement was marked. Dudley once more fancied Sydney's success in England. Again they skirted the track, avowedly friendly. In the open, the Englishman shone at his best. Beneath the sky, flecked with cloudlets that called up deepening shadows for the purpling range, the girl forgot the heavy,, un-American side to the man's character. That today, could be no mean average, of life lived out with him, she overlooked. Pleasure crossed an ideal which she would not own; brought her a real excuse for worldly risk.

"Is it not good to be living! Living—in such a land?" she cried, unguardedly.

"Yes," he answered, "any land is fit when you are in it."

She quelled his ardor with a warning frown, slowing the tandem. Suddenly like a chill to warmer feeling, she again remembered John Knight; saw him as he had looked that same morning. All at once this other man's assumption was distasteful.

"My sister and Miss Duff have been patient; and we have forgotten the ones at the Country Club," she said decidedly. Dudley felt her declining interest; knew that she wished for an end to the driving lesson. He motioned to Edwards.

The groom's body acted like a spring; then Firefly came to a stop. Smiling, but inwardly perturbed, Miss Ainsworth stepped from the cart, to join her friends on the horseless drag.

ON THE HIGHER PLANE.

Phyllis, although perhaps my muse
  Is no adept at graceful soaring,
And her attempts to voice my views
  May be occasionally boring,
I have determined now to rise
And to achieve before your eyes
  The kind of fame which there is no ignoring.

I mean to soar in regions where
  Triumphs or failures make or mar man,
And I will taste of joys more rare
  Than any earthy motor-car man.
The cost shall not be counted, dear;
I never was considered "near,"
  Although perhaps I am not yet a Farman.

Yes, like a bolt from out the blue,
  All perfect in its aviation,
My aeroplane that swoops to you
  Shall raise me in your estimation.
And when that happy day shall be,
And I shall murmur "Fly with me!"
  I trust you won't refuse the invitation!

CAPTAIN PUTS ON HIS RED NECKTIE.

No matter how small the vessel nor how impecunious may be the skipper, there is always a "boiled" shirt and a clean collar laid carefully away to be worn when the craft enters port. At sea the captain may be very rough in his attire, but the approach to land finds him combing his hair and cropping his whiskers, if he has any, and the collar is donned, also a red necktie, which usually is flamboyant red.

Even the poorest men who bring vessels to Boston to secure loads of lumber for South American ports dress as neatly as possible when the customs boarding officer is expected to come alongside to inspect the ship's papers.

And the mates slick up too when their floating home is nearing port so that the "old man," as the captain is familiarly termed behind his back, may not carry off all the honors of the occasion.—[Boston Herald.

Diagnosis from the Eye.

DR. O. L. MULOT, of Brooklyn, advocates a more systematic and careful teaching of physical diagnosis, to fit the student better for the work of active practice. The author lays out a scheme of charts, representing the proper order of examination of the chest, and the changes to be found from the normal in various states of health.

Far better take up that simple and reliable method of diagnosis from the eye, to which reference has been made, from time to time, in these columns. Dr. Lane's book, "The Diagnosis From the Eye," with a chart, may be obtained in Los Angeles from Otto Carqué, 560 South Hope street. Price $1. Every intelligent physician and "layman" should have this book. Mr. Carqué also has some copies of Reinhold's "Facial Diagnosis," reviewed here several years ago. Same price.

Hypnotism or Foolishness.

THE question of hypnotism is just now being revived. Doctors and parsons are taking up the subject.

Watching the crowds of women flocking to a bargain sale recently, the editor of this department wondered whether this is not, perhaps, a species of hypnotism—this offering of goods at immense reductions from the regular price. The twentieth-century merchant in the United States who should advertise that he is selling goods at a fair profit over the cost of manufacturing and handling would be regarded as mildly insane. What he must do, if he wishes to attract a crowd, is to "sacrifice" the goods, below the cost of manufacture. "Our $21 grade marked down to $9.95," or something of that kind.

Does it never occur to these eager purchasers that it is evidently impossible for every merchant in the country to sell goods, all the year round, at or below cost—that, if this were done, the commercial fabric of the country would soon come to a full stop? This is a foolish practice that has been, to some extent, forced upon the mercantile community, by undue competition, and it seems to be growing worse all the time.

By the way, we would not infer that this weakness is confined to the female sex. Note, for instance, the frequent sales of gold bricks, and other get-rich-quick schemes, which are even more raw than the sale of goods below the cost of manufacture.

Especially is this true in regard to the rotten race-track game. It is most astonishing, and would be ludicrous, were it not so serious and so sad, to note, at almost every street corner, anxious-eyed young men, poring over daily circulars, put out by touts and cappers, who swarm around a race track like flies over a rotten carcass. The idea that any outsider may, for any length of time, make money in bucking against a game that keeps a score of bookmakers well supplied with wine, women and diamonds, is certainly a form of hypnotism. Drinking, prostitution and gambling are three great evils, but of these three the last named does by far the greatest amount of harm. There is hope for the confirmed drunkard, there is hope for a gross libertine, but there is no hope for a man who has become thoroughly infected with the gambling virus, which is but a form of the "accursed thirst for gold." One race track near a city may do more harm than all the saloons and brothels that city contains.

"Herself."

"SEX-MATING" is the title of a sixteen-page booklet. The title page tells us that it is by Mae Lawson "Herself." This is an idiotic style, affected by some of the "New Thought" cranks, who want to be peculiar. The publisher of a Chicago magazine calls himself—and is addressed by his worshipers as—"So-and-So Himself." How would it be for the editor of the Care of the Body Department to start out parading himself as "Harry Brook, Somebody Else?"

Apart from this tomfoolery, Mae gives good advice in this booklet, in regard to the desirability of circulating sound teaching on the all-important question of sex and sexual relations, a subject that has been altogether too much left to the morbid and the lewd.

Worms.

A WOMAN correspondent writes as follows:

"Do you consider that worms in a child of 8 years are caused from eating too many sweet things? My little boy has them the greater part of the time. I give him Dr. ——'s worm vermifuge, which is a relief for a few days. He eats sugar on cereal and maple syrup on hot cakes, but otherwise has very little sugar, and candy not oftener than once or twice a month, and then very little.

"If I put him on a strict diet, which I am afraid will be hard for a boy of his years, do you think I can get at the cause of the trouble?"

Cane sugar, especially when mixed with sloppy starch, is very likely to give rise to intestinal worms. These patent remedies may or may not temporarily remove the worms, but what is the good of that, so long as you keep on with the conditions that cause them? Besides, they are sometimes harmful. A safe method to remove round worms is to use worm seed—chenopodium. To a child two or three years old, give a dram of the seed, in syrup or honey, night and morning, for three or four days in succession. After the last dose, give a dessertspoonful of olive oil, to which you may add a little honey, or sugar, to make it palatable.

Then go to work and feed the child a diet that will not encourage worms. Abolish cane sugar altogether. This is no hardship, if you give the child plenty of fresh sweet and sub-acid fruits, to which you may add dried fruits. As the editor has said, children have a natural craving for fruit, and if they are given plenty of that from youth, they will not crave harmful cane sugar and preparations made from it.

Grated carrots and radishes are good to take, when there are worms. Also eat freely of fresh fruits, salads and raw vegetables, which abound in organic salts.

Usually, children who have worms are constipated. Feed them the entire grain—wheat, rye, corn, oats or barley—in various forms. This will not only aid mechanically, in overcoming the constipation, but will also nourish the nervous system, and aid it to throw off disease.

The Equitable Savings Ba

Strictly a Savings Institution

During the late financial stringency, we believe that none of the depositors of this bank suffered serious inconvenience, as every necessity, as far as known, was from the beginning, amply and promptly cared for.

Checks were paid on "Special Ordinary" accounts at all times without interruption.

By January 1st, conditions had so far improved that all restrictions on the withdrawal of money were removed.

Since that date all classes of deposits have been paid on demand without requiring notice of withdrawal.
